DOGS SAID TO PAY $55,000 WEEKLY TO MRS. HYLAND

Brother and Sisters of Race Track Promoter Assert Widow Is Concealing Assets of Estate.

SEEK HER REMOVAL AS ADMINISTRATOR

Assert She Is Paying U. S. Inheritance Taxes on $213,500 and Inventoried Property at $64,000.

Mrs. Martin J. Hyland, widow of the promoter of greyhound racing tracks throughout the country, is receiving dividends of $30,000 a week from the prosperous Madison Kennel Club, near Collinsville, and $25,000 from the Hawthorne Kennel Club, near Chicago, it is alleged in a motion filed in Probate Court at Clayton yesterday by a brother and two sisters of Hyland.

The plaintiffs, John J. Hyland, Mrs. Catherine McClurkin and Mrs. Mary Martin, assert their brother "Marty," a former huckster and commission merchant, built up an estate of more than $200,000, and that his widow is concealing assets to defraud them of their rightful share of the estate.

Paying Taxes on $213,000.

Although the widow, administering Hyland's estate, inventoried it at only $64,000, she is paying Federal inheritance taxes on a basis of $212,500, it is alleged in the motion. Mrs. Hyland in her inventory omitted mention of dog track holdings because she declared Hyland had transferred them to her prior to his death. The plaintiff's reply that any such transfer was fictitious and intended to defraud.

Besides the Madison and Hawthorne stock, Mrs. Hyland holds stock in several other dog tracks, which are not operating and have no income at present.

Hyland's brother and sisters request the Court to compel the widow to list the dog track stock in her inventory, to punish her for contempt if she fails, and to remove her from charge of the estate in favor of a "suitable person."

Fear Assets Will Be Wasted.

Assets of the estate, the petition continues, "will be wasted in that a large portion of the receipts of the Madison Kennel Club are being diverted and used for illegal purposes, thus endangering the value of the stock." Joseph McAtee, attorney for the plaintiffs, later said the form of betting at the track was illegal after 7 p. m., under the Illinois law.

Mrs. Hyland resides at 7112 Westmoreland drive, University City. She testified she was married to Hyland 18 years ago and is now 37 years old.

No date has been set for a hearing on the motion.

Statement by Mrs. Hyland.

In a statement to a Post-Dispatch reporter, Mrs. Hyland said: "I am not familiar with the details of the case. Everything is in the hands of my attorney, A. E. L. Gardner. However, when they (the brother and sisters) say that the Hyland income from the Madison Kennel Club is $30,000 a week, they don't know what they are talking about. They don't seem to know how much money that is.

"As for the Hawthorne track, it isn't even running. They can't understand why Mart shouldn't be worth millions in view of his extreme generosity to them while he lived. He practically supported all three of them. The whole thing is laughable."

Gardner is out of town.

$127,500 IN LOST SECURITIES MYSTERIOUSLY BACK BY MAIL

Certificates That Disappeared From Envelope on Way From Bank Recovered.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 27.—Securities valued at $127,500 which were reported lost Thursday by Abbott, Hoppin & Co., brokers, reappeared today just as mysteriously as they disappeared.

The stock, consisting of 19 100-share certificates of the American Superpower Co., was received in today's mail by the brokerage firm. The envelope contained no other inclosure.

How the securities were lost has not been explained. They disappeared from an envelope a messenger was carrying from a bank to the brokerage office. When he arrived, the envelope contained only one certificate instead of the 20 which were supposed to have been placed in the package.

BYRD PARTY KEPT IN BY HIGH WIND AT 67 BELOW ZERO

Only Prospect Is Gray Ice Barrier Whipped by the Driving Snow.

LITTLE AMERICA, Antarctica, July 28.—(By wireless)—This is the worst day we have had so far as temperature and wind are concerned. Severe cold on a calm day can be withstood for a long time, but when the wind blows and the thermometer stays down, which is unusual, one cannot stay out doors for any length of time without danger of getting badly frost-bitten.

The thermometer registers nearly 67 below zero today and the wind has been above 20 miles an hour most of the day, strong enough to whip up the drift snow. The wind is also from the Southwest, which is a cold quarter.

Usually when the wind blows hard, the temperature rises; but there are exceptions to this rule and today is one of the exceptions.

It is fairly clear; and when the light was strongest during the day, it illuminated a grim landscape. To the south, the sky was gray and obscured and clouds hung low in the northeast; the barrier was a dull and forbidding gray with snow whipping along the surface. But in the north the sky was a thin green color and on the horizon was a meagre smudge of red light.

1100 EMPLOYES OF FACTORY SHARE $1,500,000 BEQUEST

Receive at Least $1000 Each From Estate of A. S. Cochran, Carpet Manufacturer.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 27.—Approximately $1,500,000 was distributed today to employes and officers of the Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Co., Yonkers. None of the 1100 recipients of this gift, the bequest of Alexander Smith Cochran, owner of the carpet company, received less than $1000 and some of the officers obtained $10,000 or more.

All the employes of the company, the total of which is 7500, who had been there 20 years or more were beneficiaries of the sportsman and philanthropist, who died June 20 at Lake Saranac.

Mr. Cochran was best known to the public as a yachtsman and art collector. He built the Vanitie in 1914 to defend the America's Cup for which Sir Thomas Lipton was challenging, but the war broke out and the race was not held until 1919. At that time the Vanitie, in a series of trials was eliminated by the Resolute.

In making the bequest to the employes of the factory, Mr. Cochran probably was influenced by his mother, who stipulated in her will that every employe who had been with the company in her husband's time should receive $1000. At that time there were 450 beneficiaries.

BUS ROUTED BY SERVICE CARS

Street Car Company to Abandon Richmond Heights Line.

The one bus operated by the Public Service Co. on the accommodation line, which runs from St. Mary's Hospital through a newly developed section of Richmond Heights, will discontinue service tomorrow, vanquished by competing service cars. Director of Transportation Fink said the company had been compelled to spend $2.75 on the line for every dollar it received in fares.

The accommodation line connects with the City Limits street car line, but passengers transferring are required to pay an extra fare. The bus has been in operation for a year.

HOOVER SAYS U. S. CUT 61 PCT. OFF FRENCH WAR DEBT

Under Mellon - Berenger Agreement Virtually Only Loans Made After Armistice Are Collected.

WIPES OUT ADVANCES DURING CONFLICT

In Statement Calls Attention to Liberality of Settlement and to America's Sacrifice.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—President Hoover in expressing gratification today that France had ratified the Mellon-Berenger debt agreement, told the American people: "This settlement in effect wipes out the entire indebtedness of France which arose during the war period, and simply provides for the payment of advances to France after the Armistice. I think in fairness to the American people I am justified in mentioning the liberality of the settlement."

Mr. Hoover said he was "giving these facts so that in recognition of the honorable way in which France has acted to meet its obligations, it will understand that our people too feel that this settlement involves a measure of sacrifice on their part."

Secretary Mellon, who headed the commission which concluded the agreement, in a statement issued simultaneously with that of the President, said the French ratification would "prove a powerful factor in promoting general economic progress."

Hoover's Statement.

The President's statement follows:

"I am very much gratified to learn that France has ratified the agreement providing for the settlement of the debt of the French Republic to the United States, thus disposing, insofar as lies within her power, of one more of the great financial problems left over by the World War. With the high sense of honor and financial responsibility that have always characterized the actions of the French people, it was always certain that to the full extent of their ability they would meet their obligations. The definite settlement of the amounts to be paid in complete discharge of this debt is a cause for mutual satisfaction, removing as it does a question that has occasioned much controversy and debate.

"The settlement calls for payments of $35,000,000 in the fiscal year 1930, gradually rising over a period of 11 years until they reach a maximum of $125,000,000 annually.

Calls Settlement Liberal.

"I think in fairness to the American people I am justified in mentioning the liberality of the settlement. The total debt of the French republic to the United States as of June 15, 1925, was approximately $4,230,000,000. On a 5-per-cent basis—which is the rate of interest borne by the obligations given by the French Government—the present value of the payments provided for by the Mellon-Berenger agreement is $1,682,600,000, or, in other words, a reduction of approximately 61 per cent of the total indebtedness.

"This settlement in effect wipes out the entire indebtedness of France, which arose during the war period, and simply provides for the payment of advances to France after the armistice, which aggregate, including accrued interest, $1,655,000,000. While some of the after-armistice advances were made for the liquidation of obligations incurred in this country by the French Government during the war, considerable advances during the war period itself were for permanent improvements; for shipping; for the meeting of obligations to private creditors incurred prior to the entrance of the Unit-

16 MEN TO FORM $20,000,000 GRAIN MARKETING BODY

Committee Chosen at Suggestion of Federal Farm Board to Arrange for Organization.

IT WILL MEET IN CHICAGO AUG. 26

Co-operatives, Elevators and Farmer-Owned Sales Agencies to Be Shareholders in Corporation.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 27.—Under the guiding hand of the Federal Farm Board, the nucleus of what is expected to become a $20,000,000 grain marketing corporation was formed here today. The nucleus is a committee of 16 representative grain men, selected from among more than 50 who have attended the sessions of the Farm Board here during the last two days, at the board's invitation.

This committee will hold its first meeting in Chicago Aug. 26 and organize the Farmers' National Grain Corporation with an authorized capital stock of $10,000,000 which will be increased ultimately to $20,000,000 through stock dividends.

Stockholders in the new corporation will be co-operative marketing associations, elevator companies or farmer-owned sales agencies at central markets, on the basis of one share of stock for each member. Individual farmers also will be permitted to purchase one share of stock each. Par value of the shares will be $20.

Organization by the grain interests of the Farmers' National Grain Corporation will mark the first actual step taken by the newly created Farm Board to solve the farmers' marketing problems.

Other similar corporations are expected to be organized later to deal with other commodities.

Farm Board Pleased.

The plan for the new grain corporation was submtited to the grain men by the board as the most feasible means of stabilizing prices. Members of the board expressed themselves as gratified over the attitude of the grain men toward the suggestions, and over its ready adoption.

William Settle of Indianapolis, president of the Indiana Farm Bureau Federation, is chairman of the committee, representing the Central States wheat pools. Other members are George Duis, Grand Forks, N. D., representing the Northwest pools; Ernest Downie, Wichita, Kan., and John Manley, Enid, Ok., representing the Southwest pools; M. W. Thatcher, St. Paul, Minn., and H. G. Keeney, Omaha, Neb., representing the Farmers' Union Commission agencies; S. J. Cottington, Stanhope, Ia., representing the National Farmers' Elevator Grain Co.; L. E. Webb, Jetmore, Kan., representing the Farmers' Co-Operative Commission Co. of Hutchinson and Wichita, Kan.; E. M. McCollum, Indianapolis, Ind., representing Ohio, Indiana and Michigan Farmers' Elevator Associations; Lawrence Farlow, Bloomington, Ill., representing Illinois and Iowa Farmers' Elevator Associations; F. H. Sloan, Sioux Falls, S. D., and P. A. Lee, Grand Forks, N. D., representing Montana, North Dakota, Minnesota and South Dakota Farmers' Elevator Associations; S. H. Thompson, Chicago, representing the American Farm Bureau Federation; L. J. Tabor, Columbus, O., representing the Grange; C. E. Huff, Salina, Kan., representing the National Farmers' Union; and J. J. Knight, Kansas City, Mo., representing the Farmers' Equity Union.

Chairman Settle of the Committee was jubilant over the great step forward which he considers the projected organization of the marketing corporation to represent for agriculture. "This is the greatest day for agriculture that I can remember," he said.

What Corporation Proposes.

The operation of the new corporation is contemplated to provide central marketing facilities and sales services at all markets for the efficient distribution of grain; to conduct stabilization operations on the open market, when approved by the Federal Farm Board; to buy grain from member stockholders and sell for its own account; to lease, purchase or build necessary storage facilities; to lend money to existing farmer-owned co-operative elevator associations and pools for the purpose of extension of their physical facilities; to make loans to farmer-owned companies and pools for

FLYERS NEAR 16TH DAY, 107 HOURS OVER OLD MARK

ROBIN 10 DAYS AHEAD OF ONLY REMAINING COMPETITOR

Jackson and O'Brine, on 354th Hour, "As Good as They Were the First Day," Observers Say.

HOUSTON PLANE FORCED DOWN

St. Louisans Rock Ship as Expression of Joy at News but Send Message of Condolence.

St. Louis' record-breaking and record-building endurance flyers, Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine, and their monoplane, St. Louis Robin, absent from earth nearly 16 days, were declared last evening, by the pilots at Lambert-St. Louis Field who observed men and machine most closely, to be "as good as they were the first day."

At 1:17 a. m. today they had been 354 hours in the air, having taken off at 7:17 a. m., Saturday, July 13. They were 106 hours beyond the former record, established by Los Angeles flyers in the Angeleno, and passed by the St. Louis men last Tuesday afternoon. They are 9½ days ahead of their only remaining rivals, the flyers of the monoplane Minnesota, at Minneapolis. Their joint earnings in the flight had reached $12,580 or $6290 cash apiece, besides many commodity prizes, and added pay is piling up at $116 an hour, besides further lump sums which may be expected.

Twelve thousand persons, at the field at dusk, saw the refueling which put the St. Louis Robin "to bed" for the night. It was the sixty-sixth contact established with the Robin by Maj. C. Ray Wassall, who has had "Shorty" Chafee with him on every trip but one. Forty of the contacts have been for refueling.

Those staying late enough saw a green flare from the Robin at 11 p. m., signaling "All's well."

Night Parachute Jumps.

Night parachute jumps were made by Robert Grubb, former member of the British Army Balloon Corps, and Sergt. McMahon of the National Guard air unit.

Parachute jumping will be one of the sights for visitors at the field today. Other exhibition events planned are a dead stick landing, or gliding descent, to show the manner in which the endurance flyers probably will come down; a toy balloon chase by airplane pilots, who will try to break the little bags with their propellors; and a 10-mile race by George Lea Lambert and Sydnor Hall.

The St. Louis Robin keeps a height of 3500 or 4000 feet above the field. Arrangements have been made for signals from the plane, and the sounding of a siren at the field, in case of a forced landing. In case of a forced descent at night, flares will be set off, and all field lights will be turned on immediately.

A Good Word for the Dust.

Some sprinkling, at the field yesterday afternoon, allayed slightly the choking dust which annoys casual visitors and torments those required to remain long. Pilots pointed out, however, that the dust is due to the dry weather, and that the dry weather has been a big factor in the success of the endurance flight. Therefore, the pilots argued, the dust should be endured cheerfully, even welcomed.

About 55 gallons of gasoline were placed aboard the Robin in the evening refueling. The dinner taken up consisted of veal sandwiches, celery, corn on the cob, carrots, lettuce, ice cream and cake, the cake baked by Mrs. O'Brine.

When the Robin flew low at 5:40 p. m. and her flyers dropped the aluminum message tube containing their bulletin and sealed letters, the pilots listened intently to the motor, to see whether any effect of the day's heat on the engine or the oil supply could be discerned. Maj. Wassall said the motor sounded as well as ever. Later, after observing the flyers at the time of refueling, he pronounced them as "fit" as on the first day of their adventure.

One of the flyers' dips, on their

PARI-MUTUELS O K'D AT CHICAGO DOG TRACKS

Master in Chancery Recommends Permanent Injunction to Restrain Interference.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 27.—Greyhound racing and pari-mutuel betting at greyhound races were held to be legal today in a preliminary report filed by Circuit Court Master-in-Chancery Max Korshak. The Master, whose study of the matter followed the issuance of a temporary injunction to restrain police interference with the dog tracks, held "that the provisions of the 1927 pari-mutuel horse racing statute, insofar as they attempt to forbid dog racing, are discriminatory and violative of the constitutional guarantee of both the State and Federal Constitutions.

"Laws must be general in their application and they must not grant special or exclusive privileges or immunities to a particular class unless there is a fair and a reasonable basis for the classification. Courts will not sustain a statute which applies to some persons or cases and does not apply to all persons and cases not essentially different in kind."

The opposite view was taken yesterday by Judge George Fred Rush, who, holding dog races to be "questionable enterprises," dissolved the temporary injunction which had been issued by Judge Harry Fisher.

The Master's report recommends that a permanent injunction be issued.

The Hawthorne track is said to be sponsored by Al Capone, gang leader. Following a raid on the track Wednesday night, attorneys had several county officials and the Chief of Police cited for contempt in Judge Rush's court. Judge Rush dismissed the citation and dissolved the injunction, refusing to allow the Hawthorne attorneys to withdraw their petition for a contempt citation pending the Master's report. While the matter was before the court, the Hawthorne track was again raided.

Following announcement of Korshak's report, officials of the Fairview Kennel Club, which is said to be allied with the George "Bugs" Moran gang, said its track would be operated Monday night. E. J. O'Hare of St. Louis is president of the Hawthorne track.

KILLED IN $8000 HOLDUP

Buffalo Manufacturer Slain in Front of Plant.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 27.—Three robbers today shot and killed Fred Fechter, 51 years old, and escaped with $8000 in cash and checks intended for employes of a manufacturing plant.

Fechter had just stopped his car in front of his establishment when the robbers drew alongside him, opened fire, grabbed a bag containing the money and sped off toward Rochester.

Fish Caught by Electricity.

By the Associated Press.

MUENSTER, Westphalia, July 27.—There have been highly successful experiments in catching fish with electricity. Ponds comprising a surface area of two acres were charged by a wire ten centimeters below the surface. Up came some 250 pounds of carp and pike, stunned and easily netted.

LOS ANGELES SEEKS FEDERAL INQUIRY INTO PYLE RACE

Civic Leaders Act to "See Justice Done" for Participants Who Have Failed to Get Prizes.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 27.—A Federal investigation of C. C. Pyle's handling of the recent transcontinental foot race "in an effort to clear the name of Los Angeles" will be sought, A. Bozzani, a local business man, announced tonight.

Bozzani's announcement came simultaneously with a statement by Deputy Labor Commissioner C. Richardson to the effect that charges would be filed against Pyle unless the promoter settles claims against him involving the race. The official set a hearing for next Tuesday.

Bozzani said a committee of civic leaders had been formed to raise money to hire attorneys to "see justice done for the 15 racers to whom something like $60,000 in prizes is due."

ARMY TAKES THE RATTLES AWAY FROM ITS SOLDIERS

Gas Attack Alarm Sounds Too Much Like Machine-Gun Fire.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—The army has taken away the soldiers' rattles.

It has been found that these accessories used in wartime to warn against gas attacks sounded too much like the rat-a-tat of machine-gun fire. So today the War Department, on the recommendation of the chiefs of the infantry and chemical warfare service, eliminated them from the field equipment.

An electric horn will be employed hereafter for spreading alarms, notifying the soldiers to put on their gas masks.

RECORD CROWD AT AIR FIELD EXPECTED

Street Cars to Run Every 15 Minutes — Special Traffic Rules in Effect.

The largest crowd that has been at Lambert-St. Louis Field since the Pulitzer trophy race of 1923, if not the largest ever assembled there, is expected to go to the field today.

Street cars will leave Wellston loop at 15-minute intervals in the afternoon, charging a 15-cent fare each way. Busses will run at 20-minute intervals and will charge 25 cents each way.

Special traffic rules for motorists will be in effect from noon to midnight, according to an announcement of Sheriff Lill of St. Louis County.

Bridgeton road, which passes the flying field on the west side and leads from Natural Bridge road to Florissant road, will be a one-way thoroughfare open only to northbound traffic from Natural Bridge road to Anglum, which is across the Wabash tracks at the southwest corner of the field.

This regulation requires motorists to return to St. Louis by way of Florissant, and southbound motorists who go from St. Louis through Florissant to park their machines in Anglum, since the road will be open only to northbound traffic from the field to the tracks.

Deputies will be stationed at intervals to enforce the regulations and to keep traffic moving smoothly.

Tomorrow, if the St. Louis Robin remains up, and so long thereafter as its flight continues, the special street cars will run from Wellston.

MANY CASUALTIES REPORTED IN ECUADOR EARTHQUAKE

Relief Workers Rushed Into Mountain District Where 50 Fatalities Are Found.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, July 27.—Soldiers and Red Cross workers, food, medicines and other relief agencies today were rushed into the mountain district south of Quito where many persons were reported killed and injured in a severe earthquake on Friday. Owing to the isolation of the quake zone the exact number of dead is not known, but the fatalities are thought to be between 50 and 75.

The worst damage was done at Moyurgo. Other towns that suffered were LaTacunga, Cotopaxi, Tambillo, Ambato, Machuachi and Puyili.

PLANE BRINGS IN ALIENS

German Family Smuggled Across Border at Detroit.

DETROIT, Mich., July 27.—Smuggled across the Canadian border in an airplane, a German family of three was arrested at a commercial flying field here today. The arrest was made by a policeman, and the pilot of the plane escaped.

The craft was an old army plane and unlicensed. The aliens gave their names as Peter Kommer, 26; his wife, Magdalene, 28, and their infant daughter, Anna. They were held by immigration authorities.

RUSSO-CHINESE CONFERENCE AT BERLIN PROPOSED

Minister Wu at Washington Notifies U. S. of Projected Discussion of Differences.

MOSCOW, HOWEVER, DENIES REPORT

Communist Disorders in Shanghai Expected to Increase Aug. 1, Anniversary of Red Revolution.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Minister Chao-chu Wu of China informed Secretary Stimson today that the Chinese and soviet Governments were taking steps toward direct negotiations in Berlin for a settlement of the situation over the Chinese Eastern Railway.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, July 27. — The semiofficial newspaper Isvestia tonight says: "We have made inquiries at the Foreign Commissariat and establish the fact that no negotiations whatever have been carried on between the soviet embassy and the Chinese Legation in Berlin, and that the report from Shanghai is false."

Reports from Chita, Siberia, said that Chinese troops at Fudiadian, near Harbin, had mutinied and raided shops and homes. In spite of reassuring statements from the authorities, business houses in Harbin were said to be suspending operations.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 27.—Moscow dispatches today again report "atrocities" of Chinese in Manchuria against soviet citizens there and demonstrations throughout Soviet Russia seeking redress for "insults" to that nation.

Advices from China put an entirely different aspect on the situation in Manchuria, and emphasized the feeling of Chinese officials that the altercation growing out of seizure of the Chinese Eastern Railway would be settled peacefully.

There were only meager reports from either country, but those from China were taken as indicating a preliminary conference took place Wednesday between Chang Tso-hsiang, Governor of Kirin province, and B. N. Melnikov, Soviet Consul-General at Harbin.

Melnikov was said to have started for Moscow to report the events of the last seven weeks to his government. The Chinese are reported to be determined on peace and to have pleaded that the seizure of the Chinese Eastern was an unauthorized action of the road's president. Lu Yung-huan.

This explanation conflicted with earlier Chinese statements regarding the seizure.

Serious Disorders in Shanghai Laid to Communists.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, July 27.—Shanghai Communist demonstrations and disorders took place here last night and early today. Police feared these were just a prelude to greater disturbances Aug. 1, the anniversary of the Bolshevist revolution in Russia.

Both the native city and foreign settlements have been flooded with pamphlets declaring that Shanghai communists are planning demonstrations on that day. It was said attempts would be made to paralyze public utilities by strikes and similar methods.

The demonstrations began with a mass meeting of communists in front of the deserted soviet consulate in the heart of the international settlement. Police broke up the meeting.

A Chinese student struck a Japanese policeman on the head with a crowbar. As the policeman fell he shot and wounded his assailant. When the communists, mainly young students of both sexes, marched to a section of the settlement inhabited by White Russians police reserves drove them off.

Four hundred employes walked out of the Shanghai waterworks, because the company refused to re-employ three discharged workmen. The strike was heralded as the work of communists.

Governor Views Capital From Air.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 27.—Gov. Caulfield took another aerial trip today, flying over the capital city and Central Missouri in the Stanolind III, giant tri-motored Standard Oil airplane. John D. Caulfield, the Governor's son, accompanied the chief executive on the flight.

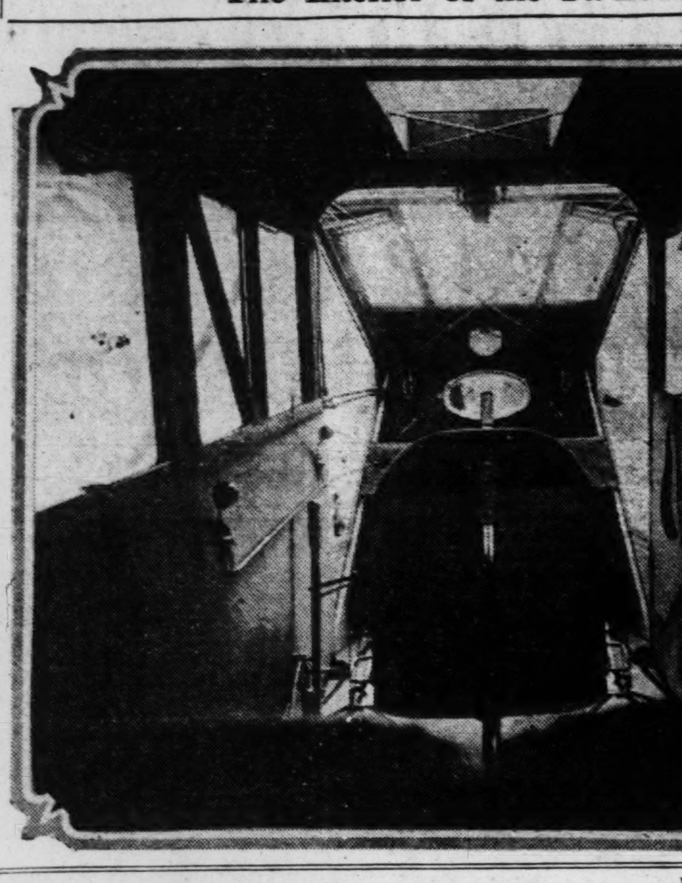
The Interior of the St. Louis Robin



How the Curtiss-Robin Plane Was Developed

First One Was Built Only a Year Ago and Present Model Came Out March 5—Designed for "Man in Street."

ONLY a few rods of dusty turf on the northeast border of Lambert-St. Louis flying field separate two airplane factories whose planes have soared across the skyline of fame and turned the eyes of the world toward St. Louis.

Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine fly hourly over the Curtiss-Robertson factory, where their ship was made, as they remain aloft longer than man has ever flown before. They fly, too, over a neighboring factory whose roof is marked with a huge RYAN, which stands for Lindbergh's trans-Atlantic plane in any language.

Specifications of Lindberg's ship became known to all the world after his epochal flight, but save in aviation circles the technical details of the St. Louis Robin are not generally known.

Even aviators have regarded the Curtiss Robin as a lusty infant, for it is only a little more than a year old and the present model, equipped with the Curtiss Challenger motor, did not appear until March 5. Incidentally, the endurance flyers are using the one hundred and fifty-eighth plane to be equipped with the new engine. No. 175 was produced yesterday. Orders for more than 20 planes have been received from all over the country since the St. Louis pilots began breaking records.

Colors Chosen to Appeal.

The bright orange of the fuselage of their plane and the gay yellow of its wings are not there to attract attention to the flight. They constitute the stock color scheme of the planes.

"We consulted the wishes of the men and women in the street when we designed the Curtiss-Robin," Maj. William B. Robertson, president of the Curtiss-Robertson, president of the Curtis-Robertson company, said yesterday, because we realized that it was up to us to sell ships to the general public.

"People don't want somber colors. Automobile manufacturers found that out long ago. We have profited by their experience, reflected also in our cabin type planes, Bendix brake equipment and non-shatterable glass. The brakes make it easy to slow up when taxiing across the field."

Curtiss engineers designed the plane, Maj. Robertson said, incorporating in so far as possible features calculated to appeal to the average man and woman. One hundred and twenty-five engineers, divided into specialized groups, planned the ship. Each group studied a different factor to be considered. Then the plans were brought together and revised until after the final blueprints were approved.

Lindbergh Flew First One.

The first Curtiss-Robin was made in Buffalo, N. Y., in January, 1928. And the first man to fly it, except for the test pilots at the Curtiss factory, was Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who got his first real job when Maj. Robertson hired him as an air mail pilot between St. Louis and Chicago in the spring of 1926.

"Lindbergh liked the ship," Maj. Robertson said, "and its design is based largely on aeronautical principles which his New-York to Paris flight proved to be sound."

As soon as the first ship was tested and found to be airworthy, the blueprints, jigs and dies were brought to St. Louis and a factory built at the municipal airport.

The war-time Curtiss OX-5, 90-horsepower motors were used exclusively until the appearance of the Challenger five months ago. They are now optional equipment.

The St. Louis Robin is substantially the same as its predecessors, except that it is powered with the 170-horsepower Challenger motor and is equipped with a duralumium propeller. It is a three-passenger, semicantilever monoplane, has a high speed of 120 miles an hour and a landing speed of 45 miles an hour. The static air-cooled radial motor weighs 450 pounds, while the gross weight of the plane is approximately 2100 pounds. It can carry a useful load of 700 pounds.

Up 4000 Feet in 10 Minutes.

The ship can climb 4000 feet in about 10 minutes. Its ceiling, or maximum altitude, is from 11,000 to 13,000 feet.

Total wing area is 265.3 square feet. The ailerons cover 22.3 square feet. The rudder has an area of 9.7 square feet.

The sister ship to the endurance plane sells for $7500 at St. Louis. A similar ship, equipped with the OX-5 motor and a wooden prode propeller sells for $4000. Orders totaling more than $150,000 have been received during the past three days as it became evident that Jackson and O'Brine were adding a new chapter to the history of the development of aviation.

The planes are constructed on a progressive assembly line, similar to that used in automobile plants. Raw material is delivered at a siding in the rear of the factory, sorted in a stock room, and started along the assembly line. More than 2000 pieces of material are used in addition to the motor. Metal wing ribs are stamped out with a 100-ton punch press, one of the few used in airplane manufacture in this country. While some of the work must yet be done by hand, modern machinery is bringing about mass production methods.

The fuselage, or body of the plane, is composed of metal tubing welded together in the metal shop while the wings are shaped in the wood and finish line. They are then covered with fabric and doped. Ten inspectors check each operation and the ship is again inspected when it reaches the final assembly line. Here the wing is joined to the fuselage and the motor placed in position. Here, too, the cabin is finished and all mechanical connections hooked up.

Federal Inspector.

Before the plane gets a final OK., it must receive the approval of Guy L. Faulkner, an inspector of the United States Department of Commerce. Faulkner is on constant duty at the plant. He gave the endurance plane a careful examination before she took the air, more than two weeks ago.

Each of the 425 men in the factory has taken a personal interest in the performance of the now famous plane, Maj. Robertson said. "They realize, as we all do, that their attention to each detail has made possible a plane staunch enough to perform as this ship is doing," he said, "and we all feel as though everybody connected with the organization are partners in the flight."

Learned to Fly During War.

Maj. Robertson and his brother, Frank, learned to fly during the war. After the war they bought an old "Canuck" and began to take people up at the old flying field in Forest Park. Later they assisted in the establishment of Lambert Field and continued to operate an aviation service.

As their business grew, the Robertsons hired a lanky young man by the name of Charles Augustus Lindbergh as chief pilot. He took the first plane over the St. Louis-Chicago air mail route when they obtained the contract a few months later.

Mrs. Frank W. Stearns Ill.

NEWTON, Mass., July 27. — Stricken with an acute attack of indigestion while shopping in Boston, Mrs. Frank W. Stearns, wife of former President Coolidge's most intimate friend, was a patient at Newton Hospital for a time today. She was allowed to go to her summer home at Littles Point, Swampscott, this afternoon.

Endurance Flight Sidelights

ALONG with the St. Louis Robin's, another endurance record may be established—one for continuous broadcasting by a radio station. Station KMOX has been on the air continuously since 6:30 a. m. Tuesday. Generators are changed daily, at 1 and 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. George Junkin, managing director of the station, believe that the record of continuous broadcasting for 100 hours, which was reached at 10:30 a. m. yesterday, exceeds any previous performance in radio history. It is intended to go on as long as the flyers do, and then to broadcast a talk to be made by Jackson and O'Brine over a national chain.

Forest O'Brine and his folks were not the first to spell their name in their peculiar fashion. Henri Printemps writes to remind Post-Dispatch readers that William Makepeace Thackeray had a hero of that name, and that spelling, for his poem, "The Batle of Limerick." "A chief of ancient line is William Smith O'Brine," Thackeray wrote, and at one point in his description of the fray, he said, "Immortal Smith O'Brine was ragin' like a line."

Four members of the Real Estate Exchange, who had Jackson as their pilot in a flight to Louisville for the realty men's convention in June, 1928, sent Jackson a note yesterday wishing him and his partner "at least 200 hours more in the air." They are James L. Barngrove, Joseph M. Ebeling, Joseph M. O'Reilly and Clarence C. Lang.

A large basket of flowers was sent to the endurance pilots yesterday by Louis H. Bopp, a Kirkwood undertaker and former Coroner. It was not practicable to deliver this gift aloft. The basket, of blue wicker, with a yellow bow, resembles the funeral style.

Whenever the flyers come down, among the many gifts waiting for them to claim will be two union tailored suits of clothes. Journeymen Tailors' Union, Local No. 280, of St. Louis at a special executive meeting yesterday, volunteered to do the job. "All Dale and Forest have to do is pick the goods and submit to the tapemeasure," announced Oscar Chorlinsky, local secretary, "the journeymen tailors will do the rest."

The refueling plane, after performing its task at an altitude of 3500 feet last evening, descended with such speed and directness as to startle the crowd. "I was in a hurry to get down," was Maj. Wassall's only explanation.

Ground observers estimate that the St. Louis Robin averages six circles an hour about Lambert-St. Louis Field. This would be 144 circuits a day, but this rate has not been continuous during the flight, as the flyers at first did not at all times keep so near the field as now.

A letter of congratulations from 1400 members of the North St. Louis Business Men's Association was sent aloft by Dr. Julius W. Bechtold, president of the association. "Aces of Endurance," is the title which the organization bestows on the flyers.

If they come down in time to get to Texas by Aug. 10, the Robin's flyers are invited to attend the dedication of a new $50,000 airport at Sweetwater, Tex. Sweetwater is a town of 15,000, but is air-minded, and is the terminus of an air line from St. Louis to the Southwest.

"Pirates of the Cruising Cafeteria," was the title bestowed upon Maj. C. Ray Wassal, pilot of the refueling and revictualing plane, in the address upon a letter received at the field.

"Pa" and "Ma" Jackson, in radio talks yesterday, predicted a long stay aloft for their son and his companion. "Ma" said she was glad the boys could have good food prepared by their wives. "Pa" spoke of the quality of the fuel and the efficiency of the re-fueling crew.

H. F. Deichman, who brought "Pa" and "Ma" Jackson here from Minnesota, is in the electric power business. He learned to fly about six years ago, and flew here with Red Jackson in May, in an Ox-5 Robin. After having a demonstration of the Challenger Robin he purchased one, and this was the ship in which he carried Jackson's parents to St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS MAGISTRATE'S SON HELD AS ROBBER

Girard Polito, 18, Said to Have Confessed 26 Holdups in Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES, July 27.—Girard Polito, 18-year-old son of Justice of the Peace Nicholas Polito of St. Louis, is held here for trial in Superior Court on charges of robbery, unable to furnish $5000 bond.

He has been identified by a filling station attendant as the youth who robbed him of $40. According to police, Polito has confessed to 25 other holdups.

Polito, formerly a messenger for the Chief of Police here, accepted voluntary banishment from Missouri for three pears, following his arrest for participation in six robberies in November, 1927. Because he was only 16 years old at the time, he was tried in Juvenile Court.

Scholarship to Nursing Graduate.

A scholarship worth $350 has been donated to the graduating class of Jewish Hospital by Albert Schields. It will be awarded by the School of Nursing board to a member of the class who has averaged 85 per cent for three years and has shown special ability in some line of nursing work.

Wassall and Jackson Make Refueling Job Look Easy

How Supply Ship and St. Louis Robin Appear to Observers in Another Plane as Gasoline is Transferred.

"Say, this match isn't very exciting," complained a disappointed cash customer as Tilden and Wilmer Allison stroked the ball across the net in the Davis Cup tryouts here last year. "You see more vim and effort in a kids' match. Those guys aren't working at all."

Similarly, does the delicate touch in the hands of "Red" Jackson, of the endurance crew, and Ray Wassall, pilot of the refueling ship, make of the evening refueling a dignified rite rather than a hair-raising bit of aerial acrobatics.

Four thousand, two hundred feet above the dust and heat of Lambert-St. Louis airport, the bustle and excitement of the field seems definitely left behind. The atmosphere is cool and in spots a bit hazy. The low sun glistens on the Missouri River and through the ising-glass windshield of the Missouri Pacific's Travel-Air biplane, from which the process is being observed.

One forgets that there are groundlings far below munching peanuts, craning necks, wiping foreheads, pointing and writing their initials with their fingers on dusty planes. The empty pop bottles are one with the breastplate of Cortez. The hangars are as doll houses.

A Skillful Maneuver.

It is a different and a privileged existence; quiet, for one does not notice the fluttering of the motor, and the other planes seem to be nosing along as smoothly as wild geese.

Out in front is the refueler, behind and about 200 feet higher the St. Louis Robin. Close on the right flies a single-motored Fokker transport plane carrying an ambitious photographer, too close, as will be seen. One hundred yards to the right of the Fokker, the Travel-Air.

With the abruptness of a martin attacking a hawk, the St. Louis Robin suddenly inclines in a moderate dive. As it eases under the refueler, a slide on top of the fuselage rolls back and Forest O'Brine, goggled and helmeted, appears. His arm goes up in salutation.

"Shorty" Chaffee, in similar position in the upper plane, tosses out the 40-foot hose and eases it slowly into the waiting hands of O'Brine, who inserts the rigid nozzle in the gas tank. The planes appear to be about 10 feet apart, the lower one half a length in the rear. Their speed is somewhat slower than that of the Travel-Air, whose indicator points to 90 miles an hour.

Photographer Causes Trouble.

Skillful handling keeps the space separating the Robin and the supply ship from varying greatly, a task that requires judgment as well as cleverness as the refueler, becoming lighter as it parts with its cargo of gasoline, tends to rise and the Robin, acquiring weight, tends to drop.

With an abruptness that startles with its potentialities for disaster, the two ships are suddenly blown apart as though struck by the tail end of a cyclone. The Robin shears to the right and falls, the supply plane veers to the left, the gasoline pouring from the loose end of the hose and glistening silver. Linton Roberts, pilot of the Travel-Air has pulled into a steep bank and cuttings his motor, points to the Fokker.

"The wash from his prop!", he shouts in explanation. That was it. The photographer in the Fokker wanted to "shoot" the refueling from a different angle and when the plane banked, its propeller wash and the air pushed sidewise by its wings broke the contact.

The planes meet again, traveling in the opposite direction. The Fokker has dropped out of the picture. Roberts keeps the Travel-Air at a respectable distance. Now the Robin is passing over the sun and its orange coat seems almost as brilliant as when it took off on its long flight, thanks to good housekeeping by Jackson and O'Brine.

The Job Is Completed.

Contact is again made. Half a minute later O'Brine waves an arm. Chaffee yanks the hose up and the refueler noses into a dive, the Robin pushing along at the same altitude.

Roberts banks the Travel-Air and descends in a long spiral. The motor cut, the wind whines through the rigging. One sees the tall buildings downtown, the Mississippi River, the Portland Cement plant in the north end, the junction of the Mississippi and Missouri, the Missouri at St. Charles. The moving finger of the altimeter quivers, 3500, 3000, 2500, descending. The air speed is now 125 miles an hour. Sticking the head out, one feels the mouth blown open incongrously; every hair of the head makes itself felt against the scalp.

Traffic on the field is heavy. Four planes are taking off, blowing scurrying clouds of dust, several are landing, others are taxiing across for the takeoff. Activity, racket, dust.

O'Brine and Jackson have the cool, upper reaches to themselves. No wonder they like it.

TAXICAB DRIVER SHOT BY MANAGER; HELD

Chauffeur's Companion Also Arrested After Altercation at 4959 Delmar.

John Fitzgerald, 5003 Enright avenue, chauffeur for the Red Top Taxicab Co., was shot in the right hand by Frank Murphy, manager, after a quarrel in the rear of the Red Top company's garage, 4959 Delmar boulevard, at 6 p. m. yesterday.

According to Murphy's story to the police, Fitzgerald and Thomas O'Toole, also a Red Top driver, of 4510 St. Louis avenue, had been drinking when they entered the garage from the alley. Fitzgerald, he said, drew a pistol and fired two shots at him.

Murphy ran to the office, he related, and, after obtaining his own pistol, chased Fitzgerald and fired at him as he was going in the back door of a nearby restaurant, hitting him in the hand.

Fitzgerald was treated at City Hospital and both he and O'Toole arrested. Fitzgerald was charged with carrying a concealed weapon, a pistol having been found in the waistband of his trousers, and O'Toole with disturbing the peace.

Murphy was released.

ST. LOUIS ROBIN IN ITS FIFTEENTH DAY IN THE AIR

late afternoon near-descent, took them within apparently 30 or 40 feet of the ground. The flyers waved to the crowd as their message tube shot downward. Their bulletin read:

> Shorty—Send up some gas, about 100 gallons, and some oil. Too bad about Houston. We still have one left. Old Minnesota, and those Swedes will sure stick. We need some matches, and don't forget flashlite (so spelled) and batteries. We need some more writing paper. Regards.

> RED and OBIE.

The sealed letters were addressed to Joe Zerr, at Louie's restaurant at the field, to the wife and mother of Jackson, and to the "redheaded bus driver of Universal Air Line," the "bus" being a Packard car run by the flying line.

Earlier messages from the flyers yesterday announced that "the engine is just getting nicely broken in." In a note addressed to the newspaper reporters on duty at the field, the flyers said:

> We are sorry we are keeping the people of St. Louis waiting so long, but we are trying to put the record where the people of St. Louis will be proud of it for some time—same as the "Spirit of St. Louis," which will always stand. May your patience be fully rewarded.

> JACKSON AND O'BRINE.

News was taken to them, by the refueling plane which went aloft soon after their breakfast hour, of the descent of their nearest rival, the Billion Dollar City, flying at the Houston (Tex.) airport, which made a forced landing there at 6:50 a. m. This left the Minnesota, fling at Minneapolis since Monday afternoon, as their only competitor.

The message chalked on the side of the refueling plane was:

"Houston is down after 233 hours."

News Is Celebrated.

Jackson and O'Brine celebrated the news by rocking the Robin joyously, and waving at their air visitors. Then they wrote a telegram to Glenn Loomis and Joe Glass, pilots of the Houston plane, and put it in their breakfast container. The message, which was rushed to Houston, was:

> Sure sorry, boys. We were just enjoying the little race. Sorry you were forced down. Better luck next time. JACKSON and O'BRINE.

Mrs. Sally Jackson said: "Those men deserve a lot of credit for what they did, but under the circumstances we cannot help being glad. It will be a relief to Mr. O'Brine and Red."

Maj. William B. Robertson, president of the Curtiss-Robertson Co., sponsors of the local flight, sent the following message to Loomis and Glass:

> You put up a darn good showing and I must congratulate you on your spirit and sportsmanship. Jackson and O'Brine join me in acclaiming you as their only rivals and are sorry motor trouble forced you down.

The most noticed visitors in yesterday's growing crowd were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jackson of Faribault, Minn., parents of "Red" Jackson. They arrived in an airplane piloted by H. F. Deichen of Minneapolis, an aviation enthusiast who is not a professional flyer.

Activities at the field, the crowd, the moving picture cameras and the bustle at flight headquarters, caused the Jacksons to declare it a lively and exciting place.

"At home," the elder Jackson said, "people have been trotting through the house and calling us up at all hours to ask about Red, but I didn't expect so much excitement here." The flyer's mother seemed anxious about the plane, and asked whether there was any danger of its "coming to pieces," because of its long time in the air. She was assured that the only failure to be feared was that of the motor, and that the flyer's safety was provided for in that case.

"It Depends on the Ship, Not the Men," Say Houston Flyers.

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., July 27.—Two Houston flyers, untired by nearly 10 days in the air, ended their attempt to better the refueling endurance flight record of the St. Louis Robin today when motor trouble forced down their monoplane "Billion Dollar City."

The motor went dead as the result of a connecting rod wrist pin working loose and damaging a cylinder. Black smoke belched from the plane when the motor stopped, leading observers on the ground to fear for a moment that the ship had caught fire. Joe Glass, who was at the controls, brought the plane down in a faltering glide to an easy landing.

The Billion Dollar City has been aloft 233 hours and 12 seconds, this time having been exceeded only by the St. Louis Robin and the California endurance plane Angeleno.

Glenn L. Loomis, co-pilot, was taking a nap when the motor stopped. The sudden silence brought him to his feet.

"For one frantic second I had a notion to go outside and try to start the motor by kicking the propellor," he said.

Loomis was nearly deaf when he stepped from the plane. Glass could hear fairly well but was bothered by a roaring in his ears from the constant hum of the motor for nearly 10 days.

"It's a cinch, this endurance flying," said Glass. "It all depends on the ship, not the men. I feel great. Wish we had another ship ready to take off right this minute. We got plenty of sleep and plenty to eat."

The flyers will make a third try for the record within two weeks. They plan to use their same Stinson-Detroiter monoplane, but a new motor will be installed. A few hours after being forced down today they were in conference with their backers, Harry Stewart, talking over plans for the third attempt.

INFANT KILLED, SEVEN INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

Josiah Miller, With Fractured Skull, Admits He Was Hurrying to Get Home With Baby.

"Traveling a little fast," he told police, "because we wanted to get home with the baby," Josiah Miller Jr., an electrician, 1448 North Nineteenth street, returning from the dog races at the Madison Kennel Club at 2:30 a. m. yesterday, in his automobile, ran into another machine at Seventh street and Franklin avenue, causing the death of his nine-months-old son, Josiah Jr., and injuring seven other persons.

Miller, who had bought the used automobile only the day before, suffered a skull fracture; his wife, Mrs. Iris Miller, was treated for acute shock, and her mother, Mrs. Cora Kincaid, 1415 North Nineteenth street, who was holding the child, is in grave condition at City Hospital with a skull fracture. Paul Kinzel, 3615 Blair avenue, was cut and bruised.

Miss Myrtle Gintz, 2207 Dickson street, driver of the other machine, suffered fractured ribs, and her companions, Miss Lorena Gross, of the Dickson street address, and Miss Kate Ryan, 2606 Cass avenue, were treated for shock and abrasions.

Boy Who Climbed on Truck and Fell Dies at Hospital.

A fractured skull, suffered on July 18 when he fell from a moving truck, caused the death of Thomas Forkan, 9 years old, one of the six children of Detective John Forkan, 5757 Wabada avenue, at Children's Hospital yesterday.

The accident occurred near 1958 Goodfellow avenue. According to the driver, Albert Rhem, chauffeur for the Kroger Grocery and Baking Co., the boy had climbed on the side of the truck without his knowledge.

Granite City Man, in Truck Struck by Train July 17, Dies.

George Wright, 45 years old, foundry worker of 2717 West Twenty-second street, Granite City, died yesterday at St. Elizabeth's Hospital from internal injuries suffered July 17, when a truck in which he was riding was struck by a Chicago & Alton freight train at the Twentieth street crossing.

HOOVER SAYS U. S. CUT 61 PCT. OFF FRENCH WAR DEBT

ed States into the war, and advances to the Bank of France for credit and exchange purposes.

"I am giving these facts so that in recognition of the honorable way in which France has acted to meet its obligations, it will understand that our people, too, feel that this settlement involves a measure of sacrifice on their part. There is every reason to hope and believe that such an agreement, based as it is on mutual sacrifice and consideration, cannot but promote a better understanding between these two great nations and serve further to cement a friendship that has lasted for a century and a half."

Compacts With Other Nations.

Secretary Mellon said that the agreement involved some sacrifice on the part of both France and the United States. The amount agreed upon, he said, was determined without taking into consideration any payments from reparations or other such outside sources and the remarkable financial and economic recovery of France "is convincing evidence that great hardship will not be imposed upon France in meeting the payments to America."

"Insofar as this country is concerned," Mellon continued, "it brings to a successful conclusion the task entrusted to the World War Foreign Debt Commission to negotiate settlements with the various nations for the debts incurred during and after the war. Agreements have been reached with Great Britain, Finland, Hungary, Lithuania, Poland, Belgium, Czecho-Slovakia, Latvia, Estonia, Italy, Jugo-Slavia, Rumania, Greece and France, bringing the total amount which has been funded to date to $11,554,851,000.

"All these nations are punctually meeting their engagements and the payments, as they are received, are being applied on the debt owed by this Government to its bondholders."

BRIAND AT WORK ORGANIZING NEW FRENCH CABINET

No Easy Task, but Veteran Hopes to Announce Names to President Doumergue Today.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 27.—Aristide Briand, Foreign Minister, for the twelfth time in his long career will be French Premier. This evening he accepted a mandate from President Doumergue to form a ministry in succession to the cabinet which resigned this morning after Premier Poincare had definitely decided he must retire because of the condition of his health. Briand was Foreign Minister in this cabinet. He has been in the cabinet since 1906.

Briand takes up an admittedly delicate task in attempting to consolidate the various opposing groups in Parliament into a ministry "as a patriotic duty" after the leaders of most of the parties had told Doumergue that he (Briand) was the man to do it.

Briand's official conversations with party leaders will begin tomorrow but the more intimate work of sounding out the opinions of the different groups already was under way tonight. While political observers think he will be successful, they admit the task is not an easy one.

Briand hopes to be able to hand the list of his new cabinet to President Doumergue tomorrow in order that he may begin work immediately on his declaration of Government policy.

Both houses of parliament recessed yesterday for the Summer, but as soon as the new Cabinet is formed will be convoked in special session to listen to the declaration of the Government and to award it the necessary vote of confidence to enable it to carry on at the Hague and at the Geneva League Assembly in the fall. It is expected that the special session will last only two or three days and Parliament will again recess until October or November.

Briand's Acceptance Hailed as Favorable to Naval Parley.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Acceptance by Aristide Briand of the commission to form a new French Cabinet was hailed in official circles tonight as likely to furnish an impetus toward negotiations for an international naval reduction parley.

A firm supporter of te League of Nations, Briand is expected to indorse any efforts toward naval reduction which are made by the naval Powers in co-operation with the work of the League of Nations Preparatory Commission. Since the present plans, so far as is known here, contemplate complete co-operation with the preparatory commission, Briand would be expected to give more support to future naval efforts than if the question was being settled outside the machinery of the league.

Secretary Stimson today instructed the American Embassy in Paris to express to former Premier Poincare his "very deep personal appreciation of the magnificent effort" which Poincare made in the debate on the ratification of the Mellon-Berenger debt agreement.

"Foist" for First Attains Scholarly Respectability

Society of Professors at Columbia U. Also Gives Academic Gladhand to "New Yoick" —Dialect Atlas Being Prepared.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 27.—A badge of scholarly respectability was given today to the pronunciation of first as "foist" or of New York as "New Yoick."

This educational change of heart was contained in an announcement from the American Council of Learned Societies at Columbia University of plans for making a dialect atlas of the United States. In the announcement, Prof. Hans Kurath of Ohio State University was quoted as saying:

"Movements of population have tremendous importance in the shaping and spread of dialect. The New York "oi" to which the East Side may claim 'foist' rights, has been carried to all parts of the city, to Long Island, to New Jersey and up the Hudson by business men and working men, and commuters have imported it into Connecticut towns along the sound.

"This one-time vulgar pronunciation is fast becoming respectable with the rise of the 'oi' speakers to commercial, political and cultural importance. Not a few professors at Columbia University are using it in a somewhat milder form, and former Gov. Alfred E. Smith is not the only man of prominence to give it social standing."

Kurath credited the mid-Westerner's sounding of all his R's in part to the persistence of the burr in Scotch speech. He traced it back to Scotch-Irish from Scotland and Northern England who in their new American homes continued all their R's. He credited the Irish also with helping to fix the R habit in the Midwest.

Ten years is to be devoted to compiling the dialect atlas. It aims to embrace ultimately the English dialects in all North America, and the foreign language colonies such as Pennsylvania Dutch, Canadian and Louisiana French, Spanish in the Southwest and Scandinavian in Minnesota and the Dakotas. The announcement forecasts for the book "many important uses in American education." A conference on the subject is announced for Yale University on Aug. 2 and 3.

SERGT. YORK STOPS HERE ON WAY TO ATLANTIC COAST

Sergt. Alvin C. York, "the outstanding individual hero of the World War," and his wife were in St. Louis last night, "hunting for a cool place." They arrived from Fort Leavenworth via Kansas City on a bus, and after resting at the Statler Hotel, left this morning by bus for the Atlantic Coast.

The six-foot "conscientious objector," who captured 26 Germans in the battle of the Argonne, is now field director for the Red Cross at Fort Leavenworth, handling Government claims for ex-service men in Federal institutions.

THREE, ACCUSED OF PINCHING WOMAN, ESCAPE AFTER CHASE

Pursued by Four at Broadway and Rutger; Three Shots Fired by Watchman.

The busy shopping district of Broadway and Rutger street was enlivened about 10 o'clock last night by a chase in which three young men were pursued by an irate husband, a motorist, a private watchman and a policeman. Three shots were fired by the watchman, but none took effect.

The disturbance started when Fred Marey, 4052 South Broadway, ran after the youths, one of whom, he said, had pinched his wife. The three young men attempted to force John Schrier, 3222 North Twenty-third street, from his automobile, to hasten their departure, but he resisted and took up the chase with Marey, Anthony Schupp, a private watchman, also joined in.

As the group passed 709 Marion street, the home of Patrolman Frank Hunt, he ran out and attempted to stop them, but was struck in the face. The youths eluded their pursuers. Hunt's injury was treated at City Hospital.

Mayor for 58 Years Re-elected.

By the Associated Press.

BERSAILLIN, France, July 27. The Marquis A. de Frossard, Mayor of this town for 58 years, has been re-elected for a six-year term. His ancestors ruled here in feudal days. The town has 225 inhabitants.

INTOXICATED COW LEADS RAIDERS TO STILLS IN STABLE

Bossie Staggered by Drink From Brook — Alcohol in Water Traced.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., July 27.—A bibulous milch cow, stumbling in uncertain surprise from the brink of a brook, in Broadview Heights, caused Mayor Floyd C. Harris and a raiding party to visit a nearby barn last night, resulting in the discovery of two stills and 50 gallons of whisky. The owner had fled, but his fires were still burning.

Harris said a dairyman told him he saw his milch cow stagger after taking a drink and investigated. To his amazement the cow's breath smelled of alcohol. He traced the odor to the water and thence upstream to the barn. His report to Harris caused the raid.

Ends Life After Family Quarrel.

George Mayer, 43 years old, a laborer, was found dead last night on a porch at the rear of his home, 3939A Morganford road. A bottle which had contained poison was found nearby. His widow said he had quarreled with her yesterday afternoon. She found the body when she returned home after visiting a store.

ANITA WHITNEY JAILED IN RED DEMONSTRATION

Arrested With Nine Others for Pro-Soviet Parade in San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 27. —Miss Anita Whitney, noted radical, and nine other persons were arrested today after a demonstration before the Chinese Consulate here. Police said 50 members of the communist party were the demonstrators.

Banners denouncing China for seeking "with imperialist help," to "force Soviet Russia into war" were seized.

Miss Whitney, who is 62 years old, was arrested in 1919 and convicted of being a member of "a criminal syndicalism organization."

She made a seven-year fight against the constitutionality of the California criminal syndicalism law and lost. She was saved from serving a term of from one to 14 years in San Quentin prison only because, in 1927, Gov. C. C. Young pardoned her.

Because of her prominence as a clubwoman, lecturer and author, the case attracted nation-wide attention.

The 10 arrested today were charged with a felony and misdemeanor. The purported felony was a violation of the California penal code which forbids use of a red flag or other propaganda "of a seditious nature." The misdemeanor was alleged violation of the statute against disturbing the peace. Bail was fixed at $1000 on the felony charge and at $20 on the misdemeanor count.

"You should be ashamed of yourself," a Department of Justice agent said to Miss Whitney in the city prison. "You should be ashamed of yourself," retorted Miss Whitney, "you are a fine example of an American citizen, disturbing us in violation of our constitutional rights."

Late today Miss Whitney was released on bail. The other nine remained in jail.

DIES AFTER TAKING POISON

Mrs. Paula Koch Was Despondent Over Unemployment.

Mrs. Paula Koch, 55 years old, of 4317 Cherry Lane, died at City Hospital last night, two hours after taking poison. She was found on the back porch of the home of her son, Robert, at 3825 Texas avenue, by a neighbor. Robert Koch is out of town on a vacation.

Delmar Koch, with whom Mrs. Koch lived, said his mother had been despondent over her inability to find employment.

ST. LOUISANS OFF TODAY TO ATTEND AIR MAIL HEARING

W. B. Weisenburger to Present, in Washington, City's Petition for Direct Line to New York.

RADIO ADDRESS BY LON SANDERS

City's Location, Climate and Its Part in Commerce Pointed Out by Speaker Over KMOX.

The ground for St. Louis' demand for direct air mail line to New York City was presented in one-two-three order by Lon Sanders of the Chamber of Commerce in an address broadcast last night from station KMOX.

Many St. Louisans will depart today to appear at a hearing on the proposed route by the Interdepartmental Committee on Airways Thursday at Washington. Former Congressman Cleveland A. Newton will direct the presentation of testimony and Walter B. Weisenburger, president of the Chamber of Commerce, will present the case for St. Louis.

Oklahoma City, Ok., will be represented by Stanley Draper, its Chamber of Commerce secretary, and Tulsa by William Holden, executive vice president of its chamber. Technical data on the aeronautical aspects of the proposed line will be presented by Charles H. Hopkins of the Oklahoma State Chamber of Commerce.

Calls St. Louis Gateway.

"The prime object of air transportation is speed," said Sanders in the radio address. "Take any map and draw the most direct line from Washington to Los Angeles and you find it passes through St. Louis, the hub; or draw a line from New York to Los Angeles and it will pass through Pittsburg, Columbus, Dayton, St. Louis, Oklahoma and Texas. Every record breaking transcontinental flight between the East and West has been made through the gateway St. Louis; the army model airway follows the path from New York through St. Louis. That's one advantage, the saving in time.

"Next, let us consider climate. The same line on your map will show the direct route to be several hundred miles south of the present line. For winter flying this will remove the climatic obstacles of cold, fogs and ice, which caused so much delay during the past winter.

"The railroads have recognized St. Louis as the center of the United States with railroads radiating in every direction. Over 62 per cent of the executive headquarters of the Southwestern railways are located in St. Louis, and we stand as the second largest terminal point in the United States. The 19 trunk lines converging in St. Louis operate over 49 per cent of the railways in the United States. No other city in the United States has so many railroads, reaching so many producing and consuming points with so great a population within its zone of service.

"Now, consider resources and developments; St. Louis is situated in the center of the Mississippi basin, wherein reside 54 per cent of the total population of the United States and 66 per cent of our rural population; and in which are produced 70 per cent of our agricultural products, 64 per cent of our exportable products, and 52 per cent of our manufactured products. One-twentieth of all the soft coal in the world is located within 100 miles of St. Louis.

Cites Shoe Manufacturing.

"The extensive industries in St. Louis are well known but as an example allow me to remind you that enough shoes are made annually by St. Louis factories to supply two pairs for every adult resident of the United States. These St. Louis companies operate branch factories or tanneries in 63 cities scattered throughout the United States. St. Louis probably leads all the American cities in the volume of diversified production.

"St. Louis is the great central banking city of the Southwest and with proper air transportation its importance as a central finance city will continue to grow with greater rapidity in the future. This supremacy, however, is being jeopardized by lack of adequate air mail service, and the delays through the existing service are costing the banking and financial institutions more than a million dollars a year. Missouri is the only state having two Federal Reserve Banks. Within the States of Missouri, Oklahoma, and Texas, statistics show seven and one-half per cent of the wealth of the United States.

"The new air line advocted by St. Louis would prove economical and profitable to the Post Office Department. Should you draw a path 100 miles wide following the proposed route, you will find 40 per cent of the population of the United States contained within that area. The proposed air route would be on a line reaching 95 per cent of the oil producers of this country.

"Highways point to the shortest routes; by referring to a map showing the highways of this nation, you will find that the great flow of automobiles and busses from East to West through this country pass through St. Louis. St. Louis can properly be designated as having its location upon the main street of America. This central location in highway transportation is another evidence of our position as the hub of America.

Subsidy for Air Mail.

"St. Louis is the only city to ever provide a subsidy for the air mail, and you will recall $30,000 was furnished for that purpose by our banks. When a new air route was first suggested, an official in Washington made the unusual statement that 500 pounds of air mail a day would be necessary for such a route. The St. Louis Chamber of Commerce made a survey which revealed that St. Louis business houses alone would offer 468 pounds of air mail a day. St. Louis always pays its way, but we want to ride on a through train.

"The evidence is conclusive that a direct line through the heart of America and the trend of development would pass directly through St. Louis. In presenting these startling facts showing its location, its financial and commercial importance, St. Louis is also presenting a similar failure to provide air transportation to the important cities of Oklahoma and Texas. St. Louis being the gateway to the Southwest, it becomes our pleasant duty to co-operate in also presenting the case of our Southwestern cities.

"With the central location of St. Louis, with its resources, industries and future importance, we find the main airway of this country passes several hundred miles north and reaches us only through a branch air line. With such an air mail service in many cases slower than the time furnished by the railroads, St. Louis is suffering from an inadequate air service without justification.

"It is surprising that the volume of air mail has maintained its present standing, because we have had no encouragement to develop even a small percentage of the possible air mail from St. Louis and its surrounding territories."

ST. LOUIS TEACHER 30 YEARS DIES AT COLORADO SPRINGS

Miss Adelina McCarty Had Gone West in Hope of Regaining Health.

Miss Adelina McCarty, a teacher in St. Louis public schools for more than 30 years, died of a complication of diseases Friday at Colorado Springs. She was about 55 years old.

Miss McCarty was kindergarten director at Scruggs School. Three months ago she obtained leave of absence to visit the western resort hoping to regain her health.

The body will be returned to St. Louis tonight. Funeral services will be at the St. Louis Cathedral. Miss McCarty is survived by three brothers, P. B. ad J. D. McCarty, of Los Angeles, and F. P. McCarty, of Rockford, Ill. Two nieces, Miss Sadie Caffrey and Mrs. May Madelaine, 3915 Flad avenue, also survive.

GIRLS SMOKE; DEAN IS OUSTED

Policy at Asheville (N. C.) City College Held Too "Liberal."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., July 27.—Dean Henry Dexter Learned today was ousted by the Asheville Board of Education from Asheville City College for his "liberal" leanings.

The specific allegation against the dean was that he permitted girl students as well as boys to smoke in the halls of the school. The board voted, five to two, not to reappoint Learned. Prof. Drvid Wilson of Hampden College, Va., was chosen as his successor.

MURDER SUSPECT'S WIFE HELD

Chicago police informed Chief of Detectives Kaiser by telegraph yesterday that they had arrested Mrs. Irene Reed, 30 years old, wife of Earl Reed, an ex-convict, who is sought as the slayer of Patrolman William M. McCormack in a cigar store holdup at 3908 South Broadway on June 25.

Kaiser said he would attempt to have Mrs. Reed brought to St. Louis for questioning about her husband's affairs. A reward of $1000 has been offered for his arrest.

16 MEN TO FORM $20,000,000 GRAIN MARKETING BODY

financing the commodities of their farmer members.

The plan outlined by the farm board contemplates the setting up by the corporation of two marketing divisions, one to handle wheat on both national and international markets, and the other to handle coarse grains. It is expected that all farmer-owned co-operative sales agencies which care to affiliate with the corporation will become part of the company's central marketing system.

It is also proposed that the company shall make loans to pools or other elevator co-operatives at a rate of interest not greater than the average commercial rate, and in no case at a margin of more than 2 per cent above the rate at which the company is able to obtain loans from the Federal Farm Board.

Dividends on the corporation's stock, the plan provides, shall not exceed 8 per cent a year, additional surpluses, if any, to be distributed to stockholders as patronage dividends; and no dividends to be paid, except in stock of the company, until the paid up stock reaches a total of $20,000,000.

Stockholders will not be liable for the debts of the corporation beyond the amount of their stock holdings.

Says Consumer Won't Suffer.

The session, today of the farm board with the representation of grain marketing interests were secret as was yesterday's meeting.

Carl Williams of Oklahoma City, official spokesman for the board said the operation of the proposed marketing association would not increase the price of grain to the consumers.

"What the farm board wants is a merger of all grain marketing co-operative bodies for the common good of agriculture," Williams said.

"The board cannot help the individual farmer, but it can enable farmers banded together in groups to help themselves. Even farmers who are not members of co-operative organizations will derive benefit from the operation of the board through the stabilization of prices. Statistics show that 2,000,000 out of approximately 6,000,000 farmers in the United States are members of co-operative associations."

Brookhart Barred From Sessions of Farm Board.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—On his return to Washington from Chicago today, Senator Brookhart (Rep.) Iowa, reserved judgment on the action of the Farm Board in excluding him from its executive session there yesterday but indicated he might confer with the board members before they are confirmed by the Senate.

Brookhart said he would offer the export debenture plan for farm relief as an amendment to the tariff bill, but in a form which would put the debentures in the hands of the farm board. The debentures, he added, would more than furnish the $20,000,000 the board wants to raise for an export corporation.

U. S. EXPERTS BEGIN DRAFTING OF 1931 BUDGET

Start Month's Work in Analyzing Estimates of Governmental Departments and Agencies.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 27. — The task of formulating the estimates of the Government's $4,000,000,000 budget for the next year—the 1931 fiscal year—already has begun.

Congress will not be called upon to consider the problem until December, but experts of the Budget Bureau are at work on the estimates.

The budget experts are analysing the preliminary estimates submitted by the governmental departments and agencies. For the entire next month they will scrutinize every figure and fund.

The Budget Bureau will return to the governmental departments and agencies on Sept. 15 the so-called regular estimates—that is, its revised figures of the preliminary estimates—and the department heads will be called upon to reallocate the funds.

Another careful study of the figures, however, will have to be made by the experts in an endeavor to reduce governmental expenditures and prevent wasteful use of funds. Also, the heads of the departments and bureau chiefs will be called before the budget directors to give their views on the estimates.

With this final scrutiny, the task of the budget experts will be completed and their figures will be given to President Hoover, who will submit them to Congress with his recommendations.

As departmental expenditures have been increasing in recent years—almost at the annual rate of $100,000,000—the budget experts face a difficult task in keeping the 1931 budget total below the $4,000,000,000 mark desired by President Hoover. Last year's budget figures aggregated $3,800,000,000, but new activities of the Government voted by Congress in recent years have added large expenditures.

Chief among these are the farm relief and Government building programs, the naval cruiser and military aircraft building programs, the Mississippi flood control and boulder dam projects, the increases in postal deficits and the undertakings entrusted to the law enforcement and other commissions.

EGYPT SEEKING CONCESSIONS IN BRITISH TREATY

Greater Measure of Freedom and of Self Government Is Object of New Pact.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 27.—Conversations between the British and Egyptian governments, it is reliably learned, are proceeding with a view to effecting a new treaty which would give a greater measure of freedom and self-government to Egypt.

This information today confirmed Egyptian newspaper reports, but it was pointed out that a published version of the draft treaty was not complete and was not fully accurate.

The Cairo newspaper El Mokattam yesterday said it had learned the British Government "views sympathetically a new draft treaty with Egypt."

Among points which this treaty is said to embody are: Abolition of foreign capitulations; the relinquishment by Great Britain of her claim for the protection of minorities and the transfer of British forces to the Suez Canal zone.

Egyptian affairs have come to the front lately through the resignation of Lord Lloyd, former high commissioner. Lord Lloyd's friends have vigorously criticised the Labor Government contending that the resignation was forced.

Foreign Secretary Henderson has declared that it was simply a case of Lord Lloyd's being unwilling to see eye-to-eye with the Government on a more liberal policy in Egypt.

W. H. NIEDERLUECKE JR. CLEARED OF CHICAGO HOLDUP

St. Louisan Then Turned Over to U. S. Authorities to Answer Stolen Car Charge.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 27.—William H. Niederluecke Jr. of St. Louis, known here as William Norton, was acquitted today of participation in a $27,000 holdup at the Olson & Ebann jewelry store here last winter.

At the conclusion of the trial, Niederluecke was turned over to Federal authorities for transfer to St. Louis, where it is understood he is wanted in an automobile theft case.

Niederluecke was arrested in a hotel room here in January at the request of Chicago authorities who telegraphed that they wanted a man "who limps, and sometimes carries a cane, and who has a brother, Gus, driving a bus in St. Louis."

In order to remove technicalities, Federal Judge Faris dismissed a charge of transporting a stolen automobile pending against Niederluecke, reserving the United States Attorney's right to reinstate the case in the event Niederluecke was acquitted in Chicago. Niederluecke is a son of William H. Niederluecke, formerly vice president of the Jefferson Bank.

NO HELP FOR CORNING, MO., THREATENED BY RIVER

CORNING, Mo., July 27.—A feeling of helplessness settled over this little town today when M. A. Rundle, farmer and fruit dealer received a telegram from Senator Harry B. Hawes, stating there was small hope the War Department could act to save the town from threatened destruction by the Missouri River.

Rundle wired Senator Hawes yesterday requesting that he appeal for aid from United States Army engineers in holding back the river which is eating its way toward the homes of this village at a rate of varying from five to 20 feet a day.

Senator Hawes' telegram said he had referred the town's problem to the War Department, but was informed, since the situation did not involve any question touching on river navigation, it was doubtful if aid would be forthcoming. The telegram said the matter had been referred to the district engineer's office at Kansas City.

COUNSEL FOR SNOOK STUDY REMUS' DEFENSE

Slayer of Ohio U. Woman Student Expected to Plead Insanity.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., July 27.—The defense used by George Remus, former Cincinnati bootlegger, who escaped punishment for killing his wife may be followed by James H. Snook, dismissed Ohio State University veterinarian, who has confessed the murder of Theora Hix, a 24-year-old student.

Remus, who shot his wife, Imogene, to death, was acquitted at Cincinnati after convincing the jury he was temporarily insane. He was confined to the State Hospital for the Criminal Insane at Lima several months, then was declared sane and set free by the Appellate Court.

Snook's defense, his attorney indicated plainly in three days of examination of prospective jurors, will be temporary insanity, induced by the use of narcotics alleged to have been given him secretly by Miss Hix.

Attorneys for Snook obtained the Remus sanity trial records today and spent the week-end adjournment of court in studying them. John F. Seidel and E. O. Ricketts, the attorneys, however, would not admit they intended to use these records further than to show that insufficient time was granted to have alienists examine Snook before his trial. They asked for a 60-day period for examination, but failed to get it. Remus was under observation for six months.

The fourth day of examination of-veniremen will begin at the opening of court Monday with three women and eight men seated tentatively in the jury box. An extra venire of 50 has been summoned.

The defense attorneys have seemingly set out to obtain as nearly as possible a jury of men. They have dismissed five women from the tentative panel through peremptory challenges.

Seeking to Develop 300-Mile-an-Hour Plane

Naval Lieut. Williams Testing Machine He Hopes Will Represent U. S. in Schneider Cup Race Sept 6.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—America's hopes to win the Schneider seaplane racing trophy from Great Britain are pinned on a small powerful monoplane which has been completed at the Philadelphia Naval Aircraft Factory and is being tested by Lieut. A. J. Williams of the Navy. Williams won the Pulitzer trophy race at St. Louis in 1923.

Details of the plane's construction are guarded. These are known, however, to depart from previous American racing plane practice, in that the craft is of monoplane instead of biplane design. It is powered with the Packard 24-cylinder X engine, which is understood to have undergone radical changes at the hands of experts at the naval factory. The engine develops more than 1000 horsepower.

The little seaplane is undergoing taxiing tests on the Delaware River at Philadelphia and later may be taken to Annapolis for speed tests, it is said to be capable of a speed of more than 300 miles an hour.

If the tests come up to expectations the plan will be taken to England by Lieut. Williams for the Schneider races at Cowes, Sept. 6. The last Schneider race in 1927, was won for Great Britain by Flight Lieut. S. N. Webster at Venice, who piloted his super-marine racer over the 350 kilometer course at a rate of 281.685 miles an hour. The United States had no entry.

Provision for the entry of Williams' plane in the Schneider race was made by the National Aeronautic Association last January.

When the army and navy decided in 1926 to cease building high speed racing planes, Lieut. Williams set about to build his own. His effort to get a plane into the 1927 Schneider race failed, but he did not let that discourage him. He went for backing to wealthy citizens, to manufacturers for materials, and to naval officers for co-operation. The Mercury Flying Corporation, with Williams at its head, was formed to build the plane, and construction was started in the naval aircraft factory.

PRINTER LOSES HIS MEMORY

Police are trying to find out what happened to Russell Krug, 21 years old, a printer, 2923 Keokuk street, who suffered abrasions on the head, a cut lip and loss of memory, some time between 5:30 and 6:15 p. m. Friday.

Attention of police was called o the case at 9 o'clock Friday night by his wife, Mrs. Bessie Krug, and his brother, Orville. Mrs. Krug said her husband returned from work at 5 p. m., and half an hour later went away in his automobile. Returning at 6:15 o'clock he seemed dazed, Mrs. Krug said, and asked her what was the matter with him. She took him to a physician.

RELEASE OF MOONEY AND BILLINGS URGED

Union Labor Meeting and Parade in Protest Against Their Imprisonment.

As long as Mooney and Billings are in jail, no laboring man is safe from "the frame," Robert T. McCoy, editor of the International Molders' Union Journal, said last night before a meeting attended by about 50 representatives of local labor unions, in Unity Hall, Grand and Page boulevards.

The meeting, sponsored by Local No. 59 of the Molders' Union, was preceded by an afternoon parade, in which there were 50 vehicles. Both parade and meeting were intended to register protest against the continued imprisonments in San Quentin prison of Thomas J. Mooney and Warren K. Billings, union organizers convicted of complicity in the preparedness day bomb explosion which killed 10 persons in San Francisco in 1916.

Recent investigation has shown the men were convicted on perjured testimony, and Judge F. A. Griffin, who originally sentenced them, is now working for their release. Gov. Young of California is reviewing evidence in the case and numerous petitions for their release.

"I say to you that as long as Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings, innocent men, are kept in jail, then none of us here in the hall can be safe," said McCoy. "No laboring man can be certain he will not be 'framed.' Those men were sent to prison and narrowly escaped the noose on perjured testimony and through the machinations of Fickert, a crooked prosecuting attorney."

Martin Dillmon, chairman of the education committee for the State Federation of Labor, who attended the meeting as a representative of the Central Trades and Labor Union, told of the exposure of perjured witnesses in the Mooney and Billings prosecutions. He urged all labor unions in the St. Louis district to fight for the release of the two men, declaring their imprisonment to be "a crime against organized labor and society in general."

Elmer McMillan, a union painter, and labor organizer; and G. A. Hoehne, editor of the publication "St. Louis Labor," were the other speakers. Charles Blome, president of Local No. 59 of the Molders' Union, presided.

A resolution asking Gov. Young, of California, to pardon both men, was adopted. It will be mailed to the California executive today.

DR. ARTHUR V. CAMPBELL' FUNERAL TOMORROW MORNING

Services at 4449 Olive for St. Louis Specialist for Nearly 54 Years.

The funeral of Dr. Arthur V. Campbell, 75 years old, a St. Louis eye specialist for nearly 54 years, who died Friday at his home, 4936 West Pine boulevard, will be held at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow at an undertaking establishment at 4449 Olive street. Death followed a three months' illness due to a kidney disease. Interment will be in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Born in Des Moines, Ia., he came to St. Louis with his parents when he was 5 years old. He was a graduate of Washington University School of Medicine, class of 1875, later practicing for several years as the partner of his father, the late Dr. William T. Campbell.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mary A. Stevenson Campbell, and two sons, Arthur V. Campbell, Pittsburg, Pa., and Dr. C. S. Campbell, who has been associated with him for several years in their office in the Arcade Building.

AIRSHIP WITH PONTOONS LANDS ON OCEAN IN DEMONSTRATIONS

Experiment Made by Goodyear Rubber Co. for Proposed U. S.-Honolulu Line.

By the Associated Press.

SAN PEDRO, Cal., July 27.—A successful demonstration of the possibility of a safe landing at sea of a blimp was made off the coast here yesterday with the Goodyear airship Volunteer.

The sea landing was one of a series of maneuvers carried out by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. in connection with its proposed Los Angeles-Honolulu dirigible passenger line.

The Volunteer, equipped with pontoons made landings on the ocean for about two hours. Lieut. Karl Lange, pilot, said he experienced no particular difficulty. The Volunteer is a 128-foot ship powered with two motors. About 10 years ago a similar landing was made with a Goodyear ship.

MISSOURI SCOUTS REACH PORT

CHICAGO, July 27.—A cable to Canadian Pacific offices here today reported the arrival at Liverpool of 370 American Boy Scouts aboard the Duchess of York, bound for the world scout jamboree at Birkenhead. The scouts from Illinois, Missouri, California, Texas, Indiana, and Alaska were met at the dock by Lord Hampton and a troop of kilted scouts. Most of the Americans planned to take advantage of a trip to the Shakspeare country before the assembly at Birkenhead.

Gets $300 in Theater Holdup.

By the Associated Press.

ROCKFORD, Ill., July 27.—A robber tonight held up the Coronado Moving Picture Theater here and escaped with $3000. The house was crowded when the theft took place. Three men obtained about $1000 May 17 in a holdup of the box office.

$25,000 PRIZE FOR ONE-STOP FLIGHT FROM ROME TO DALLAS

Money Posted by Col W. M. Easterwood Jr., Texas Aviation Enthusiast.

DALLAS, Tex., July 27.—Col. W. M. Easterwood Jr., Dallas chewing gum magnate and aviation enthusiast, today posted a certified check for $25,000 in a bank as a prize for the first plane to complete a one-stop flight from Rome to Dallas.

The trip must be completed by Sept. 15, 1930. By permission of Premier Benito Mussolini, all planes will be permitted to start from the National Aeronautic Association airport at Rome.

Rules of the contest will permit a stop at New York City. Two large lakes near Dallas will provide a suitable landing place for a sea plane if that type of ship should win the contest.

Easterwood said four Italian planes had been entered and he expected one of them to make the attempt possibly within a month.

OIL WELL SHOOTING 250 FEET IN AIR BROUGHT IN AT DUPO

Head of Murray-McKim Co. Estimates Gusher Will Flow 700 Barrels a Day.

An oil well which shot about 250 feet into the air was brought in at Dupo, Ill., yesterday afternoon by the Murray-McKim Oil Co. of St. Louis. Three hours after the shot the gusher was still spouting as high as 50 feet.

R. A. Murray, president of the company, estimated the well will have a flow of 700 barrels a day. The well is located on the premises of Charles Drake's resident.

So far about 60 wells have been drilled in the Dupo field and rigging is up for as many more.

One of the largest wells to go into operation in the new Dupo oil field was brought in last Wednesday night on property being operated by C. H. Bayless and his associates of the "Lucky Seven Syndicate," which is composed of St. Louisans, among whom are John E. Corrigan, Lep S. Rassieur, A. R. A. Garesche, James C. Jones Jr. and Frank A. Mohr.

When You Were a Kid and Trotted to the Corner Store

McKesson SERVICE
THE STANDARD OF QUALITY

MAYBE you still have in your memory a picture of the druggist who gave you what you were sent for. Those were the days when even a child could go to a drug store and get exactly what was wanted. In those days there were few stores which lured you with cut prices and then, when you got in, tried to sell you something just—so they said—as good.

The community druggist, whether around the corner from your home or downtown near your office, clings to the principles which make him "Doc" to you. He is the druggist your physician recommends when there is illness in your family and prescriptions must be quickly and accurately put up. He understands drugs. He is registered under State laws and the assistants who work for him are also trained and skilled in the science of pharmacy. By patronizing these community drug stores you protect yourself and your family.

Some people, though they never fail to go to the independent community drug store for their prescriptions, will yet go far out of their way to find a chain store when in need of general drug store merchandise. Mistakenly, they feel that thus they save money. They have failed to count the cost of their time, the actual outlay for car-fare or gasoline, the annoyance of service by machine-like clerks.

And in the community store no one will try to substitute. And you will get the most courteous attention possible because the men in that store own it—they are not hired by some distant corporation to run it. And in the community store you will find everything you want. You will find the men in it personally interested in serving you; because their store is not number 16 or 589 or some other number in a chain, but it is a store standing on its own feet, operated by men who are your neighbors and part of your community—men who are concerned with something more than profits.

The community store today, with its McKesson Service Symbol in the window, is not merely the safe store—it also is the fair price store!

JUROR TASTED EVIDENCE; DRY CONVICTION REVERSED

Southern Illinois Appellate Court Holds Procedure Brings Justice Into Disrepute.

By the Associated Press.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., July 27.—Because a member of the jury had tasted some of the evidence, the Appellate Court for the Southern Illinois District today reversed the conviction of Ray Henley in a liquor case.

"To have a person sample the liquor in question and then serve as a juror in the same case is highly calculated to bring the administration of justice into disrepute," the Court said.

Jackson and O'Brine Making $2 a Minute

Bonuses Run to $2797 a Day and Total Side Profits on Flight Have Mounted To $15,445.01.

For every second the endurance plane St. Louis Robin remains aloft it is earning for its pilots, Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine, a fraction over 3 cents in bonuses—about $2 every minute, slightly over $116 an hour, or $2797 a day. The machine is like a mint, only "Red" and "Obie" will have to wait until they land to see the product, consisting of checks, currency and coins.

Up to 12:01 a. m. today, or 105 hours after they broke the previous record on Tuesday afternoon, joint earnings of the two airmen from bonuses for setting a new mark have mounted to $12,839. In addition, cash gifts awaiting them amounted to $2606.01, bringing their total side profits so far to $15,445.01 — more than $7700 apiece.

What their salaries are for their endurance flight is not disclosed by the two aviators' employers, the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co. However, pilots in transportation service, working only a few hours a day, are paid as much as $600 a month, and Jackson and O'Brine haven't been out of the narrow confines of their speeding little craft for more than two weeks.

Seven Bonuses Offered.

Seven companies have offered bonuses on flying time so far, based on varying factors. These are:

$100 an hour for each hour in excess of the former record, which the St. Louis Robin passed at 2:01 p. m. last Tuesday, from the Curtiss Aeroplane & Motor Co. This is to be divided between the two pilots, as are all the other bonuses, except that from the Municipal Theater Association, offered to the flyers individually.

$100 a day for each day after breaking the record, from the Chandeysson Electric Co., 4092 Bingham avenue. The record was broken officially at 3:01 p. m. last Tuesday.

$100 a day for each day after breaking the record, from Famous-Barr Department store.

$100 a day or fraction thereof, since 6 a. m. Friday, from the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co., Akron, O., which supplies Robin plane tires.

$1 an hour for each pilot for total time in the air, from the Municipal Theater Association.

$1 an hour for each hour after breaking the record, from the Hauck Bakery Co., 2801 South Seventh boulevard.

$25 a day or fraction thereof for each day after breaking the record, from General Insurors, Inc., 101 North Fourth street.

Larger Money Gifts.

Included in the larger money gifts for the endurance flyers so far announced as received, and to be shared by Jackson and O'Brine, are: $500, Cook Paint & Varnish Co. of Kansas City, which made the paint for the plane; $500, Stromberg Carburetor Co., which made the carburetor; $200, Sligo Iron Co., which supplies nuts and bolts to the Curtiss-Robertson concern; $800, Universal Aviation Corporation, constituting receipts from Friday's aerial sightseeing trips from Lambert-St. Louis Field; $65, Von Hoffmann Aircraft Co., similar proceeds of Friday sightseeing; $150, Exide Electric Storage Battery Co. of Philadelphia, which made the plane's batteries; $100, Louis H. Egan, president of the Union Electric Light & Power Co.; $100, Elias Codd, "Norfolk, Va., Sandwich King," on condition the plane stayed up 350 hours, or until 9:17 o'clock last night.

The odd penny in the total of gifts came from Frances Dillinger of 577 North Twenty-fourth street, East St. Louis, who wrote the pilots: "You objected to the scent of East St. Louis so I am sending it to you."

It is likely the endurance pilots will share their reward with C. Ray Wassall and P. V. Chaffee, who have been of great help in breaking the record by their handling of the refueling craft. Other members of the ground crew perhaps will get shares, too. The only gifts for Wassall and Chafee that have been announced are $100 each from B. F. Oswald, president of the Shamrock Oil Co., which supplies the fuel, and $12.50 each from the Corby Supply Co.

The Air Board of the Chamber of Commerce, with offices in the Chamber of Commerce Building, is acting as a clearing house for receiving and delivering presents for Jackson and O'Brine, though it is not soliciting gifts. Cash contributions will be made up as a purse which, together, with the miscellaneous presents, will be presented to the airmen at a Chamber of Commerce-City Club luncheon, at the City Club, the day after the record flight is ended.

The miscellaneous gifts cover a wide range of variety and represent a considerable value. Among those received yesterday were certificates of five shares of stock each for the flyers in a company which projects a hotel chain. The Northwestern Brass Foundry Co. submitted an offer to supply a bronze tablet for Lambert-St. Louis Field to commemorate the flight. Some of the gifts have been delivered direct to the airport and a few of them have been carried aloft to the St. Louis Robin by the refueler.

The St. Louis Endurance Flyers' Citizens' Committee, organized by Mayor Miller, is soliciting a fund, for which about $2000 is needed, for a parade and celebration the second day after the flight is ended. Contributions to this end should be sent to M. E. Holderness, treasurer, at the First National Bank, or to Edwin B. Meissner, chairman of the Finance Committee, at the St. Louis Car Co.

Jackson and O'Brine have received offers from vaudeville agents and from newspaper syndicates, the latter desiring their account of their feat. Upon completion of the flight Jackson and O'Brine are to write the story of their life in the air exclusively for the Post-Dispatch in St. Louis.

TWO COMMUNIST PLOTS SAID TO HAVE BEEN FOUND IN PERU

Newspaper States Russian Conspiracies Were Designed to Make Trouble for U. S.

By the Associated Press.

LIMA, PERU, July 27.—La Prensa, a newspaper which enjoys the confidence of the Government, tonight said that two plots recently discovered by the police were fostered by an employe of the Russian communists and designed to create difficulties for the United States.

It said that one movement was prepared at the capital and another at the Talara oil fields. A man named Falipe Iparaguirre came there to organize the workmen on instructions of some international association which carries on propaganda against "what they call Yankee imperialism," but which in fact is an agency of Russian communists endeavoring to create difficulties for the United States.

It was charged that literature found with him proved that he was receiving money from the soviet. His mission was to organize at the Talara oil fields disorders similar to the outbreaks a few months ago at Santa Marta, Colombia.

La Prensa also stated that Iparaguirre informed his headquarters, which was said to be in Mexico, that he had secured the help of "defeated politicians" who would start a revolution at Lima. One of the anonymous pamphlets circulated recently was quoted as saying. "The tyrant (apparently referring to President Leguia) must know it. If he does not want to listen to the clamor of the Peruvian people and leave the Power, we will throw him out."

MOTORBOAT BOGIE TO DEPART TONIGHT FOR MEMPHIS, TENN.

Craft Which Broke Robert E. Lee Record to Make Leisurely Trip to Home Port.

The motor boat Bogie, which broke the 59-year-old record of the steamboat Robert E. Lee, when it arrived here from New Orleans, La., last Thursday, will leave tonight for Memphis, Tenn., the home of its owner, Dr. Louis Leroy.

Instead of remaining awake for four nights, as they did on the trip upstream, the crew will make several stops, staying over night at Cairo, Ill. In addition to the crew, which consists of Dr. Leroy, Robert Hunter and Harvey Brown, all of Memphis, the party will include Mrs. Leroy, Miss Bessie Pate of Memphis, and John McKee of St. Louis.

Dr. Leroy expects to reach Memphis tomorrow or Tuesday.

Why Listen to Gossip?
A good rule is not to listen to anything a tattler says against your neighbor.
Some wise persons say, "We never repeat what we hear." But why listen to gossip and scandal?
There would be fewer tongues to tattle, if there were less ears to hear them.

FEDERAL LABOR CONTROL FAILS IN AUSTRALIA

After 25 Years, Government Decides to Draft Laws Giving Jurisdiction to the States.

TWO AGENCIES LONG IN CONFLICT

Dual Set of Statutes in Force—New Plan Termed Harmful to Theatrical Industry.

By the Associated Press.

CANBERRA, Australia, July 27.—After 25 years, the bottom has fallen out of the vast and intricate structure of the Australian Federal arbitration system. Prime Minister Bruce has announced that legislation will be introduced in the next session of Parliament abandoning Federal control of industrial conditions and, with the exception of shipping and waterside industries, surrendering the entire field to the six States.

This decision, so far as Australia is concerned, arises out of a long struggle between the States and the Commonwealth, each claiming the fixing of wages, hours and other conditions governing industry, as its own province. Employers of labor, weary of conflicting and overlapping authority, for years have sought unification of industrial laws. Each State has had its own and the Federal Government has super-imposed yet another set of statutes.

Strike Used As Weapon.

Any body of employes discontented with what it had extracted from its State Courts, would seek to create what is known as "an inter-state dispute," giving it access to the Federal Court. Having obtained an award there, the union would proceed to assail both the State and Federal awards and insist by strike or threat of strike—a weapon often resorted to although declared illegal under the arbitration laws—upon enjoying the best out of each award.

By this means wages have progressively risen and hours have fallen and so tangled has become the web of State and Federal laws and awards that it has become imperative for either the States or the Commonwealth to retire from the field.

It was argued that with the Commonwealth in control, conditions in an industry would be identical throughout the continent. But the Federal Government failed to induce the States to adopt this course and was obliged by the Constitution to put it to the country by referendum. This was done in 1926.

Plan Rejected by Workers.

The workers, however, were apprehensive that the change might be detrimental to them, and by a big majority the proposal was rejected. The situation has since gone from bad to worse until the Prime Minister has been obliged to announce the Government decision to repeal Federal industrial legislation.

This has caused uneasiness among employers in many industries. The difficulties of the situation are well exemplified in the theatrical industry. The wages, hours and most petty details of the employment of actors, musicians, ushers and stage hands are governed by awards. When the decision of the Federal Government is put into effect a company, on a tour of the six States, will be subject to six entirely independent sets of laws and awards, with varying laws, wages and conditions.

MODEL OF BUDDHIST TEMPLE GIVEN TO SWEDISH KING

Is Donated by Sin Tjin Geken Khan, Ruler of Khara Shar in Mongolia.

By the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, July 27.—A complete model of a Buddhist temple with bells, holy water fonts, and sacrificial vessels in wrought silver, has been presented to the King of Sweden by Sin Tjin Geken Khan, ruler of the Khara Shar in Mongolia. This valuable gift is being sent to Stockholm in 26 big boxes, and will be added to the collections of the Ethnographical Museum in Stockholm. Except for Russia no other European country has such a rare specimen of Buddhist cult.

Some time ago a member of the Sven Hedin expedition, a Danish officer, Svens Haslund, when making fire in the desert burned part of his fur coat. When he presented himself to Sin Tjin Khan, the Buddhist priests noticed the damage and declared it was an omen that the Khan and the Dane were spiritual brothers.

The visitors and the Khan mediated the whole night in the tent of the ruler, while the priests outside beat their drums. Next morning Haslund was branded with a glowing piece of coal in two places on his left arm to further confirm the kinship with the Mongolian Prince.

The guest spent some time with the Sin Tjin Khan and on leaving he was asked to take with him the magnificent present of a complete Mongol temple, a 2,000-year-old Tibetan collection of manuscripts, and a royaly adorned saddle for the Khan's "cousin," the King of Sweden.

FINDS 50 JOBS IN JUNE FOR DISABLED PERSONS

Red Cross Bureau Reports 55 Per Cent Increase in Its Work.

The Placement Bureau for the Handicapped of the St. Louis Chapter, Red Cross, placed 50 persons last month, an increase of 55 per cent over June, 1928, and the highest number ever placed by the bureau, Miss Julia Alsberg, director of the bureau, announced yesterday. Those for whom jobs were found were from 16 to 65 years old and included common laborers and skilled mechanics.

One man for whom a job was found had not been employed for five years, his back having been injured while he was working on a building. He can not move his head from side to side and employment was found for him as night telephone man in an electrical refrigerator plant where he receives calls and relays them to the service men.

A young woman placed last month had been a physical director but was obliged to give up her work because of heart weakness. She was placed as office clerk with a physician who has arranged for her to take up a course of work somewhat similar to her profession.

A boy just out of school who wears a brace due to physical conditions resulting from infantile paralysis went to the bureau seeking a job. He was the oldest of eight children and the father had just died. He was placed with a chemist.

An appeal to owners of small business concerns was made by Miss Alsberg. Many of the men and women placed had been supported previously by public welfare agencies, Miss Alsberg said, and their employment means a saving of thousands of dollars.

Any one seeking to co-operate with the Red Cross is asked to telephone Miss Alsberg, 2221 Locust street, CEntral 6900.

WEALTHY STAMBOUL FAMILIES FORCED BY LAW TO AID POOR

Must Care For at Least One Household; Lists Drawn Up By Turkish Government.

By the Associated Press.

STAMBOUL, Turkey, July 27.—Under a law recently passed in the prefecture of Stamboul, every wealthy family in each of the many districts into which the city is divided must see to it that at least one pauperized family living in the same district does not starve or suffer from exposure.

Government inspectors are drawing up lists of those families which are well-to-do and of those which are paupers. The former may use what method they choose for protecting the latter either by supplying food from their own kitchens, by paying money allowances, or by obtaining work for the able-bodied paupers.

As there are not enough wealthy families to equal the number of guardians needed for the thousands of impoverished in Stamboul, the Government inspectors will delegate to the wealthy individuals only the worst cases. The Turkish Red Crescent Society, the equivalent of the Red Cross, will attempt to care for the others.

STATE FLORISTS CONVENTION TO OPEN IN CITY TUESDAY

Speakers Announced for Three-Day Meeting; Delegates to Attend Municipal Opera.

A three-day convention of the Missouri State Florists' Association, at which 300 delegates are expected, will open Tuesday at Hotel Statler. Those on the speaking program for the first day are: N. M. Kingsley, chairman of the Convention Arrangements Committee; Loyal C. Wanneman of Mexico, Mo., president; and W. J. Schafritzel of Springfield, Mo., secretary.

The speakers on Wednesday will be H. G. Berning, former president of the American Society of Florists; George H. Pring, horticulturist at Shaw's Garden; and W. A. Rowe, carnation grower of Kirkwood.

The convention will attend Municipal Opera in a body Wednesday night. The meeting will close with a banquet Thursday night.

VIENNA'S THEATERS DWINDLING

Eight Have Been Closed Within Last Year.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, July 27.—Vienna's theaters and music halls, once the pride of all Austria and the envy of much of Europe, are fast disappearing. Every year since the World War many amusement places have closed their doors for want of patronage. Many of those still running exist only under the greatest difficulties.

Within the last year eight first-class theaters were closed. These included the Appollo, the Ronacher, the Neue Wiener Buehne (the latter Europe's largest theater), the Stadt Theater, the Olympia, the Orpheum, the Karl Theater and the Volksoper. Together, these playhouses represented seating accommodations for approximately 12,000 persons. About 1600 stage hands are without work.

New Missouri Motor Publication.

The initial number of the Missouri Motor News, a monthly newspaper of four 7-column pages, was issued by the Automobile Club of Missouri yesterday. The featured article is about Maj. Roy F. Britton, president of the club, who has been active in the organization for 25 years. A summary of new roads, a list of tourist camps and an account of various accomplishments of the club are included.

COTTON FLOURISHING AT SHAW'S GARDEN

Tobacco Plants, Too, Are Doing Well and So Are Watermelons.

Cotton is blooming in the Economic Grden northwest of the old Henry Shaw residence at Shaw's Garden, where also may be seen rows of model backyard gardens and diminutive fields of the world's crops.

Although cotton is but little grown north of Sikeston, in Missouri, the plants at the St. Louis institution appear to be in as good condition as Mississippi's best. The blossoms are white, turning pink or purple with age. The plants are covered with green bolls which will be popping snowily in the autumn.

The great pure white lotus of the sun-bathed Orient is in flower in a circular pool at the north end of the Economic Garden. It is a rare variety of the sacred lotus of India, which has been naturalized along the Nile and, therefore, sometimes is called, without full botanical propriety, the sacred lotus of the Nile.

Visitors enter the garden through an arboral pergola. Most of them are somewhat surprised to discover that the vines trained overhead actually are apple, pear and other fruit trees. On either side, higher than a tall man's head, tower hardy varieties of ornamental grasses imported from the ubtropics.

Another Southern crop that grows luxuriantly in this part of Missouri—three acres of it, at least—is tobacco. Tall as it is, however, the tobacco in the Economic Garden is not quite up to that in the Medicinal Garden, southwest of the Floral Display House, which is blooming in whole choirs of pink-tipped silvery trumpets.
erners, and most Missourians for

And the crop that most South-that matter, plant in the middle of the field or some obscure fence corner, unless they go in for it in a big way, is growing out in the open at Shaws Garden. This crop, if anyone needs to be told, is watermelons.

Buckwheat is covered with clusters of little white flowers. Fiber crops of the Old World are represented by the flax of Europe, the jute of India and the rami of ancient China.

SUIT TO STOP FORECLOSURE ON STANLEY EPSTEIN PROJECT

Joseph G. Lesyna and Wife Say They Bought $22,000 Deed on Misrepresentations.

Suit to enjoin foreclosure proceedings on an 18-family apartment building at 6648 Washington avenue was filed yesterday, against Stanley Epstein, bankrupt real estate dealer, and the Reliable Loan and Investment Co., by Joseph G. Lesyna and his wife, Irene.

The plaintiffs assert that misrepresentations by Epstein as to net income and other matters induced them last March to purchase a second deed of trust on the building for $22,000, trading in a $17,107.73 equity in other property and giving a note for the difference, with the deed as security for the note.

Later the Reliable company acquired the deed from Epstein and now is attempting to foreclose, the plaintiffs said. They ask the Court to stop the foreclosure sale, set for tomorrow, cancel the note and return the traded equity.

WOOD ALCOHOL KILLS TWO; ONE IN COUNTY, ONE IN CITY

Causes of Death of Martin Kurz and John Heidebur Announced by Coroners.

Martin Kurz, 42 years old, who was found dead at his home at Becker and Telegraph roads, died of wood alcohol poisoning, Coroner O'Connell of St. Louis County announced last night after an autopsy.

Kurz had been employed by R. A. Nicholson, 6917 Amherst avenue, University City, as a caretaker.

The death of John Heidebur, 33 years old, a laborer of 1420 Monroe street, who expired in an automobile parked in front of 2216 North Fifteenth street Tuesday afternoon, was caused by wood alcohol contained in whisky, Coroner Dever announced yesterday following analysis of the liquor by Dr. R. B. H. Gradwohl.

Heidebur and his brother, Val, 29, drank whisky from a bottle which police found in the car after the man's death. Val Heidebur, who recovered, declared he could not remember where they obtained the liquor.

BROKERS TO HAVE ROOM FOR WOMEN CLIENTS ONLY

Oliver J. Anderson & Co. Finds New Accommodations Required to Meet Need.

Women, who have been crowding brokers' board rooms since everybody from babies to bishops took to speculation, have been invited by Oliver J. Anderson & Co. to visit a branch office at the Hotel Coronado until a special room could be prepared for them at the downtown office.

Before the market got lively as the modern "rabbit" baseball, women kept out of St. Louis board rooms. Webster Tilton, in charge of the board room at 718 Locust street, said he never saw a woman there until the last year.

Lately, however, they have been surrounding the bulletin board in small armies, here as elsewhere, and especially at noon, when the small room was already crowded with men and blue with tobacco smoke. Most of them were reported young, but it was learned that many were past the ornamental age. Many men politely gave up their seats. No man could afford a whole-hearted "damn," and there were turns of the market when the word seemd painfully apt. Soprano chatter overwhelmed bass and tenor and barytone alike, but some of the women found time, for all their conversation, to maintain substantial accounts.

The situation was inconvenient for both men and women, and so it was announced that the Coronado office would offer special attention for women until a women's board room could be equipped, adjacent to the men's board room downtown. Several firms in New York have found it advisable to adopt similar measures.

TAMMANY'S GRAND SACHEM CELEBRATES 100TH BIRTHDAY

John R. Voorhis Weeps Over Telegram Received From Gov. Roosevelt.

NEW YORK, July 27.—John R. Voorhis, Grand Sachem of Tammany and president of the Board of Elections who is 100 years old today, stood up pretty well under all the speeches and handshaking and fried chicken until they handed him a telegram of congratulations from Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt. Then he broke down and wept.

"My very hearty congratulations to my dear young friend on the achievement his first century," the telegram read. "You have my affectionate wishes. Many happy returns of the day."

It brought the tears, but Voorhis quickly recovered his composure and, leaning over the triple-deck birthday cake on his desk, asked all those at the party to come up and shake hands.

Voorhis disclaimed an achievement in his longevity.

"I did not set out aiming to be 100 or any other age," he said at a celebration in his honor. "All I set out to do was earn a living, put aside a little of it for savings if possible, to mind my own business and do my duty as it came along."

Rosario Dockers Fight Police.

ROSARIO, Argentine, July 27.—One policeman was killed last night in the first clash of police with dock workers, who initiated a general strike yesterday morning in the port area.

CORN TAKES LEAD IN GRAIN MARKET

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, July 27.—Corn took the lead in today's market after setback in wheat, and advancing, carried wheat with it. Attention aws attracted to weather conditions and statement that the grain was at point of growth when could be damaged by protracted dry and excessively hot weather if it became protracted.

In the cash grain market Saturday, soft wheat was generally steady. Prices were maintained on choice starchy types, and average qualities sold at about Friday's closing levels, too. Discounts, however, for heavy garlicky wheat broadened several cents toward the finish. The better classes of No. 2, No. 3 and No. 4 wheat shared a good accumulative demand. There was also some shipping call, but mill orders were generally under the market. Late, choice No. 2 red was selling at $1.44, average qualities at $1.43 basis, mainly 3@4c under Chicago September price. Bright starchy No. 3s mainly $1.41, ordinary qualities $1.40, some 56-lb dark wheat was offered down to $1.39. No. 4s within a range of $1.36 to $1.38. Discounts for garlicky wheat 4@5c for light, 6@9c for medium and from 11c to 17c under straight grades for heavy garlicky. Hard wheat was fully steady, with No. 3s possibly 1c higher. There was a good accumulative demand at current discounts, No. 1 hard going at prices 6 and 7c below the Chicago September figure and No. 2 hard 7c to 8c under. No. 3s sold at 1c discount from No. 2. Corn was steady to ½c up, although basis was not quite so good as on Friday. The demand was somewhat better and a good clearance was effected. Mills, shippers and elevators bought the corn. Oats were steady to ½c off. Receipts of new oats are increasing, but as yet buyers showed little discriminationo except against the light test samples. The demand was good, coming mostly from shippers.

Opening unchanged to fractionally higher, wheat futures reacted to more than cent below previous close early. Winnipeg also sold off early. Liverpool wheat wheat $1.51½, September corn $1.07 December and 1½d on March. Corn was unchanged to higher early.

Septemebr wheat opened at 1.44⅞. December wheat $1.51¼, September corn $1.07 and December corn 99¾c.

The opening rise was credited to Liverpool at that time being better than due while report of rain in Canada brought selling into the market.

Prices later rebounded wit hSeptember wheat showing upward range of cent and December a fraction with corn up more than cent.

Wheat receipts which were 621,600 bu. compared with 361,200 bu. first week nd 571,200 bu. last year included 276 cars local and 168 cars through. Corn receipts which were 106,400 bu. compared with 54,600 bu. first week and 121,800 bu. last year included 64 cars local and 12 cars through. Oats receipts which were 79,200 bu. compared with 28,600 bu. last week and 120,000 bu. last year included 35 cars local and one car through. Hay receipts were 21 cars local and three cars througn.

ADVANCE IN CORN CARRIES WHEAT PRICE FORWARD

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 27.—The question of safety of the country's corn crop took a quick grip on the speculative trade in grain today, and price levels flashed upward all around. Abnormal heat and drought that have swept away until millions of bushels of wheat in the spring crop region northwest were reported today as now endangering corn from Ohio west to Nebraska and south to Oklahoma. Big buying of corn future deliveries ensued and wheat as well as corn and oats went bounding aloft in price.

Corn quotations closed buoyant, 1¾c to 2¼c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Wheat closed firm, 1½c to 2⅛c up, oats ¾c to 1¼c advance, and provisions unchanged to 5c down.

Soaring prices in the corn market became chiefly manifest today after one of the unofficial crop experts issued a summary stating that two weeks or more of deficient rainfall and excessive heat is having ill effects on the growth of corn. He said that the period of general tasseling of corn is at hand, making the corn plants now peculiarly susceptible to heat and drouth damage. The report added that Ohio, Indiana, the southern two-thirds of Illinois, most of Iowa, the greater part of Nebraska and a large part of Missouri and Oklahoma are indicating injury in typical districts.

Leadership of the grain markets switched almost at once to corn instead of wheat, and whereas, wheat had previously been plunging cereal values irregularyl downgrade today, the new development as to corn crop peril brought about a sudden decided upward movement of prices in every one of the grain pits, including wheat. A further stimulus to corn buying was announcement that primary receipts of corn for the last week have been hardly more than half as much as a year ago, 4,447,000 bushels against 7,635,000 bushels.

Except for borrowed strength from the action of corn, the wheat market todas was dominated chiefly by selling as a result of possibility of general rainfalls developing in the vast drouth region north and south of the Canadian boundary. According to one leading authority, a good soaking general rain now with favorable weather following would still greatly benefit 10,00,000 acres of summer fallow wheat land in Canada, despite the extraordinary ravages of drouth and heat up to date.

Scattered selling and lightness of demand eased down the provision market.

OWER DRIFT TO TOCK PRICES IN QUIET SESSION

rinkling of Shares Manage to Move Against the General Trend — North American to New Peak.

the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 27.—The ck market drifted lower in a et two-hour session today. With rather gloomy credit outlook the hot weather, traders were gely inclined to leave Wall eet, to take care of itself for week-end, and the normal preiday liquidation depressed prices her generally throughout the The day's turnover amounted only 1,370,610 shares, the lowt since June.

There was practically nothing in meager business news of the y to influence the market. Sevl more excellent June railway rnings statements appeared, but med to have been discounted. weekly reviews once more described industry in glowing terms, nting out that very little seal recession has appeared, and t slackening there has been in tain lines has been offset by ns in others. Credit Situation Different.

In contrast to the brilliant industrial situation, the state of dit was rather depressing. Although a few weeks ago Wall eet generally predicted easy ney at this time, yesterday's ease in time money rates indicated that fairly snug conditions may be expected for the next few weeks, at least. The decline in call money to 9 per cent, from the 10 per cent peak of the week, was due rather to lessened demand n an influx of funds.

A sprinkling of stocks managed to move against the downward trend. North American mounted about five points to a new peak, and Commercial Investment Trust and Consolidated Cigar each moved up about six points. Baldwin Locomotive, Eastman Kodak and Bendix Aviation were firm. Westinghouse Airbrake moved up two ts to a new top. The motors e generally steady, although Auburn and Marmon sold off in lizing. Coppers also held their und. What selling came into steels was well absorbed, Bethm selling off but a fraction and United States Steel slipping k a point. Quarterly earnings and dividend of the latter are to be announced Tuesday.

Some Chemicals Depressed.

Some of the chemicals were der marked pressure, Commerial Solvents dropping about 12 points, then rallying four from the bottom in covering. Allied Chemical lost four points. In the rails, Atlantic Coast Line lost eight points, New York Central Chesapeake & Ohio and Nickel Plate three. Atchison slipped back about two points, despite an extraordinarily favorable June earngs statement. Delaware & Hudon, however, mounted a couple of points. American Telephone sold off about four and General Electric seven points, although they rallied a little at the close. Amerian Can, American and Foreign Power, National Cash Register, Goodyear, Pacific Lighting, and Air Reduction were among issues ing two or three points. Radio ged a point. Cluett-Peabody dropped two points more to a new low for the year.

Commodities were somewhat irregular, reflecting largely the evening up of accounts for the weekend. Wheat closed about 2 cents higher on dry weather in the Northwest, and corn mounted about a cent. Cotton closed slightly lower.

Foreign exchanges also were irregular, francs sagging in profit taking, and sterling cables holding at $4.85⅝.

ght Money Factor During Week

The stock market was again depressed by tight money this week. As call money mounted from 7 to 10 per cent, heavy profit taking was prompted in the utilities and rails, and many of the industrials, although a few managed to make headway in response to excellent second quarter earnings statements.

The market appeared pretty thoroughly to have discounted the industrial situation, and to have worked itself into an over-bought condition.

Although call money fell back to 9 per cent on Friday, time money mounted to 8½ per cent for shorter maturities.

Brokers' loans soared $95,000,000 more to another record level, which was rather perplexing in view of the irregularity of the market. Wall street attributed much of the rise to $125,000,000 in rights maturing early in the week. The Reserve Board took cognizance of the upturn in loans in its monthly survey. It pointed out that the gain of about $400,000,000 in loans and investments of member banks in leading cities from May to July 17 was caused chiefly by the growth in brokers' loans.

LOWER DRIFT TO STOCK PRICES IN QUIET SESSION

Sprinkling of Shares Manage to Move Against the General Trend — North American to New Peak.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 27.—The ock market drifted lower in a uiet two-hour session today. With he rather gloomy credit outlook nd the hot weather, traders were rgely inclined to leave Wall reet, to take care of itself for e week-end, and the normal preliday liquidation depressed prices ather generally throughout the st. The day's turnover amounted o only 1,370,610 shares, the lowst since June.

There was practically nothing in the meager business news of the day to influence the market. Several more excellent June railway earnings statements appeared, but seemed to have been discounted. The weekly reviews once more described industry in glowing terms, pointing out that very little seasonal recession has appeared, and what slackening there has been in certain lines has been offset by gains in others. Although there has been some uneasiness over the possibility that the pace of industry may be too fast, standard statistics stated that "stocks of manufactured goods are of reasonable proportions."

COTTON TRADE QUIET AND CLOSE IS LOWER

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 27.—The cotton market today was quiet, with an opening advance followed by declines under week-end realizing or liquidation and some selling promoted by hope of better weather in Texas. December sold off from 19.06c to 18.88c, and closed at 18.91c, the general market closed barely steady at net declines of 6 to 8 points.

The market opened steady at an advance of 5 to 8 points on the fairly steady showing of Liverpool, reports of scattered showers in the Eastern belt and of a continued absence of rain in Western and Northwest Texas. Active months sold about 5 to 9 points net higher during the early trading. October advanced to 18.79c and March to 19.20c, but the demand was limited and was checked by realizing or liquidation. The latter became more active later on the forecast for cooler weather with showers in the Texas Panhandle, and the market eased off to 18.63c for October and 19.01c for March, or 7 to 11 points net lower in the late trading.

General business was quiet during the entire morning. Closing prices were within a point or two of the lowest on most positions. The further showers reported in the Eastern belt were regarded as likely to favor boll weevil activities, and week-end reviews of the situation emphasized the boll weevil threat as one of the chief uncertainties in the coming crop outlook.

The action of the market, however, was regarded by local brokers as reflecting a favorable opinion as to crop prospects. Otherwise there was continued talk regarding the probability of relatively high private end-month condition figures.

Cable advice said there had been continental liquidation and Bombay selling in Liverpool, but that the offerings had been absorbed by fair trade calling. These advices also reported greater hope of a wage settlement and some improvement in the inquiry for cotton cloths from India. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at about 46,000, against 71,000 last year and 69,000 two years ago.

Private end-July crop reports are expected to make their appearance next week, and part of the recent trading here is supposed to have reflected evening-up of commitments owing to uncertainty as to their showing both with reference to condition figures and indicated yields.

SELECTIVE MARKET FOR EIGHT WEEKS

New Peak Prices for Year Reached by 150 Stocks but 178 Have Simultaneously Fallen to Levels Below May 27.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 27.—The Evening Post, in copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"With August near, the stock market presents as convincing a demonstration of bullish sentiment as it did at mid-year. The summer to date has brought none of the disagreeable turns in business that seemed destined once to introduce trouble. The most puzzling aspect of the market has been its own rapid advance. Yet it must be confessed that the accepted averages have created an illusion of rising stock prices when in reality a vast number of issues have been drifting lower. The blue chip stocks that make up the index numbers have been moving steadily ahead since the low was reached following last spring's liquidation. The index of 90 stocks used by the Evening Post daily, computed by the Standard Statistics Company, Inc., has risen 36 points, or 18 per cent, since May 27. To study the performance of any stock average is to conclude that the 1929 summer market has been a broad, sweeping, bullish affair indeed.

A Selective Market.

"Actually a long list of individual stocks have been moving toward lower rather than higher levels since May 27. Since that date 150 different stocks have reached new high peaks for all time. But 178 simultaneously have fallen to a lower level than that at which they sold on May 27. Many stocks have made some advance without attaining a new high. Others have neither lost nor gained ground. What the country has been witnessing therefore is not a broad bull market strictly, but two simultaenous markets—one a market of rising and the other a market of falling prices. Investors this summer have been more discriminating than usual which doubtless is the explanation for the highly selective character of trading during the last eight weeks. The feverish increase in volume that usually accompanies a rising market has not yet given the warning of an aroused public buying stocks on thin margin. Whether before it ends the market will witness such a demonstration is a question answered in the affirmative by an increasing number of observers.

"New" Money a Factor.

"Firming money rates with the approach of the month end is a normal expectation but explanation for the July advance in rates lies elsewhere. Inconceivable as it is to some the tight condition of July reflects primarily the introduction of the new currency. Apparently the new bills possess a curiosity value greater even than the money authorities anticipated. Normally currency flows back in volume to the banks by mid-July. This year the return flow was small indeed. That the popularity of new bills was a factor is plainly suggested by the reports. This influence is of course temporary but it meanwhile demands for funds in connection with the month end settlements have begun to multiply. Then partly as a result of the stock market itself its shrinkage in member bank loans on securities expected after the mid-year settlements has not been pronounced. Even the volume of commercial loans has begun its seasonal expansion a month early.

Active Business Indicated.

"Member bank loans to industry have held consistently high throughout 1929 to date but the accelerated pace of the expansion this summer gives pretty clear testimony that business continues active. It further means that so far at least dear money rates have not discouraged industry. The dearth of new bond issues mighth suggest recession through the absence of funds but business is finding its money through new channels nowadays. In the field of agriculture the spectacular recovery in wheat has added millions of dollars to the indicated purchasing power of the farmer.

WEEK'S METAL MARKET REVIEW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 27.—Reports were conflicting regarding steel mill operations, with some intimating that there was a reduction underway, largely through a letup in demand from the automobile industry, while on the other hand there were other statements saying that the actual falling off in output will be very small for the current month as a result of the heavy purchases of steel from various quarters, including pipe line manufacturers, railroads, structural steel makers and farm implement producers. Prices were very steady. Pig iron was unchanged.

Some improvement was noted in the demand for copper from foreign consumers, although the buying as a whole was rather moderate. In the domestic market, deliveries of metal are said to be going forward in some instances against earlier orders, but large independent fabricators were generally out of the market. While some inquiry has been reported, actual business is said to be limited to immediate requirements. Electrolytic remains at 18 cents delivered in the Connecticut Valley, with custom smelters still supplying the demand.

Tin price movements were small, with consumers reported as fair buyers on the small reactions. Foreign price changes were narrow.

Lead dull, but steady. Sellers were reported as not pressing the market despite the light consuming demand.

Zinc prices averaged steady and the inquiry was light, largely for prompt or early shipment.

The position of the market for antimony showed practically no change during the week.

REACTIONARY TREND TO BOND MARKET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 27.—The bond market was reactionary in today's short session as selling pressure was exerted against the recent convertible leaders. The industrials were the only issues to display group strength, while the utilities dipped sharply on profit-taking. The rails were irregular. U. S. Government found a thin market and were irregularly lower.

American Telephone convertible 4½s after getting up to 190, within a point of their record price, dropped to 185½ for a net loss of 4 points. International Telephone convertible 4½s lost nearly a point, closing at 165¼. Utilities Power & Light 5½s advanced in sympathy with the stock, rising 2 17-2 points on the day.

Atchison convertible 4½s were the strong feature of the rails, closing up 2 points at 147, but they were still 10 points under their record high price. Allegheny Corporation issues each dropped a point, and Missouri Pacific *5½s "A" 2.

In the industrials Cuba Cane Sugar 7s and 8s broke 2 and 2¼ points respectively, continuing the decline started yesterday following announcement of the company's proposed reorganization plan. Cuba Dominican Sugar 7½s gained nearly 3. American I. G. Chemical 5½s were up a fraction. Armour 5½s rose 2. Several of the oil bonds moved up fractionally. Krueger & Toll 5s on a turnover of $730,000 par value again ascended a new peak, selling up to 103⅜ and closing at 102¾ for a net gain of nearly a point.

Chicago Curb Sets Record.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 27.—The Chicago Curb Association, infant of the local exchanges, set up three new records this week.

Weekly sales moved up rom 81,007 shares to 182,657, the previous record having been established in May.

The daily sales record of 18,555 shares May 2 was lifted to 37,888 shares July 26.

Sale of a curb membership, worth $11,100 in November, reached a peak of $12,000 July 26.

LAMB PRICES DOWN IN TRADE FOR WEEK

NATIONAL STOCK YARDS, July 27.—Cattle receipts for week were heavy, market lower, except on best native beeves and canner and cutter cows, steer top $16.25, bulk $12.65 to $15.50, range steer top $13, bulk $9.50 to $11.50. Most native steers 25c to 50c off, range steers 25c to 60c lower, except tops which were 10c to 15c off. Mixed yearlings and heifers 25c to 75c lower, top $14.25, bulk best $12.50 to $14, others $8 to $12. Bulk beef cows 25c to 50c off at $7.75 to $9, cutters $6.50 to $7, canners $5.75 to $6.25. Bologna bulls 25c lower, closing top $9.25. Veal calves 50c off, final top $16. First cuts $13.50, others downward accordingly. Southern canner yearlings, $6.65 to $6.85.

Hog receipts were moderate, market about steady with a week ago, top $12.40, bulk $11.15 to $12.35, pigs $11 to $12.25, sows $9.75 to $10.25.

Chinese Eastern Railway Feud; Events Leading to Three-Cornered Fight for Control in Manchuria

Two Wars and Endless Negotiations Have Arisen From Russian and Japanese Thirst for Territory a Third Again as Large as Texas.

THE statements in the following sketch, which is intended to explain the causes leading up to the breaking off of diplomatic relations by Russia with China, are for the most part—excepting the introductory paragraphs—direct quotations from the Peace Handbook issued by the British Foreign Office, from the proceedings of the Second Conference of the Institute of Pacific Relations at Honolulu in 1927, and from Prof. E. T. Williams' "Short History of China."

THE modern story of Manchuria is the story of the ambitions for conquest of two nations, Japan and Russia, both of which have endeavored to take from China this fertile territory of about [illegible]0,000 square miles.

Japan was defeated in 1597 in attempting the conquest of Korea and made no further effective move to that end for nearly 300 years. A brilliant teacher, Yoshida Shoin, who instructed such Japanese leaders as Ito, Inouye and Shinagawa about the time of the opening of Japan to intercourse with the Occident in 1854, advocated the seizure by Japan of Manchuria, Formosa, Korea, Saghalien, the Kuriles, Kamchatka and Eastern Siberia. His biographer, writing in 1914, said: "And now we see after 60 years this program is almost completed."

Russia's ambitions in Eastern Asia date back to 1636 when her invading forces first reached the shores of the Pacific. In 1644 the Russians entered the fertile valley of the Amur and in 1651 Khabarakoff sailed down the Amur to the mouth of the Usurri River and at the junction of those two streams built a fort on the site of which stands today a city named for him. Driven out, Russia persisted and more than 200 years later obtained the foothold she sought.

By the treaty of May 29, 1858, the whole north bank of the Amur River from the Argun Fork to the sea was recognized as Russian territory, the south bank down to the Ussuri as Chinese and the territory between the Ussuri and the sea was to be held in common pending a settlement of the frontier. Later, Russia took advantage of China's second war with Great Britain to press her claim to the Ussuri country and, on Nov. 14, 1860, a convention was signed at Peiping (Pekin) under which China ceded this tract to Russia.

Treaty of Shimonoseki, 1895.

In 1894 Japan made the condition of affairs in Korea the excuse for a war with China in which China was overwhelmingly defeated and Japan obtained world recognition as a military power.

Under a treaty of peace concluded at Shimonoseki, April 17, 1895, by Count Ito and Li Hung-chang, the southern part of the Shengking (Fengtien) province of Manchuria was ceded by China to Japan.

There had been for some years a current of opinion that the ice-free port in eastern Asia of which Russia was in search was to be found in the territory thus handed over to Japan. At all events, Russia, in the interval between the signing and the ratification of the treaty of Shimonoseki invited the Great Powers to intervene in order to preserve southern Manchuria to China, on the ground that the occupation of Port Arthur by Japan would destroy the political balance of the Far East.

France and Germany fell in with this view but Great Britain declined to do so. In May, 1895, Russia, Germany and France made joint representations to Japan recommending her not to occupy permanently the territory ceded in southern Manchuria and intimations were given that this advice, if unheeded, would be supported by force of arms. Japan yielded to his coalition and in a convention Nov. 8, 1895, retroceded the districts in question receiving as compensation a money payment of 30,000,000 taels from China. In return for her services in the matter, Russia received from China the right to carry the Siberian railway across northern Manchuria from Stretensk to Vladivostok (Chinese Eastern Railway).

Two years later China gave Russia permission to extend that line south from Harbin to Dairen.

During the Boxer outbreak the Governors of the Manchurian Provinces in June, 1900, declared war on Russia in obedience to imperial decrees. As a result, Russia took armed possession of Manchuria. In 1902, an agreement was signed at Peiping (Great Britain, Japan and the United States supporting China) which provided that Russia should evacuate Manchuria by stages within 18 months. Russia carried out the first stage of evacuation. However, when it appeared that in the negotiations of Japan and the United States for commercial treaties with China three new ports were to be opened in Manchuria, Russia refused to carry out the second stage of evacuation until certain further demands designed to rivet Russian control on Manchuria to the exclusion of all other foreign influences were conceded.

Russo-Japanese War.

Great Britain, Japan and the United States again supported China in its refusal of these fresh demands and reprsentations were made by all three Powers to the Russian Government. China being unable to press matters to a practical conclusion. Japan, whose interests ranked next in importance, entered into negotiations with Russia and offered to recognize the special position of Russia in Manchuria if Russia would recognize that of Japan in Korea, provided also that Russia would join with Japan in an engagement to recognize the territorial integrity of China and Korea and maintain the open door in both countries. Russia refused to make the smallest concession and the Russo-Japanese war resulted.

The treaty of Portsmouth, 1905, concluding that war, transferred a lease Russia held on Liaotung Peninsula in Southern Manchuria with all the privileges attaching.

After this year the Manchurian railroad system was divided, Japan having the section from Changchun down to Dairen, which is now known as the South Manchurian Railway, one-half of the stock being owned by the Japanese Government.

North of Changchun to Harbin and east and west through Manchuria is the Chinese Eastern Railway, which is under the control of Russia. There are in Manchuria other railroads, actually constructed and still more in contemplation. These are sometimes referred to as Japanese lines, but as a matter of fact they are Chinese lines built in co-operation with the South Manchurian Railway.

Chinese Eastern Controversy.

Each of the three powers interested in Manchuria — China, Russia and Japan—has railroad claims, policies, and interests and ambitions which conflict with those of the other powers. Concerning the Chinese Eastern Railway there is a clash between Russia and China.

By the Russo-Chinese agreement of 1924 it was definitely stipulated that the Chinese Eastern Railway should be operated on a basis of absolute equality between Russia and China. Since the manager of the railway, however, is Russian, Russia has succeeded in controlling its administration.

The terms of the agreement of 1924 provided that there should

Trotzky Tears Up Czar's Manifesto

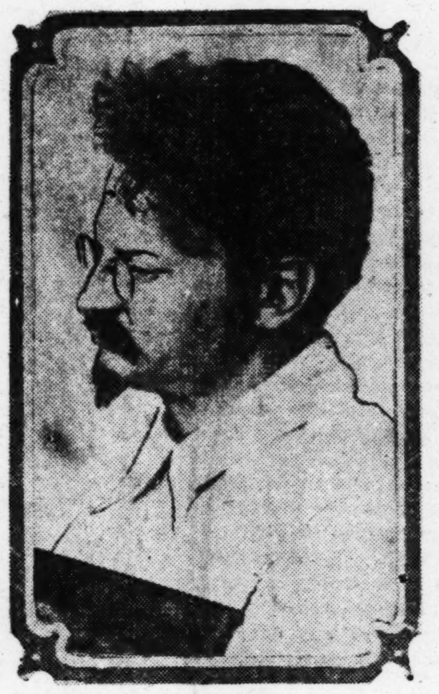
Half a Victory Dangerous Thing He Tells Thousands in Front of St. Petersburg University

Takes Lodgings Under Assumed Name With Speculator Who Longs "to Meet Wretch" Who Is Writing Revolutionary Articles, to "Shoot Him Like a Dog."

Edited Three Papers at One Time, Including Russian Gazette, Meantime Framing Chief Soviet Policies—His Work "1905" Served as School Book for Radicals.

By LEON TROTZKY

CHAPTER V.



LEON TROTZKY.

I ARRIVED in St. Petersburg when the October, 1905, strike was at its height. The waves of revolt were growing, but there was the danger that in the absence of a mass organization they might break without any real result.

I came from Finland with a plan for a non-party special election organization, one delegate to every 1000 men. From Jordansky, man of letters and subsequently Soviet Ambassador in Italy, I heard on the day of my arrival that the Mensheviks had already launched the suggestion of an elected revolutionary body having one member for every 500 electors.

Those members of the Bolshevist Central Executive Committee who at the time were in St. Petersburg were strongly against any non-party elected organization. That sectarian attitude toward the Soviet on the part of the Bolshevik leaders lasted until the arrival of Lenin in Russia the following November.

Lenin was so far in advance of his closest followers that in his presence they seemed to feel relieved of all necessity of independent decision, theoretical or tactical. Finding themselves separated from Lenin at the critical moment, they were pitiful in their helplessness.

That was in the autumn of 1905. It was the same in the spring of 1917. On both occasions, as on many others of lesser historical importance, the rank and file of the party found instinctively a much more correct line of guidance for their action than did the half-leaders when left to their own resources.

Trotzky Says He Framed Major Soviet Policies.

What were the relations between myself and Lenin in the revolution of 1905? After his death, official history was rewritten presenting a struggle as between two principles, good and bad, even regarding the events of 1905.

How did matters stand in reality? In the work of the St. Petersburg Soviet, Lenin took no direct action, he never once rose to speak at the Soviet. At the same time he very carefully watched its every step, exercised an influence on its policy through representatives of the Bolshevik faction, and also made current comments on its activity in his paper.

There was no dissension between Lenin and the Soviet's policy over any single matter. All except minor decisions of the Soviet were formulated by myself, brought first by me before the executive committee, and then, in the name of the latter before the Soviet itself.

When a federative committee of representatives both of the Mensheviks and the Bolsheviks was set up, I spoke on its behalf at the executive committee.

The first chairman of the Soviet, elected on the eve of my return from Finland, was a young lawyer, Khrustalv, who was but a flitting figure in the revolution, a kind of intermediate between Father Gapon and the Social Democrats. Khrustalv acted as chairman, but politically he did not lead.

"Russia in Revolution" Becomes School Book.

After his arrest a "collective chairmanship," was elected, and of this I was the head. The Mensheviks were already conducting a clandestine campaign against me. On the other hand, Lenin, as Lunatcharski also testified in his memoirs entirely approved of my candidature.

Out of the fight for the traditions of 1905 grew my book, "Russia in Revolution," which has since been many times republished abroad under the title of "1905." After the October events that book became an official party "school book" not only in Russia, but also with the Communist parties of Western Europe.

It was only when Lenin was dead and a carefully prepared campaign against me was launched that my book, "1905," also came under fire. Gradually the critics took greater courage, grew in number and in self-importance, and made more and more noise, often the louder, to drown their own anxiety. Thus was created post factum the legend of the irreconcilable struggle between Lenin and Trotzky in the revolution of 1905. The turn which the survivors—the epigones—had taken found its symbolical expression in the fact that the work which, under Lenin, was the official party text book, under the epigones was suppressed.

Absolutism Loses Head Over General Strike.

The October general strike did not develop according to plan. It began at the Moscow printing works, then commenced to decline, Just when the strike was apparently "fizzling out" it happened to be taken up by the railway employes and that changed the whole situation entirely.

Beginning with Oct. 10 the general political strike spread from Moscow over the whole of Russia. In many towns there were conflicts between the people and troops. But on the whole the October days were in the nature of a political strike only and did not assume the proportion of an armed uprising. Nevertheless absolutism lost its head, decided to make compromises and the Constitutional Manifesto of Oct. 17, 1905, was promulgated.

(This Imperial Manifesto granted Russia a constitution and provided for popular representation through the Duma.)

The victory of the October strike, apart from its political meaning, had for me an immense theoretical significance. It was not the opposition efforts of the liberal bourgeoisie, not the elemental rising of the peasants, not the terrorist blows of the intelligentsia, but the strike of the proletariat which for the first time brought Czarism to its knees.

Straight Jacket Put on Prudent Minority.

In his recollections Count Witte subsequently justified the weakness of the government before the revolution by saying that in 1905 "the greater majority of Russia went mad as it were." In the eyes of conservative statesmen the revolution appears as madness, only because it brings up the "normal" madness of social contrasts to the highest pitch. But in such cases the mad majority puts a straight jacket on the "prudent" minority and that is how history marches ahead.

I have already mentioned that on May Day, 1905, my wife was among those caught by a raid of mounted police. She was kept about six months in prison and thereafter ordered to live under police supervision at Tver.

After the October Manifesto she returned to St. Petersburg. In the name of "Vikentyeff" we took a room in the house, as it turned out, of a stock exchange speculator. "Russia went mad" and business on 'change was bad. Many speculators had to economize and some had let part of their flats. A newsdealer used to bring us all the St. Petersburg newspapers every morning. Our landlord sometimes would borrow them and gnash his teeth. His business was steadily getting worse.

Landlord's Wild Threat Excites Trotzky's Wife.

Once he was quite beyond himself and burst into our room, waving a newspaper. "Look," he wailed, pointing his finger at my latest article, headed:

"Good morning, house porters of St. Petersburg!"

"You see, they are even roping in the house porters. If I only knew who that wretch was and met him I would shoot him like a dog," and he brandished a pistol. He looked like a madman.

My wife came to my editorial office to tell me the alarming incident. We knew we ought to make an effort to find other quarters. But we had not a minute to spare from our work and so we decided to leave it to fate. Thus we continued to be the lodgers of the despairing stock exchange member up to my arrest. Fortunately neither landlord nor police ever discovered the identity of the lodger, "Vikentyeff" and after my arrest my room was not even searched.

Edits Russian Gazette and Two Other Papers.

At the Soviet I was known under the name of "Yanovsky, from the name of my native village of Yanov. In the press I signed Trotzky. I had to work for three newspapers. Together with Parvus I undertook editing and publishing the small Russian Gazette, which we transformed into a large militant organ of the masses. Within a month the orders reaching us for copies approached half a million. But our mechanical facilities were not equal to such demands. We were only extricated from this dilemma by the government raiding us.

About the same time, by a mutual arrangmeent with the Mensheviks, we established a great political paper, Natchalo. (The Principle, or The Beginning, the Russian word means either.) The circulation of this paper also leaped, not daily, but hourly. The Bolshevist newspaper established a little earlier than ours was making, without Lenin, very feeble progress. When Lenin came he soon put matters right. Relations between the two editorial staffs were cordial; there was no rivalry. Both carried on their defense against bourgeois critics and aimed at a policy of amalgamation. The central committee of the Bolsheviks, with Lenin's participation, unanimously passed a resolution to the effect that in our opinion, the events of the revolution had rendered senseless any further struggle between the two factions. In Natchalo I wrote along the same line. Martov entirely lost his nerve. This used to happen to him at every critical turn.

52 Days of First Soviet Busy Ones for Trotzky.

In addition to the Russian Gazette and Natchalo I was also writing the leaders in the Izvestia, the official organ of the Soviet. The fifty-two days of the existence of the first Soviet were thus filled to the utmost with work—the Soviet, the executive committee, perpetual meetings and three newspapers.

How we managed to live in that whirlpool I cannot say myself. But many things in the past seem incomprehensible, because when one is merely recollecting the element of action is absent. In those days we were active indeed. Not only were we caught in the whirlpool, we were creating the whirlpool ourselves. Some of us even managed to live a private life at the same time and, for instance, attend the new revolutionary theaters.

The Soviet had put a great mass of people on their feet. The workmen were to a man supporters of the Soviet. In the villages there was trouble, as there was among the troops, who, after the Portsmouth Peace Treaty, began returning home from war in the Far East. But the Guards and the Cossacks were still strong. All the elements of a victorious revolution were there, but were not yet all ripe.

Tears Up Manifesto, Scatters Pieces to Wind.

On Oct. 18, the day after publication of the Imperial Manifesto, thousands of people assembled in front of St. Petersburg University still hot from the struggle and drunk with the triumph of the first victory. I shouted to them from the balcony that half a victory was a dangerous thing, that the enemy would be against any peace.

I tore up the Manifesto and threw the torn pieces of paper to the wind. But historical warnings merely act as pin pricks to the mind of the masses. The masses require the school of great events.

I remember two episodes connected with

Byrd's Men Camp for Two Days On Barrier to Study Reflecting Layer's Effect on Radio Waves

Observers, After Tumbling Frequently in Snow and Helping Dogs to Pull Sleds, Get 150 Records of Variations in Signals.

By Russell Owen.

LITTLE AMERICA, Antarctica, July 27.

MEASUREMENTS of the Kennelly-Heavyside layer, which affects the propagation of radio waves by reflection, have been made by Lieut. Malcolm O. Hanson of the Naval Research Laboratory with very satisfactory results. The work entailed a trip 10 miles out on the barrier in uncertain weather and a stay there of 48 hours while observations and photographs were made.

Traveling on the barrier in the winter darkness, particularly with an overcast sky and the possibility of storm, is anything but pleasant. There is no place in the world where it is so easy to get lost—for there are no landmarks—but the party came back safely, although the visibility was poor.

Hanson has been preparing for this trip for some time and will go several times to continue the observations and collect data under various seasonal conditions. Plans and preparations for this important work were made at the Naval Research Laboratory months before the expedition departed.

The measurements already made show that the layer is much higher than in the United States, that in fact a signal sent out and reflected downward travels several hundred miles. The photographs Hanson already has developed show also remarkable fluctuations, indicating rapid movement of the reflecting layer. Detailed study and calibration of the oscillograms will show just how high the layer is and also throw some light on the causes of variation in radio waves which prevail over the Antarctic.

First Attempt.

The first attempt to go out was made during our recent spell of very cold weather when the thermometer hovered around 70 below and showed a desire to stay there for several days. But Hanson was eager to go and Commander Byrd was willing to assume the risk because of the valuable scientific results to be obtained, but mainly after every possible precaution had been taken to ensure the party's safety. Whenever his men have to take risks for further science, the Commander personally sees that every possible thing is done to prevent mishap.

The dogs' noses froze, however, before they could get started and the trip had to be postponed a few days. It was desirable to use dogs because the load of apparatus tents, food and emergency supplies weighed about 600 pounds. There seemed to be nothing for the party to do but to manhaul the sleds for ten miles. The men went out and marked the trail with flags for three miles and then fortunately the weather became a little warmer and it was possible to start in a temperature of 40 below.

There were three men in the party, Hanson, Joe Deganahl as navigator and Norman Vaughan, in charge of four dogs. Vaughan, who is a husky fellow, hitched himself ahead of his dogs and pulled on skiis with them all the way out and all the way back. They left about noon Friday. The sky was overcast but the moon shone through the clouds directly ahead of them in the east and was a great help in navigating. Hanson had also rigged up a searchlight attached to a small battery and with this managed to pick up the flags on the eastern trail. After passing the flags in the first three miles, other flags were set up about 500 feet apart along the old trail toward the Rockefeller mountains. By squinting at the moon now and then and allowing for its movement and by Deganahl's checking up frequently with the compass, a fairly straight trail was made.

All three men traveled on skiis on the way out and in the darkness had many tumbles. It was impossible to see inequalities in the surface and as there are many sastrugi, over-hanging ridges of hard snow with sharp edges, skiis were frequently hocked under them and down went the traveler. Hanson had packed his precious oscillograph on his back for fear that the sled would tip over and the instrument would be injured, but coming back he decided that he turned over more often than the sled did. He also had some dry batteries inside his shirt so they would not freeze and his tumbles were painful as well as annoying.

Able to See Beacon.

The way led over the rolling waves of the barrier surface which stretches for some distance to the east and in the darkness it was difficult to tell whether one was going up hill or down. They reached the place where they decided to camp about 5 o'clock in the afternoon and found to their astonishment that the weather had cleared enough so that when they looked back they could see the electric beacon on the radio tower blinking at them. When Carl Petersen, who was communicating with Hanson from the base, was informed that they were at their destination, he blinked goodnight in Morse to them with the light and shut it off.

Two tents were set up, in one of which Deganahl and Vaughan slept, and in the other Hanson placed his many pieces of apparatus. There was not enough room when he had everything in place for him to sleep if he wanted to, but as he had 24 hours of hourly observations ahead of him, he did not worry about that. Once or twice between observations he tried to curl himself around a primus stove in the middle of the tent but, after nearly kicking over the batteries and other pieces of apparatus, he gave it up. His things had been tested in a tent near the base before the trip had begun and many things changed so that operations would not be affected by the cold. It was fortunate that he did so, for his pitch pipe, which he could not change, froze up occasionally and had to be thawed out over the stove.

Once he was set, Hanson got into communication with Petersen, who had frequent schedules for sending out short waves. A synchronous contactor had been rigged up in the radio room so that Petersen could send out short impulses at the rate of 180 a second and six a second alternately. This, of course, necessitated his working steadily for about 36 hours also. Four waves were used, 82, 60, 45 and 34 meters, for the shorter waves are very unreliable for short distance transmission.

Hanson found that frequently the reflected signals from the Heavyside layer, which traveled hundreds of miles before reaching him, were more distinct than the direct signals and often signals were so blurred by fading from interference that they were almost unrecognizable.

150 Records Made.

During this whole period, Hanson took oscillograms and photographs of the queer things that were happening to the waves and obtained about 150 which show the extraordinary variations to which short waves which pass over the Antarctic between any parts of the world are subjected. The photographs are likely to throw much light on many puzzling phenomena. Sunlight is thought to have a direct connection with

Eads' Plan for Nicaraguan Ship Railway

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

JAMES B. EADS of St. Louis was one of the most eminent engineers of the ages. Two monuments to him exist. One is the Eads Bridge at St. Louis, built 60 years ago, of a unique design; a magnificent work; the first bridge over the Mississippi River at St. Louis; still serving its purpose with no sign of decay. The other is the Eads Jetty at South West Pass, which opened up the Mississippi River to New Orleans and above to ocean steamships in a most wonderful and original manner; still serving its purpose and with the proposed development of the river, will allow steamships of size to go to St. Louis and above. Mention of another wonderful, daring and original plan by James B. Eads follows:

I went to New Orleans the year it held its World's Exposition. The most interesting thing to me there was James B. Eads' model of a ship railway for the Isthmus of Nicaragua. It seemed to me essentially simple—feasible—practicable, and made a deep impression. Eads' claim for it was a cost of about the fourth of a ship canal, and a saving of about one-quarter of the time in transfer from one ocean to the other. Also a saving of many miles in distance over a Panama route, as steamers would not go so far south to use it, with less distance on the other side to their destination; with the same savings in the reverse direction.

These are the days of cement and steel construction. A gigantic mono-ferrolithic structure, carried on reinforced cement piling, incorporated with it, stretching from deep water on the gulf side, to deep water on the Pacific side, could be built, which could be impregnable to winds, waves or earthquakes. On this would be laid the rails for the cars, on which the vessels would be carried across the Isthmus.

The difficulties in the execution of the project would be met by the genius, the ingenuity, and the daring of the American people. The work would pay for its cost in a generation.

Suspects a Plot.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

USUALLY each year at this time, when grain shipments have begun, there is developed a shortage of cars for the movement of zinc ore.

This year is a marked exception, with sidetracks near the mines well stocked with empties and grain shippers reporting a car shortage.

Is this a part of the plan of farm relief, forcing the grain to be held in elevators while prices are forced up by reports of short crops?

But are the farmers holding the wheat in the elevators, or are the owners of the elevators that are bulging with grain the ones to be benefited?

Selah! A political trick to fool the farmer and let the consumer in on higher prices for the benefit of elevator owners, don't you think?

And when another campaign comes along a part of the elevator profits can be collected into a Republican campaign fund. Republican diplomacy, isn't it?

That is easy! Give us another farm relief problem. JESSE A. ZOOK.

Trees and Insect Pests.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I READ with interest an article on your editorial page by J. P. Gallus on "How to Protect Trees from Caterpillars." I hope Mr. Gallus knows his insects, but perhaps he did not make himself clear. It is excellent advice to band your trees with cotton provided there is a species of insects present which will be repelled by the cotton. In St. Louis the most common and destructive caterpillar is the fall web worm. This is the fellow that builds those unsightly webs on our trees and proceeds to eat the leaves under cover. Banding trees to control the web worm is useless as the female adult moths can fly and lay their eggs on the branches of the tree, where they hatch and the young caterpillars commence at once to chew.

In the case of the Tussock moth and the canker worms, banding trees is helpful. The female adults of these species cannot fly, so if a tree is once freed of them, bands will effectively keep them away. However, the Tussock moth and canker worm are not usually in sufficiently large numbers here to do much harm. So if it is the web worm that you wish to keep from your trees, don't think you are helping any by banding. Spraying the trees with arsenate of lead solution is an effective control. Or the webs may be burned or cut off, though this necessitates the removal of some branches.

Mr. Gallus states that he observed caterpillars attempting to climb the trees and lay their eggs. The fact is the eggs are laid by the adult moth, not the caterpillar which is only the larval stage of insect growth. The moth lays the eggs which hatch into caterpillars. The caterpillar or larval stage is the eating and consequently destructive stage. After the caterpillar is full grown it goes into a cocoon and later emerges as a moth.

D. F. WAHL.

LOBBYISTS, GOOD AND BAD.

It is no new condition to which Senator Caraway of Arkansas calls attention in his demand for an investigation of lobbying at the national capital. Everybody knows, of course, that Washington swarms with persons who are seeking to influence legislation. So does every state capital when the Legislature is in session. The descent upon Washington becomes especially marked when, as at present, a tariff revision is under way.

The manager of one of the leading Washington hotels was among those who kept an anxious eye on the Borah resolution proposing to restrict the Senate's consideration of the tariff to the agricultural and related schedules. He heaved a great sigh of relief when the resolution was beaten. The Senate's decision to hold hearings on all the schedules meant capacity business for the hotel.

Senator Caraway is highly justified in pressing his demand. An investigation would throw needed light on the methods of the group that helped to defeat the Walsh resolution for a Senate investigation of the Power Trust. It might bring out some illuminating facts regarding the "social lobby." It might determine whether the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, the National Catholic Welfare Conference and the other religious agencies at the capital have gone beyond their proper sphere of activity. It might serve the desirable purpose of cramping the style of those ex-legislators who use for private ends their privilege of going upon the floors of Congress.

Whatever of public good the proposed inquiry might or might not accomplish in these directions, it would assuredly perform a useful service for the employers of lobbyists. It would show that in many cases the employers are not getting their money's worth. As the Arkansas Senator has pointed out, it is not unusual for a professional lobbyist, taking advantage of facts which are common knowledge in Washington, to send word to interested persons or organizations that he can "fix things" for the passage or defeat, as the case may be, of a given measure, and then, when the vote has resulted as every informed person knew it would result, to claim the credit for the outcome and send his clients a big bill for his "services."

The investigation would demonstrate, also, that the connotation which has grown up about the term "lobbying" is not always warranted. Some of the activities which are commonly described by the term are eminently proper. The lobbyist—to use the word in its broad sense—may perform a perfectly legitimate function for an organization or an industry by giving expert testimony before a congressional committee; he may be a man stationed in Washington to present labor's point of view when the occasion requires; he may be an above-board representative of the United States Chamber of Commerce; he (or in this case she) may be the agent of a woman's organization seeking to promote some measure conceived to be in the public interest. Activities of this kind may at times be overzealous, but to bring them under a blanket ban of condemnation would be to deny the right of petition to Congress.

What Congress should require, as some of the states have done, is the registration of lobbyists, so that the public may know what each one is trying to bring about and for what interests. A bill with this end in view, introduced by Senator Caraway, was passed by the Senate last year but was not acted upon by the House. Its passage would have the salutary effect of plainly separating the sheep among the lobbyists from the goats.

A COUNTRY WITHOUT A NAME OF ITS OWN.

What name to apply correctly to citizens of the United States of America has long troubled the purists. "Americans," they point out, is a loose term, since citizens of some 15 other countries in the Western Hemisphere have an equal claim to the appellation. Latin-Americans, it is well known, resent our taking over the name. Even the "United States" part of the title is not exclusively our property, for there are other nations which use it; for instance, the United States of Brazil. There is even another U. S. A.—the Union of South Africa. Calling ourselves North Americans wouldn't help much, for that would still include Mexicans and Canadians.

Suggestions frequently are made for coining a new name to apply to our country. The latest comes from a newspaper writer in Caracas, Venezuela, who offers, perhaps facetiously, the cumbersome alternatives, "Washingtonlandia" and "Yankeelandia." He would have us call ourselves simply "Yankees" and let it go at that. But we cannot stretch our imagination to picture a gentleman of the Old South introducing himself abroad as a Yankee. Coined names have a notoriously difficult task in winning popular approval, and a suitable one, both convenient and lacking a synthetic ring, remains to be suggested.

Perhaps the best way in the absence of a distinctive name is to use with discretion the two that we have. In speaking of citizens of this country in connection with Europeans or Asiatics, even the purists should not object to calling them Americans. When other inhabitants of this hemisphere enter the discussion, one could refer to "citizens of the United States" without being misunderstood or treading on anyone's toes. At any rate, this Union has become well enough known as the United States to make the meaning perfectly clear to anyone, even the purists, in all instances.

A FARM STORY.

It happened in Texas. Seven years ago—in 1922—a man bought 50 acres of land near Troup for $600. This year he sold tomatoes from two acres for $1200. Besides his feed crops he has 27 acres in cotton. This may not be a quick-rich yarn, but it's a long and cheery distance from a hard-luck tale.

JIMMY'S DAY.

In defense of his St. Louis open golf title Friday, Jimmy Manion carried the war into Africa, led his nearest competitor by ten strokes, and scattered the remains of Old Man Par over the ten thousand hills and twice as many valleys that constitute the Bellerive course. Jimmy's morning round consumed just 67 blows, representing five birdies and an eagle. In the afternoon he added five more birdies to his aviary for a total of 68. Thus on eleven holes of the 36 Prof. Par took his count, while Jimmy was bested by one stroke on only five holes. Altogether the Normandie ace's total score was seven better than par.

Far behind, tied for second place, loped stylistic Clarence Wolff and Big Bertha Whitbread with 145. Eating the dust of these three amateurs, Coleman Morse, Forest Park pro, turned in a card of 148, while southpaw Benny Richter and Francis Schwartz compiled 149's. The one-day tournament was characterized by much good golf, but Manion's sensational performance dulled the efforts of the others. It was Jimmy's day. He drove like Guilford, smote his irons like Tommy Armour, approached with the delicacy of Bobby Jones and putted—well, like Jimmy Manion.

THE FARMER LEARNS TO SELL.

The farmer's ancient plaint about the economic system was based on the fact that he had to buy at the price the other man wanted and had to sell at whatever price the other man saw fit to give. "How much are your overalls?" he had to ask, and then, "How much are you paying for wheat today?" The farmer of today considers himself a business man, as he rightly should, and realizes that he must develop a selling department, just as all manufacturers have done. The agricultural colleges, which formerly taught only production and farm management, now give intensive courses in marketing. Farm organizations give attention to improving stocks and seeds, but also to the all-important problem of selling. The farmer gets his price quotations daily by radio and from his newspapers, and is better able to choose a good time to sell.

In the early days of farm movements there was much talk of eliminating the middle man, but it has now been learned that the middle man has several important functions. He assembles, transports and distributes the crop, grades packs and stores it if necessary, and often extends credit. The present aim of the co-operative groups is to discharge these functions and eliminate whatever unnecessary spread in price there may have been between producer and consumer. By handling large quantities of farm products the co-operative hopes to have a voice in setting the price, leaving the farmer no longer at the mercy of a varying market.

The co-operative groups, which were helpless many times in their evolutionary days because of jealousies and disagreements over policy, seem likely to come into their own shortly, for Mr. Hoover's Farm Board has announced its intention of working through them. Without raising the price to the consumer, the board hopes to benefit the farmer by reducing the costs of marketing, largely through use of the co-operatives' facilities. The board urges a "thorough organization of agriculture for marketing purposes," and pledges its support. Thus the farmer himself may be able to relieve his situation in large part through his newly acquired knowledge of the selling game.

DR. WILSON TALKS SOME MORE.

"They're all out of step but Jim"—so the song went. That is the burden of Dr. Clarence True Wilson's latest prohibition harangue in Collier's Weekly. The eighteenth amendment was bungled. The Volstead law was hurriedly, loosely and badly written. Three Presidents—Woodrow Wilson, Warren G. Harding and Calvin Coolidge—are all lashed by the ministerial tongue, and the late Wayne B. Wheeler is stripped of all his greatness and exposed as an arrogant leader and blundering counselor who blew the Ephesian dome of dry legislation into futile fragments.

Had violation of the Volstead law been made a felony, and the purchaser equally guilty with the vendor, the Demon Rum had long since been moldering in the grave. And that is what would have been done but for the fatally erroneous advice of Lawyer Wheeler.

There must be many prohibitionists, we feel sure, who, mindful of Wayne Wheeler's service to the cause, will wince at this indictment of his memory. Protests will come also from "the ranks of Tuscany." For whatever his defects, Wayne Wheeler was a first class fighting man. He had other qualities. Apart from his obsession he got a lot of fun out of life. He was no death's head in the atmosphere of song and story. He was, one might say, the gayest kill-joy of them all. And one may venture to doubt, too, whether there had ever been an eighteenth amendment or a Volstead law except for Wheeler's organizing genius and practical political skill.

But the king is dead. Long live Dr. Wilson. The army and navy are to be mobilized in an enforcement campaign, and all the scofflaws, not only the bootlegger but his clients, too, are to be jailed. That is the Wilson ukase. Mr. Torquemada should get ready to hand over his crown.

MISSOURI U. IS PUNISHED.

How much the Board of Curators has punished the University of Missouri and its students by suspending Dr. Max Meyer for a year because of his part in the much-discussed sex questionnaire now is becoming even more apparent than before, with the announcement that a 23-year-old girl, a former student assistant, has been placed in charge of Dr. Meyer's department of psychology. The young woman will do the best she can, but seven of the department's nine courses will be dropped for the coming year, leaving only those of an elementary nature. The department, which was developed by Dr. Meyer in his 29 years at the university to a high rank among those of the country, this year will have little claim for serious consideration. Thus the work of two school years is interrupted and the standing of the university is impaired by the disciplining of Dr. Meyer.

It is reported that an emissary was sent east this summer in search of a man to fill Dr. Meyer's place on the faculty, but that in his calls on psychologists to whom he made offers he met only hearty laughter. The university will be without the services of one of its most eminent teachers, and the almost priceless laboratory he built up will be useless for want of anyone capable of handling the delicate devices. Advanced students in psychology must mark time or go to other schools.

Dr. Meyer now is doing research work at the Central Institute for the Deaf in St. Louis, and seems to be bearing up well under his punishment. The university and the students are the real sufferers.

THE FELLOW WHO IS GOING TO PAY THE WAR DEBT.

Thoughts on Our Prosperity

United States, having achieved great prosperity, now faces the question, "What shall we do with it?"; coal a sick industry, oil being exhausted, electric power passing to monopolies; conquest of unemployment one of great problems, another is making physical aspects of country more satisfying and third issue is disarmament.

From the Commencement Address by Zechariah Chafee Jr. at Brown University, Reprinted from The Nation.

THE United States ought to be happy. We have long desired to be the richest nation on earth, and now we are. Like the Village Blacksmith, we can look the whole world in the face, for we owe not any man. Instead, most of the others owe us. We have most of the gold, most of the automobiles, most of the telephones; we buy most of the great pictures even if we do not paint them. We have so much on earth, that we can look forward to very little more in heaven except space enough to park two cars for every family, and a stock market and a tariff which will always be going up. The time seems rapidly approaching when everyone will make so much money in Wall Street that we can all retire and live on our dividends.

And yet we are not particularly happy. Our fellow countrymen, as described by Edith Wharton, Sinclair Lewis and Eugene O'Neill, exhibit very disagreeable states of dissatisfaction, and even such a genial story teller as Ring Lardner presents few characters who have a life that seems worth living.

It is high time to be done with complacency. It has brought us, shrewd as we are in our own occupations, to a national life without planning and without meditation as to results. Coal has long been a sick industry, but the able recommendations of the President's Coal Commission of 1921 have not been followed by one law or one change. Petroleum, perhaps the most magnificent gift that any country ever received, bids fair to be exhausted within a century after the opening of the first oil well, leaving us without fuel for our automobiles and, what is worse, without lubrication for our machinery. Electric power, with all its possibilities of freedom from toil, has been rapidly acquired by a few great groups, each of which challenges the public to find under a bewildering series of corporate shells the elusive pea of actual cash investment. The consumers of power see the Supreme Court taking away the benefits once expected from rate regulation under private ownership, while the power interests fight the alternative of public ownership by secretly buying up the two main sources of public opinion, the teachers and the press.

It is not enough to have prosperity. The vital question is: What are we going to do with it? Shall we let it dribble away as England did hers in the nineteenth century, so that little remains to show for all her past riches? Or shall we employ it in planning and making secure a better world?

All planning requires giving up. And so I venture to suggest to you three sacrifices which we might make in this time of our prosperity.

First, that we devote money and thought without delay or interruption to the permanent conquest of unemployment. It is the most serious defect of our existing economic system, that men should want to work and not be able to do so. Yet we never bother about it until a depression sets in and then we are helpless. What are we doing now in prosperity to guard against unemployment when bad times return? It has begun already from new and disquieting causes. The very inventions which we hail as progress have thrown men out of jobs on an unprecedented scale.

Second, we might set ourselves to make the physical aspects of this country more satisfying. We could use public funds much more liberally to preserve and plant forests, which yield too slow a return to attract sufficient private investment. What we have already accomplished in parks and roadways reveals the vast possibilities of common enterprise. It is not enough, however, to get better roadbeds and worse roadsides. We only drive faster and farther to see less that is worth while. Nobody who has motored from Princeton to New York City can bear to visualize what the territory around all our great cities will be like 50 years hence, unless every lot owner is willing to forego some of his freedom of control over his own property.

Finally, we might sacrifice our national isolation and our armaments. The eleventh of November, 1918, should have been a turning point in the life of the world. Every one of us can remember, as though it were yesterday, his emotions on that morning. At last it was over, and we would do all in our power that it should never happen again. Who would have foreseen on that day that 10 years later we should be celebrating the anniversary of the armistice with a speech headlined in the New York Times: "President Calls for More Cruisers"?

We are told that all these cruisers, submarines, gas bombs, and war planes are only prudent insurance. Of all analogies, this is the most fallacious. Fires are not caused by insurance—at least not by the kind decent people take out; but armaments do cause war. It is all very well to say that they are only for defense.

Enough of compromise. The way to disarm is to disarm. Our own history provides a fruitful precedent. In 1816, at the close of a bitter war, John Quincy Adams proposed to the British Government a mutual reduction of all naval armaments upon the Great Lakes.

> The degree to which they shall be reduced (he wrote) is left at the option of Great Britain. The greater the reduction, the more acceptable it will be to the President of the United States; and most acceptable of all, should it be agreed to maintain on either side . . . no other force than such as may be necessary for the collection of the revenue.

Real disarmament followed. Not a warship, not a fort, on our Northern border. We threw away our so-called insurance, and we lived without fear. Let us make every frontier with every nation like the Canadian frontier.

WASHINGTON
DAY BY DAY

WASHINGTON, July 27.

THIS is the story of how a member of the United States Senate saw Washington for the first time because of his ability to ride a freight train unseen.

The Senator is David Aiken Reed of Pennsylvania. The story dates back to 1897.

Young Reed was a student at Princeton. It was on the eve of William McKinley's inauguration as President of the United States. The event was a subject of much discussion on the campus.

Reed and a classmate made a wager with two other freshmen that they could hobo their way to the capital in time to witness the inauguration. The quartet set out.

The other two didn't get very far. At Philadelphia they were caught, and a Justice of the Peace sent them back to Princeton. But Reed and his friend pushed on. By freight and trolley they reached Baltimore. From Baltimore to Washington they "rode the rods," arriving in the cold dawn of March 4. Both were hungry, cold, dirty and broke.

ONCE here young Reed started out to get a check cashed. He chose the most promising looking place and presented his demand for $15.

"Who are you?" his chosen benefactor asked gruffly, looking first at the check and then at the two grimy faces before him.

"I am the son of Judge James H. Reed of Pittsburg," came the prompt answer.

"Oh, you are, are you?" jeered the skeptical one. "And I suppose you there," looking scornfully at Reed's friend, "are the son of President McKinley."

The two walked mournfully out into the street. Later on in the day they were fortunate enough to meet up with a friend. From him they borrowed $20 and proceeded to enjoy the inauguration.

But they didn't "ride the rods" back. They saw to it that enough was saved out of the $20 for train fare back to Princeton.

THIS same Reed will be much in the public eye for the next few months. As a member of the Senate Finance Committee he has spent long and arduous hours this summer framing the tariff bill for presentation when the Senate reconvenes in August.

Upon his shoulders will fall much of the burden of waging the fight on the floor. Coming from Pennsylvania, he is, naturally, a high protectionist, although it is an open secret that he is sore at heart over some of the schedules in the bill passed by the House.

About six feet tall, slender, smooth-shaven and keen-eyed, he has everything about him that denotes a man of action. He speaks slowly, and his method of thought is direct and definite.

To talk with him is to be reminded of the college professor, all of us have known, who used to deplore the decadence of literature because the magazines would not print the articles he had written on the classics.

BRIDGE AT ST. CHARLES TO BE FREE BY 1931

Judge Hodgdon, Chairman of Committee, Bases Prediction on Report.

Tolls will not be charged on the highway bridge across the Missouri River at St. Charles after the end of next year, it was predicted yesterday by Probate Judge Hodgdon of St. Louis County, chairman of the St. Charles Free Bridge Committee, in commenting on the report just made for the business of the first half of this year.

The committee took the bridge over from a private company for $1,250,000 in August, 1926, and is making payment by retiring the corporation's securities out of earnings from tolls. Not quite $600,000, or less than half, remains due, Judge Hodgdon said, and he expects to get a check from the Government next month for about $100,000, as a refund on Federal income taxes, which have been remitted. This check will be applied immediately toward the purchase.

Out of earnings for the first six months of 1929 the committee has paid to the retiring company $81,085. The committee also maintains the structure and this year had the unusual expense of $30,000 for a new floor.

Traffic over the bridge, which carries United States highways Nos. 40 and 61, and is the direct connection to St. Charles, has been growing in volume constantly. Therefore, revenue during the next year and a half is expected to be proportionately larger than it has been. Interest charges are decreasing, also, which helps hasten the time when the bridge will become free. Experience has shown that the period of heaviest traffic is between July and January, Judge Hodgdon said.

MY LIFE---

By Leon Trotzky

the life of the St. Petersburg Soviet. One on Oct. 29, when the city was full of rumors of a pogrom prepared by the Black Hundreds. The deputies, coming straight from their respective factories and works to the meeting of the Soviet, showed from the tribune specimens of the arms which they were preparing against the attacks of these Black Hundreds.

St. Petersburg Soviet Is Trapped in Hall.

They waved in the air Finnish knives, knuckle dusters, daggers and wire whips, but it was all done more as a lark than as a real threat, and many men cracked jokes as they brandished their arms. They seemed to imagine that their readiness to resent was alone sufficient to solve the problem. The great majority did not yet realize that it was a struggle for life or death. This lesson they were taught a little later in December.

On the evening of Dec. 3 the St. Petersburg Soviet was surrounded by troops. All the doors and exits were closed. From the choir where the Soviet held its meeting I called down into the great hall where hundreds of deputies were already crowding, "No active resistance, and do not give up your arms to the enemy." So the workmen in the great hall, already surrounded by detachments of guards, infantry, cavalry and artillery, destroyed their arms. With a skilled hand they struck a Mauser against a revolver and a revolver against a Mauser.

It still sounded like a joke, as it did on Oct. 29. But in the clash and din of the breaking up of the arms there could already be discerned the gnashing of teeth of the proletariat.

Czarism's Bankruptcy Proclaimed by Arrests.

The arrest of the members of the Soviet took place on the second day after the publication of the so-called Finance Manifesto, which proclaimed the inevitable bankruptcy of Czarism and gave a definite warning that the debt commitments of the Romanoffs would not be recognized as binding upon them by the victorious people. The French market replied a few months later by a new loan to the Czar of three-quarters of a milliard francs. The reactionary and liberal press was scornful over the helpless threat of our Soviet to the European bankers in connection with the Czar's loans.

Afterward an effort was made to forget that Manifesto. But it refused to be forgotten. The financial bankruptcy of the Czarism prepared by the whole of its past, burst upon the world together with its military defeat. Then, after the victory of the Revolution, the decree of the Soviet (Council) of People's Commissars, dated Feb. 10, 1918, declared all the Czar's debts canceled. This decree has force of law even today.

Those who assert that the October Revolution does not recognize any debt obligation are wrong. The Revolution fully recognizes ITS OWN commitments. The commitment which it incurred on Dec. 2, 1905, it met and realized on Feb. 10, 1918. To the creditors of Czarism the Revolution has every right to say, "Gentlemen, you were duly warned in good time."

In this respect, as in all others, the year 1905 prepared for 1917.

be a board of directors, five representing the soviet Government and five the Chinese Government, and that one of the five appointed by the Chinese should be president. The general manager should be a Russian, and the directors should have a quorum of seven present at any meeting with a vote of six members to be effective. The Russians have stayed away from the meetings, so that it has been impossible to get a quorum to transact business, and therefore the actual authority over the railway has remained in the hands of the Russian general manager.

That situation has led to a series of incidents causing acute friction between the Russian and Chinese Governments. For example, in January, 1926, when the late Marshal Chang Tso-lin wished to move some of his troops over the railway, he was told by the Russian manager that he would have to pay cash in advance for their transportation. Chang Tso-lin promptly arrested the Russian manager. Thereupon the soviet government sent an ultimatum to China demanding his release and intimating that if he were not released within a certain number of hours, troops would be sent to Manchuria to effect the release.

Since that time China has gradually taken back certain of the administrative agencies of the railway. She has taken over most of the shipping, which formerly was operated on the rivers by the railway company, has taken over the schools in the railroad zone, and also the telegraphs.

It is stated that the Chinese intend to continue the process until the railway comes completely under Chinese control. There is, therefore, almost a head-on collision between Russia and China over the administration of the Chinese Eastern Railway. (This was written in 1927. The present crisis was brought about by the seizure of the Chinese Eastern by the Chinese and the expulsion of the Russian general manager and several hundred Russian employes.)

Other Clashes of Interest

In addition there is a clash of viewpoints between Russia and Japan relating to the building of the railroads through Central Manchuria. They are legally not Japanese lines, but Chinese. Only one of them, that from Changchun to Kirin, appears to be operated by the South Manchurian Railway Co. In general the South Manchurian Railway Co. advances the capital necessary to build the lines and acts as purchasing agent. Sometimes it builds lines under contract, and usually after the roads have been built and transferred to Chinese administration two or three prominent positions are reserved for skilled Japanese railroad administrators.

The most important of these lines is the one which was opened to traffic in 1926, running north to Tsitsihar. It was built under arrangements similar to those described preceding, and Russia formally and vigorously protested against the building of the line on the ground that it interfered with the Russian interests.

In general, it may be said that Russia regards Central and Northern Manchuria as constituting a Russian sphere of interest. This view is based ultimately upon the treaties between Russia and Japan in 1907, 1910 and 1916. It is to be remembered also that in the period of railway competition in China, the competing governments established among themselves the tacit principle of not allowing any parallel or competing lines. The interpretation of competition has included lines coming within a hundred or two hundred miles, or connecting with or crossing an existing line.

Railroad Accord of 1910

In 1907, and more specifically in 1910, there was an agreement between Japan and Russia dividing Manchuria between them for railroad building and similar purposes. Northern and Central Manchuria were to be a Russian sphere and Southern Manchuria a Japanese sphere. The Russians, however, are not now in a position legally to maintain any protest on the basis of the old secret provisions of treaties which have been disowned by the Soviet Government.

Japan, in co-operation with China, is now carrying on a system of railroad expansion in a zone which Russia regards as closed. There is a line running up to the Chinese Eastern Railway to Tsitsihar. Another line north of Harbin has been constructed for about 50 miles. The plan is to extend it to Aigun on the Amur River. A whole new system is thus developing in Northern Manchuria.

Another line has been built and is being operated by the South Manchurian Railway from Changchun to Kirin. In all probability it will connect with the Japanese line from the Korean seacoast to the Korean-Manchurian border, and, if that plan is carried out, there will be a railway under a measure of Japanese control running from a Korean seaport direct to Changchun.

Furthermore, there are plans for the extension of the railroad from Changchun to Taonan. The route is now being surveyed by Chinese engineers, and when completed will make a new railroad across Manchuria, made up of different links which, when united, will make a line east and west about 150 miles south of the Chinese Eastern Railway and in competition with it, and under Chinese-Japanese control. Whenever these lines are built Russia protests.

Roads of Different Gauge

The outstanding feature, perhaps, of this whole expansion in Central and Northern Manchuria is that the new railroad lines are built on the standard railroad gauge, 4 feet 8½ inches, while the Russian lines are built on the broad gauge of 5 feet. All of these lines, therefore, are feeders for the South Manchurian Railway, which is a standard-gauge line. They are not direct feeders to the Chinese Eastern Railway.

Moreover, the fact is to be remembered that in case of military necessity it is a comparatively simple matter to adapt a broad gauge to a standard track by moving in one rail, whereas it is difficult to build the new track necessary for the reverse process. The situation is therefore that there is a direct clash of policy between Russia and Japan over their railroad expansion in Central Manchuria.

There is also a difference of policy between Japan and China. The Japanese Government recently made an official protest against the building by the Chinese of a railroad from Mukden through Hailung to Kirin, on the ground that it infringed one of their earlier concessions. This fact shows that the railroad problem in Manchuria is three-cornered, and not simply a problem between Russia and Japan.

The greatest difference between Japan and China, however, relates to the territory in the southern strip of the Liaotung peninsula in which Dairen is situated. In 1898 this territory was leased by China to Russia for 25 years, but the lease was transferred to Japan in 1905, after the Russo-Japanese war. It would therefore have expired in 1923, but in the so-called "Twenty-one Demands" made by Japan in 1915 it was definitely stipulated that this lease should be extended from 25 to [illegible] years.

If the treaty made by Japan with China as a consequence of these demands is regarded as valid, the Japanese have a legal lease which will not terminate until 1997. The Chinese, however, regard the treaty extension of the lease as invalid and of no effect.

There is, then, a vigorous clash of interests and policies between each of these three Powers in Manchuria. In their economic aspect the differences appear to be of much the same character as those which existed between American railways 50 years ago. Apart from political influences, there is no reason to doubt that they might be settled by compromise and on a commercial and business-like basis.

It is, however, very evident to students of the Far East that the present situation in Manchuria is very much like the situation that existed there before the Russo-Japanese war. It is, therefore, an acute example of the difficult complication of economic development by political and strategic interests, and as such it gives cause for considerable apprehension to those who are concerned with the maintenance and development of peace and international co-operation in the Pacific.

GROUP TO VISIT STATE FAIR ON ST. LOUIS DAY, AUG. 20

Chamber of Commerce Organizing Delegation to Make Trip on Special Train.

To foster a closer relationship between St. Louis and its surrounding agricultural territory, the Chamber of Commerce will organize a delegation to journey in a body to the Missouri State Fair at Sedalia in observance of "St. Louis Day," Aug. 20.

Dillon T. Stevens is chairman of the Agriculture Committee of the Chamber, which is sponsoring the trip, and former Mayor Kiel is chairman of the St. Louis Day Committee. Virtually every civic and commercial organization in the city will be invited to send a representative. Details will be discussed at a meeting at the Chamber Tuesday.

According to tentative plans, the delegation will travel to Sedalia on a special train, returning the same day.

U. S. TRADE BOARD TO STUDY SUIT AGAINST PAPER FIRMS

Asks for Certified Copy of Petition Based on Purchase of Newspapers.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 27.—A request that a certified copy of the petition filed in William Lavarre's $2,500,000 suit against the International Paper Co. and the International Paper & Power Co. be sent to the Federal Trade Commission, was received here today by C. E. Hinnant, Clerk of Court of Richland County.

Lavarre filed suit July 23 against the Paper & Power Co. charging it had conspired to violate its agreement to lend him money to purchase newspapers. He also charged efforts were made to suppress news of the Federal Trade Commission's hearing in Washington.

BRITAIN RENEWS TALK OF SINGAPORE BASE

Parleying With Australia on Subject of Building Far Eastern Naval Station.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 27.—It is learned from responsible quarters that the British Government is now in communication with the Australian Government on the subject of the construction of the Singapore naval base.

The future of the great Singapore naval base, link in British defenses on her line of communications to the Far East and Australia, has been discussed only briefly in the House of Commons by the Labor Government.

On July 8 Prime Minister MacDonald stated that the British dominions would be consulted regarding the future of the naval base, the construction of which has been attacked and defended in political circles. Until the Government's policy had been determined, MacDonald said, work on the base was going on just as the last Government had left it.

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, July 27.—The hope that no alteration in the policy of imperial defense would be made by the British Government without consultation with the dominions, was expressed today by Sir Joseph Ward, Prime Minister of New Zealand.

MEXICAN STATES ORDERED TO GIVE UP CHURCH PROPERTY

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, July 27.—The Department of Interior today instructed Governors of all states to return to the Federal Government such church property, buildings, and the like now in state use so that it may be returned to the church.

Many municipal and state Governments converted various church buildings into schools during their period of disuse by the clergy.

To Photograph Bears From Air.

NEW YORK, July 27.—James A. Stillman and Joseph H. Durell, bankers, are to fly to get movie close-ups of grizzlies in the wilds of Alaska. They will leave early next month by train and boat for Seward. From anchorage they will fly four hours to a camp prepared by guides sent ahead. They plan to take 6000 feet of film of big game.

many phenomena collected with the Kennelly-Heavyside layer and, as this is a period of winter darkness, he now will be able to compare conditions with these obtained as the sun returns and during the 24-hour day.

During the time Hanson was working the other two helped him when it was possible. Deganahl did the cooking while Vaughan took care of the dogs. Vaughan had an amusing experience with Dinny, his lead dog. He took Dinny to bed with him one night, permitting the animal to sleep on the foot of his sleeping bag. In the morning Vaughan moved and awakened the dog. The animal decided he wanted to go outside immediately. The entrance to the tents are like a long bag or sleeve tied in the end so that snow cannot enter the tent. Dinny made a dive at this tied entrance and was snapped back into the tent. That astonished him a little and he looked at the hole, made another dive for it and this time hit it so hard that he forced an opening. He walked out quite proud of himself.

The dogs behaved well both on the way out and coming back, despite their long vacation in the tunnels under the snow. They seemed in perfect condition. After Hanson had completed his work, he packed up the things he wanted to bring back and left some of his material in a tent and the antenna in place for the next experiment. Then the party started back. It had become much warmer and the sled moved more easily but it was hard work, nevertheless, traveling over the rough snow with frequent tumbles.

Snow Like Sand.

One of the peculiarities of Antarctic snow is that under the extremely cold temperature, it becomes almost like sand and hauling a sled over it is like dragging it over dirt. But with the rising temperature the sled moved with less friction. Vaughan was in the lead at the head of his dogs, able to follow the sled tracks made on the outward journey most of the time. The tracks frequently disappeared, however, and then the party went carefully and hunted around until they found a flag and Deganahl got compass bearings. Most of the time, when on one of the ridges, the three could see the beacon light on the tower and when they were about three-quarters of the way in, Peterson blinked to them that there was a chicken dinner on the table and they had better hurry. They arrived in camp after about four hours of tumbling and pulling, tired and with ravenous appetites but having thoroughly enjoyed their trip.

Commander Byrd was particularly pleased when he heard of the scientific results of the trip and also that the men had been able to find their way with such certainty over a surface which gives absolutely no indication of direction. It is easy to get off the track on dark days, even walking between the two main houses of the camp, a distance of only 200 yards.

William Fox Leaves Hospital.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 27.—William Fox, moving picture magnate, who was injured seriously in the collision between his automobile and another, two weeks ago, in which his chauffeur was killed, left Massad County Hospital tonight. PERMIT GRANTED FOR $30,000,000 POWER PROJECT

Public Service Commission Authorizes Union Electric to Buy Bagnell, Mo., Dam Site.

FIXES PRICE AT $966,939

Of This $200,000 Is to Pay Missouri Hydro-Electric Co. for Work It Has Done.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 27.—The State Public Service Commission today granted the application of the Union Electric Light and Power Co. of St. Louis for authority to buy the site for its proposed $30,000,000 hydro-electric power project on the Osage River near Bagnell, Mo., and issued the company a certificate of convenience and necessity to construct, maintain and operate a dam and power plant.

The site is to be purchased from the Missouri Hydro-Electric Power Co., which about two years ago started preliminary work on the project, then abandoned it when the company encountered financial difficulties.

The commission, in its order, said: "We find that the construction of this project will be of great economic benefit, not only to the city of St. Louis, but to all of the communities along the transmission line and to Miller, Morgan, Camden and Benton Counties, which are directly affected by the construction of the dam and power plant."

Hydro-Electric Started Work.

Walter Cravens and R. W. Street of Kansas City were the principal promoters of the Missouri Hydro-Electric Power Co. That project suffered when Cravens became involved in the crash of the Joint Stock Land Bank at Kansas City. The commission in January, 1926, granted a certificate of necessity for this project, but this expired. Street has devoted his entire time to the project from Jan. 1, 1925, and from then until May 1, 1925, drew $500 a month salary and $800 a month since May, 1925.

The bulk of the power generated by the project will go to the St. Joseph Lead Co. at River Mines, Mo. The company has contracted for approximately 150,000,000 kilowatts a year, one of the largest single power contracts ever entered into. The contract provides the power must be furnished by October, 1931. The Union Electric Co. plans to complete the project in about two years. A force of 3000 men will be employed in the construction.

For Sale at St. Louis Rate.

Other power that the project produces will be sold in St. Louis, where it is to be furnished at the St. Louis rate. Power companies on the lines of the new project will be enabled to buy power at far less than the present cost of generation, the commission says. The load of Union Electric is increasing at such a rate that it would have had to build a steam generating plant in Illinois if it had not been allowed to undertake the Bagnell project, the commission said.

The commission's action today follows the action of the Federal Power Commission in granting a license to Union Electric to purchase the site and erect and maintain the project, together with electric transmission lines to River Mines, St. Francois County, and St. Louis. The dam and site will cost $20,000,000 and the transmission lines and equipment about $10,000,000.

The commission, in its order today, authorized Union Electric company to pay the Missouri Hydro-Electric Power Co. $766,939.27 plus interest from May 31, 1929, for the site and preliminary work already performed on the project, in addition to $200,000 "as a reasonable sum to be paid to the seller for preliminary services and promotion fees in connection with the Osage River project." This is not to be used in future valuations or for rate making purposes, however, the commission stipulated.

KILLED RETURNING TO ST. LOUIS

Car Driven by Claude Skaggs Crashes Into Telephone Pole.

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark., July 27.—Claude Skaggs, 36 years old, a welder of St. Louis, died this morning of injuries suffered when his automobile dived off Highway No. 61 and crashed into a telephone pole near Joiner. Skaggs' companion, A. Kintz, also of St. Louis, said he was asleep in the back seat when the crash came. When he regained consciousness, he walked to a farmhouse for help. Both men had been working at Memphis for several weeks and were returning to St. Louis for a vacation. Skaggs' neck was broken. Kintz suffered minor injuries. Skaggs is survived by his widow and three children who live at 6430 Idaho street, St. Louis.

Germany's Oldest Grapevine Dead.

OBERLUSTADT, Germany July 27.—The oldest grapevine in Germany is dead. For 400 years it grew on a private estate, producing its 75 gallons of wine regularly every year. But, after the severe weather last winter, no new shoots appeared.

Hand-Carved Furniture 500 Years Old Used Here

Skill of Flemish Carvers Beautifies Dozen Pieces Brought From Dusseldorf—No Nails Used.

Five hundred years ago a Flemish woodcarver and his apprentice sons fashioned from the rough oaks of their countryside furniture for a family of such high nobility that its coat of arms could bear the insignia of the Order of the Golden Fleece. Today a dozen of the pieces dignify the home of Dr. George S. Hessenbruch, a consulting engineer, at 550 Ridge avenue, Webster Groves.

The furniture comes from a period rarely represented in museums, let alone seen in private American homes. What it is worth Dr. Hessenbruch does not know, for as he explains, his field is electrochemistry, not antique furniture.

The beautifully carved pieces came into his possession recently after his mother broke up her home in Dusseldorf, Germany. It has been in the family more than a century, he knows, but beyond that he is unfamilier with its history. His father, a steel manufacturer, who took an intense delight in the handsome furnishings of his large home, was a thorough student of furniture designs and their periods.

Carving Is Remarkable.

Only two elements were needed by the builders, oak timber and wrought iron for hinges and locks, but many are the striking features produced. Outstanding, of course, is the carving. Lions bearing the two-starred shield, women lute players, knights in armor, barking dogs, faces of old men with Von Tirpitz beards, sharply clawed feet and countless other figures were cut into the hard wood. So skillfully carved are the corner uprights of several of the pieces that they look as if some giant had twisted them in his hands in the manner of the old-style washwoman wringing clothes.

One of the most striking devices is that of the secret drawers in the arms of the "love seat." Pushing down on the lion's tongue releases a spring which permits a long narrow drawer to be withdrawn. Simple in their unadorned beauty are the flat tops, a distinct characteristic of fifteenth century Flemish furniture.

Not a nail or a screw was driven into them. Nor was glue used. The ancient woodcarver had a better method—he depended on tight fit. And tight they were, so tight that very few mortices are supported with dowels.

Won't Fit in Apartment.

How far the furniture is removed from the present-day urban way of living is clearly shown by an attempt to visualize pieces of such dimensions in a city apartment. Wall space is required, and wall space is something apartments do not have. The dining room in the Dusseldorf home out of which came the buffet, contained also a mate buffet, a large table, 10 table chairs, two armchairs, a serving table, two drawer cabinets, a corner cabinet—and still there was plenty of room.

Dr. Hessenbruch, the owner, came to St. Louis 30 years ago after earning the degrees of Mechanical Engineer and Electrical Engineer at Charlottenburg and Doctor of Philosophy at the University of Berlin.

For many years he was a power plant superintendent for the Union Electric Co. and later chief engineer for the Texas Gulf Corporation. Before he left Berlin he spent a year in the German bureau of standards. While still a student he was an assistant to Prof. Slaby, the distinguished researcher in electricity, and took some of the earliest pictures in Roentgen-ray photography.

Dr. Hessenbruch's research has won him many honors, including membership in the Legion of Honor, and the Golden Palms, the highest of French awards for scientific achievement. During the World War he was a major in the chemical warfare service. His sideline is coal-tar by-products.

Realizing the rarity of the old furniture, Dr. Hessenbruch is always willing to show it to visitors who come, with or without an introduction.

WOMAN SUES BOARD OF BAPTIST MISSIONS

Seeks to Dissolve Charter and Alleges Payments to Patient Were Insufficient.

A suit to dissolve the charter of the St. Louis Baptist Mission Board on the ground it is an unlawful corporation was filed in Circuit Court yesterday in behalf of Robert Merritt Knight, a patient at the State Institution for Feeble Minded at Marshall, Mo. The suit was filed by Knight's guardian, Mrs. Nellie Cole McIntyre. It is set forth that the defendant corporation has possession of trust funds totaling $21,321 for Knight's benefit but has failed to supply sufficient of the income for his proper needs and has converted some of the earnings to its own use.

Says Finance Business Illegal.

The guardian asks that she be named as trustee and that the board be required to render an accounting. As to the demand for dissolution of the charter, she alleges that defendant is illegally in the finance business, by which it accumulates large funds and other sums for profit in its capacity as a trustee, eventually becoming beneficiary. It is contended by counsel that such practice is contrary to the spirit of the benevolent statute under which the board was incorporated.

Knight has been a patient in the State institution since 1907, having been placed there by his mother. Subsequently his cousin, Miss Ella M. Cole of South Bridge, Mass., contributed $20,000 to a trust fund for his benefit, and an uncle, Harrison Cole, contributed the balance. Miss Cole made her original donation in 1917 with the minister and missionary board of the Northern Baptist Conference, and it was later, with her consent, transferred to the St. Louis Baptist Mission Board. She agreed that any portion of the income not needed for Knight should be applied on the salary of the Rev. S. E. Ewing, secretary of the board. It was further provided that, after Knight's death, the trust fund shall become the property of the board for its purposes.

Alleges Inadequate Payments.

Knight's guardian charges that the board has paid to the State for Knight's maintenance only $210 a year, which, she avers, is less than one-half what it costs the taxpayers for his keep. Nor has the board supplied the ward with proper clothing although the income from the trust fund is over $1200 a year, the plaintiff sets forth. Mrs. McIntyre points out in the suit that, if Knight had been placed in a private sanitarium with special medical treatment and care, he could have improved mentally. But he was permitted, she states, to remain practically a pauper patient and is now suffering from a cancerous growth and is still mentally deficient.

The Rev. Ewing said yesterday he had not been served with the suit, and until he had seen the petition, he did not care to comment. He added, however, the board was in possession of the funds for Knight's benefit and had made proper accounting of all items. The office of the board is in the Security Building.

U. S. AND BRITAIN NEXT TO DISCUSS NAVAL FORMULA

Dawes, Gibson and MacDonald to Confer on Ways of Determining Comparative Strengths.

TO FIX HOW FAR RULE SHALL APPLY

Secretary Stimson Expresses Gratification at Japan's Willingness to Cut Armament.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—A determination of the formula proposed by the United States as a basis for future naval reduction will next occupy Prime Minister MacDonald and United States Ambassador Dawes in their discussions in London.

By the proposed formula the comparative strength of fighting units would be reached by a consideration of the elements of speed, age, armor, gun power and other factors in addition to that of the size of the units. Roughly speaking, it would deal with a determination of the comparative value of a British cruiser of 6000 tons, armed with 6-inch guns and built in 1923, and an American cruiser of 10,000 tons, armed with 8-inch guns and built in 1928.

Hugh S. Gibson, United States Ambassador to Belgium, and head of the American delegation to the League of Nations Preparatory Disarmament Commission, first proposed the formula in a speech before the commission April 22.

Gibson Going to London.

Gibson, Secretary of State Stimson announced today, will return to London Monday for further naval conferences with Dawes. After his arrival in London, Dawes immediately began conferences with MacDonald on the naval question and enlisted the assistance of Gibson. In the forthcoming visit, during which Gibson is expected to confer with MacDonald as well as Dawes, the functions of the formula will be discussed.

One of the factors which wil be taken into consideration b MacDonald, Dawes and Gibson i their conferences is that which wa pointed out by President Hoove in his statement Wednesday announcing suspension of construction of three cruisers pending the outcome of the naval discussions when he remarked that the cruise strength of Great Britain "considerably exceeds" that of the Unite States at the present time.

Since the policy of equality o naval strength between the tw nations has been agreed upon, th feeling in official circles is th some consideration must now b given the question of how equalit or parity can be attained.

It was pointed out that parit between the two nations, with con sideration of their tonnages alon would either necessitate the furth er construction of cruisers by th United States or a considerable de crease in the British fleet.

To Seek Limit of Application.

Since the formula contemplate consideration also of the elemen of speed, age, guns, etc., the lengt to which it is to be applied—or limit on its application—must no be determined.

In official circles it is noted th Gibson's trip coincides with th adjournment of Parliament an that MacDonald will thus hav more time to discuss the gener situation with the American rep resentatives.

Since much ground must nece sarily be covered, this latest prob lem being only one of many whic must be considered before any f nal agreement is reached, it felt in official circles that som time must elapse before anythi definite is announced by eithe Government.

In view of the amount of tech nical details which must be di cussed in connection with th formula and other matters, an preliminary naval conferenc which might be contemplated b MacDonald, it is believed her will involve technical as well

ROBS PAYMASTER, MISSES $500

Returning from a bank with $500 concealed in his coat pocket, Russell Thomasson, paymaster for the Morgan Bros. Hauling Co., 2922 North Broadway, was held up by an armed highwayman who stepped into his path from a hallway between Tenth and Eleventh streets on St. Louis avenue at 12:55 p. m. yesterday.

After taking $15 from Thomasson's trouser pockets, the robber fled, overlooking the $500. He ran west in St. Louis avenue and escaped.

U. S. AND BRITAIN NEXT TO DISCUSS NAVAL FORMULA

Dawes, Gibson and MacDonald to Confer on Ways of Determining Comparative Strengths.

TO FIX HOW FAR RULE SHALL APPLY

Secretary Stimson Expresses Gratification at Japan's Willingness to Cut Armament.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—A determination of the formula proposed by the United States as a basis for future naval reduction will next occupy Prime Minister MacDonald and United States Ambassador Dawes in their discussions in London.

By the proposed formula the comparative strength of fighting units would be reached by a consideration of the elements of speed, age, armor, gun power and other factors in addition to that of the size of the units. Roughly speaking, it would deal with a determination of the comparative value of a British cruiser of 6000 tons, armed with 6-inch guns and built in 1923, and an American cruiser of 10,000 tons, armed with 8-inch guns and built in 1928.

Hugh S. Gibson, United States Ambassador to Belgium, and head of the American delegation to the League of Nations Preparatory Disarmament Commission, first proposed the formula in a speech before the commission April 22.

Gibson Going to London.

Gibson, Secretary of State Stimson announced today, will return to London Monday for further naval conferences with Dawes. After his arrival in London, Dawes immediately began conferences with MacDonald on the naval question and enlisted the assistance of Gibson. In the forthcoming visit, during which Gibson is expected to confer with MacDonald as well as Dawes, the functions of the formula will be discussed.

One of the factors which will be taken into consideration by MacDonald, Dawes and Gibson in their conferences is that which was pointed out by President Hoover in his statement Wednesday announcing suspension of construction of three cruisers pending the outcome of the naval discussions, when he remarked that the cruiser strength of Great Britain "considerably exceeds" that of the United States at the present time.

Since the policy of equality of naval strength between the two nations has been agreed upon, the feeling in official circles is that some consideration must now be given the question of how equality or parity can be attained.

It was pointed out that parity between the two nations, with consideration of their tonnages alone, would either necessitate the further construction of cruisers by the United States or a considerable decrease in the British fleet.

To Seek Limit of Application.

Since the formula contemplates consideration also of the elements of speed, age, guns, etc., the length to which it is to be applied—or a limit on its application—must now be determined.

In official circles it is noted that Gibson's trip coincides with the adjournment of Parliament and that MacDonald will thus have more time to discuss the general situation with the American representatives.

Since much ground must necessarily be covered, this latest problem being only one of many which must be considered before any final agreement is reached, it is felt in official circles that some time must elapse before anything definite is announced by either Government.

In view of the amount of technical details which must be discussed in connection with the formula and other matters, any preliminary naval conference which might be contemplated by MacDonald, it is believed here, will involve technical as well as political discussions. The London discussions also involve the passing of full details of the talks to the French, Italian and Japanese Governments who are equally interested in any progress which is made toward naval reduction.

Word from Tokio that the Japanese Government is considering a curtailment of naval construction in view of the announcements by Hoover and MacDonald on naval suspensions this week, was not received with any great surprise in Washington official circles.

It is pointed out that the Japanese Government has announced on several occasions that it is willing to agree to any steps which will look toward a constructive saving in naval expenditures.

Stimson said he had no official confirmation of any move having been made by the Japanese, but he was gratified at the report that such action might be taken.

Machinists' Union Head Rakes Suspension of Work on Warships.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—N. P. Alifas, president of District No. 44 of the International Association of Machinists, said today that his association opposed the suspension of a part of the cruiser building program by President Hoover and that a formal protest was planned.

The President acted without authority, Alifas said, when he called a halt on construction work on the three ships to be built in navy yards. Alifas asserted that the order would work a great hardship on union workers employed in navy yards, and added he had talked the situation over with A. O. Wharton, president of the International Association of Machinists and that Wharton approved his stand. Alifas also said he had presented his union's view to Secretary of the Navy Adams.

MILITARY TRAINING CAMP IN LAST WEEK

Parade Maneuvers and Endurance Tests on Jefferson Barracks Program.

Officers of the Sixth Infantry, regulars all, outlined plans yesterday for the final intensive week of training for 1600 civilian soldiers, who, since July 8, have been drilling, firing on the range, slugging each other in boxing bouts, and swimming in the tank at Jefferson Barracks.

It will be mainly a week of lengthy parade ground maneuvers, and of successive physical endurance tests. Each rookie was weighed in on entering camp, and the size of his biceps, his waist measurement, the circumference of his calf noted. This week comparisons with the physical records of July 8 will be made, to determine whether a cadet has gained or lost weight, whether his muscles have grown and his chest expansion has increased.

Last year, surprising changes in weight were recorded. Many a portly youth lost from 5 to 15 pounds. And many a stripling added a noticeable ten pounds.

The intensive physical week will close Saturday with a final parade and review, to which all parents of cadets at the Skinker Camp are invited. There will also be services honoring the late Capt. Skinker, St. Louis World War hero, for whom the camp was named.

Yesterday, reserve officers of the 344th (Reserve) Illinois Infantry, shouted "Squads right" and "Eyes right" for the last time, as their charges paraded in review before Brigadier-General G. H. Estes, commandant of Jefferson Barracks and of the Skinker Training Camp, and Congressman Everett E. Denison of Marion, Ill. Col. Robert L. Floyd served as regimental commander of the 344th.

Congressman Denison, before the Sixth Infantry Band began a parade march, leading the battalions up the field, presented their colors to the Illinois regiment. Following the parade, Congressman Denison addressed a group of Illinois cadets.

Lieut. N. B. Seil, publicity officer for the camp, announced on order of Brigadier-General Estes yesterday that more than 300 medals and trophies, for marksmanship, excellence in general soldiering, or athletics, would be awarded at the close of camp.

More Treaties Ratified.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—The State Department announced tonight that ratification of the arbitration and conciliation treaties between the United States and Bulgaria, Hungary, and Rumania have been exchanged and the treaties are now effective.

MOFFAT TUNNEL IS CLOSED

DENVER, July 27.—Traffic on the Denver & Salt Lake Railroad through the six-mile Moffat Tunnel, piercing the Continental Divide, has been suspended as the result of several minor cave-ins, 2000 feet from the east entrance. Officers of the railroad said dry rot had attacked the timbering. Several days will be required for repairs.

Illinois Coke Report.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 27.—Well up among leading states, Illinois produced 3,240,964 tons of by-product coke during 1928, the bureau of mines, U. S. Department of Commerce, has reported. Value of the coke, at the ovens, was $19,967,463. No bee-hive coke was produced in the state.

Glen Wild Takes $9425 Handicap at Arlington

BEATS LADY BROADCAST AND MEI FOO, PAYS $13

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 27.—J. Fred Adams' 3-year-old Glen Wild captured the North Shore Handicap, the feature event of a good race card at Arlington track here this afternoon. Lady Broadcast, from R. Caldwell's stable was a close second and Mei Foo, from the Rancocas Stable, was third.

The race was worth $9425 to the winner.

Glen Wild moved up fast in the first quarter. He was then taken to the outside and under a hard ride, just lasted to win by a head. Lady Broadcast finished fast to take the place by a length.

Mei Foo went into the lead at the half-mile mark, but was taken into the deepest going in the stretch and tired, but lasted to take third money by two lengths.

Voltear moved up fast after passing the half-mile pole, but tired and finished fourth.

The winner paid $13.26 for $2 in the mutuels.

Mrs. John D. Hertz's Reigh Count was paraded before the crowd, his appearance being billed as his last on a racetrack. The great 4-year-old colt is to be retired.

FIELDS, FOULED BY DUNDEE, FACES FINE BY COMMISSION

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, July 27.—Jackie Fields, who won the welterweight championship Thursday night on a foul from Joe Dundee faces a fine by the Michigan Athletic Board of Control.

The board, which yesterday indefinitely suspended Dundee and announced the imposition of a fine of $5000 against him, today ordered Promoter Floyd Fitzsimmons to turn over to it half of the purse Fields was to receive. The action was taken, the board stated, because Fields had refused to wear a special protector prescribed by the State Boxing Commission.

Fields, the commission believes, would not have been injured by Dundee's low blow had he complied with the commission's rules in this respect.

Fields was working on a commission basis and Fitzsimmons has not yet announced what his purse will amount to. Half of the sum, however, is to be held by the Boxing Commission until it decides at the next meeting how much Fields is to be fined.

ST. LOUISAN BEATEN FOR INDIANA NET TITLE

By the Associated Press.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., July 27.—Earl Kamrath of Austin, Tex., won the Indiana State tennis championship at the Fort Wayne Country Club this afternoon, defeating Sidney Smith of St. Louis, in a five-set match. The scores were 4—6, 6—3, 6—4, 4—6, 6—3. Kamrath staged a brilliant rally to overcome Smith's early lead.

U. S. NEEDS TWO MATCHES TO WIN DAVIS CUP

Allison and Van Ryn Defeat French Doubles Team in Three Sets

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 27—France will have to wait another day to pour champagne into the Davis Cup, the gleaming silver bowl that symbolizes world supremacy in tennis.

Hopeful of winning three straight matches, the French sent their best doubles teaam of Henri Cochet and Jean Borotra to the court today against the United States, but the singles conquerors of Big Bill Tilden and George Lott were soundly and smartly beaten by two American collegians, John Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison, the one from Princeton and the other from Texas.

France needs but one more victory in two matches tomorrow, however, to keep the Davis Cup another year.

America must win both singles engagements to win back the trophy. Tilden will play Borotra and Lott will oppose Cochet in today's matches.

10,000 Witness U. S. Victory.

Ten thousand spectators packed the Roland Garros Stadium to see Allison and Van Ryn triumph in double-quick time by scores of 6-1, 8-6, 6-4.

Until today many a garrulous Gaul would have argued through a full hour and several drinks on the proposition that Cochet and Borotra together constituted the best doubles team that could be put on a tennis court. But not now.

Cochet and Borotra, the one capable of sterling shots from anywhere on the court, the other a nimble and audacious artist at volleying, beat Big Bill Tilden and Francis T. Hunter last year in the Davis Cup finals, but they were scarcely a match this afternoon for the dazzling pair of Americans who, like Helen Wills in women's singles have conquered all opposition in Europe this summer.

A Runaway Affair.

From the first ball, Allison and Van Ryn gained command at the net, a precious advantage in doubles play, and nothing that either Borotra or Cochet attempted could drive them away from it. Before the Frenchmen could do anything at all to stop the fast rush of the American team, Allison and Van Ryn raced through the first set at 6-1, and were leading five games to one in the second set.

Borotra, fatigued perhaps from his efforts in beating Lott yesterday, was scarcely at his best and was unable to handle drives or volleys aimed low at his legs. He made error after error, flicking the ball into the net or flailing it out of bounds.

Cochet, sure and constant in his stroking, but weak on service, couldn't stem the tide, as the Americans concentrated their fire on the weaker of their opponents. The very speed of their attack tired the Americans, or at least one of them, Allison, who was puffing and blowing like a man far more than his 24 years, after a half hour of play in which he had been, if anything, more brilliant than Van Ryn, especially in the crisp finality of his placements from all angles.

Leading, five to one, in the second set, Allison let down a little, and at the same time Borotra and Cochet made a desperate fight to retrieve what they had lost. In a few minutes of fiery, flashing play, in which there were few rallies of any length, the Frenchmen tied the score.

Allison should have won the set 6—4 on his service in the tenth game. Needing only one point, he cleanly aced Borotra on his service, but the line judge, none other than Count Ludwig Salm von Hoogstraten, called a foot fault on him. He had to serve another ball.

A long rally of sparkling play, in which all four players participated at the net, followed, but finally Allison flipped one of Borota's soft little volleys into the net and it was deuce again. Then Allison missed a return of service

Time for Showdown.

THE New York State Athletic Commission, which has been whirling its big stick over the heads of all America, so far as boxing is concerned, brought its bludgeon down with a crash on Max Schmeling and two of his managers, Joe Jacobs and Billy McCarney. The licenses of all three were revoked and now the rest of the world wants to know what some 47 other states that do not concur are going to do about it.

The rest of the United States doesn't care about the New York Commission's wire-pulling wrangles over Schmeling and his managers. It knows that the German Boxing Commission and the International Boxing Union have approved Schmeling's course, and have declared void the contract of Schmeling's first manager, Arthur Buelow. Because the New York Commission has not backed up the German Commission and International Boxing Union in this stand, the present situation has developed.

The Man Behind the Commission.

IT is a credited report in New York that the situation is due to the influence of one New York promoter, Jimmy Johnston—who, it is said, has an interest in the Schmeling-Phil Scott match, which was arranged by Buelow and declined by Schmeling—on the chairman of the New York Commission.

The ruling of the New York Commission will have the sole effect of driving the next big bout outside of the State of New York. The Empire State is not affiliated with the National Boxing Association, which represents some 27 other states, and therefore the ultimatum will have no effect whatever outside New York. Other cities have sponsored larger gate receipts than New York, and the ruling of the Gotham board is therefore but little more than a gesture.

Squelching New York.

IT'S high time New York was being put in its place, in the matter of running the ring affairs of the nation, particularly when it pulls such a raw case of wire-pulling in the interest of private individuals.

Diegel Keeps Canadian Open Title, Scoring 274

By the Associated Press.

KANAWAKI, Que., July 27.—Leo Diegel, won his fourth Canadian open championship today. An amazing 72-hole score of 274, topped off by a record equalling 66 in the final round, gave Diegel the crown by margin of three strokes, Tommy Armour taking the runner up place with 277.

A hectic struggle marked the final day in which 36 holes closed the competition. Diegel led Armour by a stroke at the start of the third round but when Diegel took 71 in the third round and Tommy was a round in par 70, they went to lunch all even.

In the afternoon there was nothing to choose between them for nine holes, each going out in 34 strokes, one under par. Diegel picked up a stroke on the first three starting home. He bagged two birdies while Armour's best was one. The champion then began to draw away and a birdie two at the short 17th. Left him with a chance to cut four strokes from par by scoring a par four at the home hole. With machine-like precision he reeled off the four.

Diegel won the Canadian open in 1924, 1925 and 1928.

MacDonald Smith played two great rounds of golf today to slip into a tie for third place with Joe Kirkwood. Smith breezed around in the morning in 67, and had a 70 in the afternoon. Kirkwood scored 69 and 72. Their total of 284.

It was a great day for the Smiths. Horton, after a bad morning round, scored 67 in the afternoon and got in the money, a tie for seventh. Gene Sarazen was another late comer, starting the day far back, 150 for 36 holes, the stocky little Long Islander played a 70 in the morning and 69 in the afternoon to tie for tenth.

Bill Mehlhorn, Jim Barnes, Billy Burke, Emmett French and Al Watrous also finished in the select class.

Ross Somerville, Canadian amateur, led the Canadians with a score of 293 and won a special prize. Ernie Wakelam, Brockville, Ont., led the Canadian pros and took first money with 294. George Von Elm was the leading amateur from the United States with 296.

JACK WRIGHT DEFEATS FRANK SHIELDS FOR CANADIAN NET TITLE

TORONTO, Ont., July 27.—Jack Wright, No. 1 ranking Canadian player, today won the tennis championship of Canada, defeating Frank Shields, youthful No. 10 ranking player in the United States from New York.

The scores were 6—4, 6—4, 1—6, 7—5.

Wright succeeds to the title won last year by Wilmer Allison of Texas. Allison, abroad with the United States Davis Cup team, could not defend his championship.

The women's singles championship, another international affair, also ended in a Canadian victory, Olive Wade, 17-year-old Toronto Girl, defeating Mrs. A. F. Reise of Saginaw, Mich., in a three-set match, 6—0, 1—6, 6—1.

GRANTHAM INJURED TWICE IN TWO DAYS, FORCED TO RETIRE

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 27.—George Grantham, Pittsburg's second baseman, who was injured in a collision with Paul Waner yesterday, was hurt again today in a tangle at second base and was forced from the game.

Paul Waner was not in the lineup today, due to a bruised arm and leg suffered yesterday, but assumed the role of pinch hitter in the first encounter of the double-header with Boston.

RUMSON, N. J., July 27.—The Harvard-Yale combination playing under the colors of Old Aiken, captured the national junior polo championship today, defeating the Midwestern four, 12 goals to 5.

FIVE RECORDS FALL IN WOMEN'S TRACK MEET

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 27.—Five world records were tossed into the discard and one was equalled at Soldier Field today as the Illinois Women's Athletic Club won the National Women's A. A. U. track and field championship with a total of 31 points.

Betty Robinson of the I. W. A. C. America's only winner in the 1928 Olympic games, provided the sensational performance of the meet, setting new world records in the 50 and 100 yard dashes. The Chicago girl clipped one-fifth of a second from her own 50-yard dash mark, sprinting the distance in :05 4-5. In the longer dash she broke the accepted mark of 11 2-5 seconds held jointly by herself and Helen Filkey Warren, a club mate, in the semi-final heat, by one-fifth of a second, and equalled the performance in the final.

Boston Girl lowers 2 Marks.

Rena McDonald, a member of the 1928 Olympic team, accounted for two first places for the Boston Swimming Association, and set one world mark. She won the eight-pound shot putt with a toss of 42 feet, 4½ inches, to break the record of 40 feet, 4¼ inches set in 1926 by Lillian Copeland of Pasadena, Cal. She also won the discus with a throw of 113 feet, 4 inches.

The opening event of the meet, the 80-meter hurdles, produced a new world record when Helen Filkey Warren returning to competition for the first time since a year ago, won the event in 12 3-5 seconds, to break the former record of 12 4-5 seconds made by Miss Von Bredow of Germany in 1927.

Throws Baseball 258 Feet.

The record for the baseball throw was the last to go. Glora Russell, representing the Northern California A. C., of Eureka, Cal., winning with a throw of 258 feet, 1 inch. The old record was held

Harold Haid, who set a new milk-drinking endurance record last winter and who refueled and refueled until he gained 20 pounds, thereby graduating from the bull-pen to the ranks of the regular starters, held the New York Giants to six hits yesterday afternoon, but with all his vitamins and calories he couldn't control his screw ball in the eighth inning and that's the story of how the Cardinal winning streak was broken.

Bill McKechnie, the magician from Wilkinsburg, Pa., kept up his good work. Haid pitched as effectively as the other pitchers had in welding a chain of four successive victories. But while his magic kept the Giants from getting many base hits, he couldn't make it function to the extent of steering Haid's pitches over the plate in the one inning.

Screw-Ball Twists Away.

Going into the eighth, Harold had a one-run lead. The Cards had scored a run in the second inning on a pass to Roettger and Wilson's triple to center and the Giants had tied the score in the fifth on a single by Jackson who stole second and crossed the plate on Fullis' one bagger to left.

With two down in the seventh Taylor Douthit had slapped a triple to center and tallied on Frisch's single to right putting Red Birds one to the good.

Pinch Hitter Crawford started the eighth inning and before the announcement of his entry had been broadcast via Kelly and his megaphone and then through the amplifier, he had flied to Douthit. Then the screw-ball dipped away from the plate instead of toward it and Fullis walked. Lindstrom hit a slow bounder between the pitcher's box and third base and Haid pounced on it. He was off balance, however, and by the time he straightened up and threw Lindstrom had enough of a start to beat the toss to Bottomley.

Leach forced Lindstrom and Reese running for Fullis, moved to third. Haid tried to work the corners for the dangerous Terry, but couldn't get into the strike zone and when Leach stole second Haid pitched an intentional ball to Terry, filling the bases.

Melvin Ott then cut a single down the first-base line and Reese and Leach raced over the plate, changing a Cardinal lead to a 3-2 New York advantage.

Carl Mays pitched the last two innings for the Giants and prevented any scoring. Holm's failure to lay down a sacrifice in the eighth after Bottomley had reached first on an error was costly, as Roettger hit a double after Holm grounded into a double play.

Orsatti beat out a grounder to Lindstrom in the ninth with one out, but Douthit forced him at second and Frisch ended the game with a grounder to Cohen.

In suffering defeat the Cardinals outbatted the Giants, 10 to 6. That may be consolation to some one, though it didn't help Haid to spend a pleasant evening.

With the Cubs winning a double-header, the Cardinals lost more ground in the pennant race and now are 14 full games behind the league leaders.

MANDELL FAVORED TO DEFEAT TONY CANZONERI IN TITLE FIGHT FRIDAY

135-POUND KING CONSIDERED THE CLEVEREST BOY IN RING TODAY

By John E. Wray

Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch

The pugilistic pendulum is again swinging back toward science and defensive skill. Gene Tunney set the fashion, three years ago, when he artistically destroyed Jack Dempsey's pugilistic reputation and won the world title. This defeat, unpopular as it was, started a new era in boxing which today finds its reflection in the fact that cleverness and not brute force is the mainstay of nearly all of the champions in office today.

Tommy Loughran, who vindicated his right to the light heavyweight crown recently, gave a boxing lesson to the slugger who aspired to his crown, Jimmy Braddock. Rene De Vos, Belgian middleweight, is expected to wrest the championship crown from the slugging Mickey Walker, as soon as Mickey can be induced to defend his title. Jack Sharkey, Max Schmeling, Jackie Fields, Sammy Mandell and Tod Morgan, who are or hope soon to be champions, are all clever and fast men who use judgment and skill to defeat opponents.

Mandell a Boxing Wizard.

The next test of boxing merit will be developed during this week when Sammy Mandell and Tony Canzoneri battle for the lightweight crown at Chicago Aug. 2.

Neither of this pair is properly termed a slugger, but Canzoneri's methods are a bit more rough and ready. Mandell is the master boxer of the ring today. He is probably the cleverest champion we have and that goes for Tommy Loughran. Mandell is equipped to cope with any style of attack that is brought to him; and while Canzoneri is a very good boy, he will face more and faster gloves than he has yet encountered in the ring, next Friday. Mandell is not a "finishing" fighter but he can administer a lot of punishment. Fighters are worse off, after lasting ten rounds with him, than if they had been knocked out in the third or fourth session.

Canzoneri was beaten as a featherweight for the title and by Andre Routis, who is not a great fighter by any means. The reason given was that Canzoneri tried to remain in the featherweight class too long and was badly weakened making weight. The fight indicated this might be the case.

Mandell is the natural favorite for this fight, but he suffered a broken collar bone in a battle with Jimmy Goodruch, last year, and has not had many tests since. If Sammy is physically himself, Canzoneri will bite the resin or at least be outpointed.

Mandell twice has defeated the welterweight Jackie Fields who is not only a class heavier than Sammy but is very fast and scientific himself. Mandell has only to go back to this form to retain his title.

Don't Do It, Jack.

Now and then rumors are heard that Jack Dempsey intends to come back to the ring, and fight the winner of the proposed Schmeling-Sharkey bout. If the former champion is wise he will remain in retirement.

He knocked out Firpo nearly six years ago and since then he has had two ten-round bouts with Tunney, each a crushing defeat. He has not been seen in action for two years and if he should be fool-hardy enough to take a fling at Schmeling, he would be doomed to receive another humiliating setback. Schmeling today is a better boxer than Dempsey ever was and probably he will take the measure of Sharkey as handily as he disposed of Paulino. We all know how often Sharkey landed on Dempsey, though he lacked a punch.

Dempsey has been quoted as saying that he will not fight again unless he receives one million dollars, win or lose.

It is hard to believe that any promoter would run such a financial risk in view of the fact that Dempsey has seen his best days and might not amount to much in a battle with the hard-hitting young German.

Mr. Godfrey's Bluff.

The manager of George Godfrey, negro heavyweight, who was born in this country and served in the World War, has issued a formal challenge to Max Schmeling to the effect that if Schmeling can stay 15 rounds with Godfrey, the latter will donate his share of the spoils to charity. Godfrey is the greatest heavyweight in the world today, according to his manager, but promoters and fighters have drawn the color line against him, he says.

The Negro's mentor declares that Schmeling should not be permitted to take the world heavyweight title back to Germany without meeting a real fighter. He says that Jack Sharkey of Boston is not equipped with sufficient pugilistic power or skill to encounter the German and that there is no other American-bred fighter capable of turning the trick excepting Godfrey.

Sharkey got a decision over Godfrey in a ten-round bout in Boston, several years ago; but since then the latter has improved as a fighter.

at his shoestrings and followed that by driving the ball far out of the court.

This brought the Frenchmen level. They went ahead on the next game, leading 6—5. In the twelfth game the Americans braced and took the next two games to win the second set, 8—6.

31 Games in 61 Minutes.

The third set was played with amazing speed. Games followed service until the ninth when a series of fine shots by Allison and Van Ryn upset Borotra's delivery and furnished the break that led to victory. Allison played a game that more than made up for his temporary letdown in the second set, while Van Ryn was as steady as a rock.

In all of the third set the brilliant Texan never once drove the ball off the court and put the ball into the net only three times. Van Ryn matched the brilliancy of his teammate with consistency.

The three sets, comprising 31 games. Were ripped off in just 61 minutes. The crowd of 10,000 was as smart a gathering as Paris could muster in the summer time, when folk who are presumably "smart" socially are not supposed to be seen in the French capital. The President of the Republic could not be present as had been expected, for the Poincare Government picked today to put aside its power.

Mandell Having Trouble Making Weight, Report

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 27.—Sammy Mandell probably will enter the ring at Chicago Stadium Aug. 2 favored to retain his world lightweight title, but Tony Canzoneri, the challenger, is gaining a great following by his work in preparation for the battle.

When the match was made Mandell became a 2-to-1 choice to repulse the challenge of the former featherweight champion. But with his trouble in making the weight and a hint of sluggishness in training, Mandell now is no better than a 7 to 5 favorite.

In spite of the intense heat both principals are working hard. Mandell did a stretch on the road and boxed six rounds. Canzoneri also took the road in the morning, and boxed eight rounds with his sparring mates in the afternoon. He pleased about 700 fans with his busy style and his ability to sock with his right hand.

The supporting card for the attraction has been completed. Ray Miller, Chicago lightweight, and Luis Vicentini, Chilean puncher, will meet in the 10-round semifinal, with a tital shot with the winner of the main engagement, as the prize. Basil Galliano, one of Canzoneri's partners, will meet Andy Callahan, Boston southpaw, in an eight-rounder at 138 pounds, while Kurt Prenzel, German welterweight, will tackle Roxie Allen of Boston, in a six-round bout. The program will open with a six rounder between Bennie McArthur, Saginaw, Mich., one of Mandell's helpers, and Fay Kosky, west coast lightweight.

come along splendidly under President Paul Prehn's guidance and is now in a position to do the dictating. No compromise with the New York board on this line should be effected. If Schmeling desires to fight in Chicago or Detroit, the N. B. A. ought to be strongly for it.

The time is approaching when the New York Commission will have to join with the National body if it expects to have its rulings enforced throughout the country.

Lean Year for Rockne.

KNUTE ROCKNE, the wizard of Notre Dame, will have to do his stuff to the limit this fall. Four regular backs and two regular linesmen have graduated, while eight of his returning lettermen were "flunked," it is reported, and face the heroic stunt of getting back in good scholastic standing by September.

However, Rockne has material coming up at all times and his second and third teams are seldom much below the first one in football standards. "The Irish" may be down, but they seldom stay that way.

What's This We Hear?

THE underground wires are fairly shrieking with guesses at what's doing in the wrestling world. The latest broadcast is interesting and amusing. It is that Sonnenberg and Stecher are to wrestle in Los Angeles. You don't have to be a clairvoyant to guess that Joe Stecher is due to become champion once more. Certainly, if the meeting is a match and not a "courtesy" exhibition, Sonnenberg will cease to be champion in very short order. That is the estimate of Sonnenberg's ability given by many professionals.

The irony of it all is that old "Neuritis Joe," who fell victim to a fat and aged Lewis more than a year ago, will once again be uplifted to the throne!

When wrestlers as old and fading as Lewis and Stecher can take turns in winning the title, either there is something going on in Denmark that needs the formaldehyde, or the upcoming generation of young wrestlers has been singularly delayed. In no other strenuous pastime in the world has such a seeming dearth of first-class material been noted.

Pesek to the Rescue.

JOHN PESEK, a tough egg, who has "played with the boys" and listened to his master's voice in the past, is stepping into the picture again. John apparently broke away from trust connections and went out for himself, not many months ago.

Result: He had to go to Australia to get himself a match! Now John is interested in the Sonnenberg-Stecher event. He offers to take on the winner of this event in a private gymnasium and wrestle him for $5000 a side, his own money, with no spectators except a few officials and critics.

That is the kind of a match one would like to see. There would be no flying tackles used and wrestlers would not nose-dive out of the ring every 15 minutes to thrill the crowd.

But one or the other would be half wrecked. Guess which?

STILLMAN MEETS POWER ON CARD OF WALKER POST

This Week's Fights

(Not including local card.)
(Ten rounds unless otherwise specified.)

MONDAY.

Gorilla Jones vs. Jackie Lewis, at Memphis. Welterweights.
Young Stribling vs. Babe Hunt, at Tulsa, Ok. Heavyweights.
Dave Shade vs. Lou Scozza, at Buffalo, N. Y. Middleweights.
Rosy Rosales vs. Billy Jones, at Cleveland. Light-heavys.
Johnny Risko vs. Emmett Rocco, at Cleveland, 12 rounds. Heavyweights.
Tony Herrera vs. Tommy Crawley, at Pittsburg. Junior Lightweights.

TUESDAY.

Kid Chocolate vs. Steve Smith, at Chicago. Featherweights.
Billy Wallace vs. Joe Glick, at New York. Junior welterweights.

WEDNESDAY.

Baby Sal Sorio vs. Joe Noto, at Wilmington, Cal. Junior Lightweights.

FRIDAY.

Sammy Mandell vs. Tony Canzoneri, at Chicago. Lightweights.
Ray Miller vs. Luis Vicentini, at Chicago. Lightweights.
Andy Callahan vs. Basil Galliano, at Chicago, eight rounds. Junior welterweights.

The complete card for next Wednesday night's professional boxing show at the outdoor Flori-Olympian Arena, 3547 Pine street, was announced yesterday by Eddie Felix, matchmaker for the Edward E. Walker American Legion Post. The feature 10-round scrap will bring together Al Stillman and Frank Power, St. Louis' two outstanding middleweights.

In the second 10-round battle, Frankie La Var, the featherweight from Denver, will trade blows with Nick Broglio, of Herrin, Ill. La Var, who recently arrived here, held his first workout by boxing with Herman Kegal, a heavyweight; Jimmy Reed, Baden middleweight, and Young Darby, a Tulsa welterweight.

Matchmaker Felix yesterday signed Tut Seymour, of Biloxi, Miss., and Young Darby, of Tulsa, to show in the eight-round welterweight match.

Two former amateurs will mix in the first-round preliminary when Dick Costello, of the South Side, meets Charley Cline, a protege of George Wilsman. The other preliminary will feature Walter "Red" Roland, local lightweight, against a foe yet to be named. Roland, after a three months' layoff, will be tried out in a short match, and if he is successful he will be used in one of the principal scraps on the next Walker program.

Stillman and Power are taking their training seriously so they will be at their best for their setto. They have been fighting in the professional ranks for a year and a half and have yet to suffer a setback. Stilman's record shows he has won 10 straight matches via the knockout route, while Power has turned back seven opponents, three on knockouts and four as a result of decisions.

In the amateur ranks they met three times, Stillman winning twice, once on a knockout and another time on points, and Power on a technical knockout in the third meeting. Power, during three years of amateur fighting, held both the Western A. A. U. welterweight and middleweight championships, while Stillman won the national amateur middleweight championship, as well as the district title.

Jack Hughes will referee.

Athletic Commission Adopts Set of Rules to Control Wrestling Bouts in Missouri

By Edward Cochrane,

Sports Editor of the Kansas City Journal-Post.

KANSAS CITY, MO., July 27.—Rules to govern professional wrestling in Missouri were adopted today by the Missouri Athletic Commission, an organization appointed to control boxing and wrestling in the State, at a meeting at the Hotel President.

Brewer, director of Athletics of the University of Missouri, who is chairman of the commission; Harry Davis of Kansas City, one of the two other commissioners; Ben Harrison of Springfield, secretary; Charles Fisher, wrestling instructor at the University of Missouri, and Harry S. Sharpe of St. Louis, veteran referee, whose recommendations of rules were accepted in full.

Physicians Under Referee's Orders.

The commission passed some other rules. It made it compulsory for each physician to remain to examine wrestlers and boxers after bouts and to not leave until dismissed by the referees. Clubs hereafter will be protected against encroachment of dates and a reasonable time must intervene between boxing and wrestling shows. Wrestling has just been placed under the jurisdiction of the commission by the last meeting of the Legislature.

Referees are to be instructed to examine the rings, including stakes, ropes, platforms, etc., to insure safety of contestants, prior to each bout. If the referee is not satisfied with the condition of the ring it must be put in proper order before bouts are permitted.

The rules:

Intermission of 15 Minutes.

(1) All wrestling bouts shall be at the catch-as-catch-can style, and no contest shall be of more than three falls. No more than 15 minutes intermission shall be allowed between falls.

(2) "Pin" falls only shall count. A fall shall be scored against a contestant by the referee when both shoulders are pressed to the mat at the same time and for not less than three seconds.

(3) When a contestant is at the edge of the platform, or is foul of the ropes, and, in judgment of the referee, is no longer able to properly protect himself, it shall be the duty of the referee to call "time" and the wrestlers shall at once release any and all holds and return to the center of the mat in standing position and resume the contest.

(4) Should a contestant fall, pitch, or be accidentally thrown outside the roped enclosure he shall be allowed twenty (20) seconds by the referee to return to the center of the mat and resume the contest, and upon his failure to do so he shall forfeit the fall. During this time the opponent shall retire to the far corner of the roped enclosure and remain there until signalled by the referee to resume the contest.

(5) "Seconds" must not touch their man during a bout, nor shall they give him oral advice.

(6) Contestants must wear proper athletic costume, approved by the referee. Shoes be of soft top with soft soles and laced with eyelets only.

Oil and Grease Barred.

(7) The use of grease, ointment, strong-smelling liniment, nauseous or noxious drugs, liquids or powders during a contest is prohibited.

(8) No form of full strangle hold shall be permitted.

(9) Fighting, gouging, kicking, knuckling, elbowing, slicing, heeling, slugging, pulling hair, twisting nose or ears, deliberate butting with head, use of "rabbit" blow, bending or twisting of fingers, or use of other and similar foul tactics are prohibited, and for violation of any of the foregoing provisions the referee is empowered to disqualify the offender. Finger nails must be trimmed well below the tips.

(10) No contestant shall be permitted to grasp or hang on to clothing, mat or ropes or support; nor shall a contestant deliberately crawl or step outside the roped enclosure as a means of defense. If after being warned by the referee, a contestant repeats the foregoing prohibitions he may be disqualified by the refere.

(11) If it is apparent to the referee, or he has reason to believe, that either or both of the contestants are not putting forth their best efforts, or for refusal to observe the rules of the State Athletic Commission, the referee shall be empowered to disqualify the offender or to declare the match "no contest."

(12) No wrestler suffering from trachoma or other infectious eye or stain disease (ascertained by medical examination) shall be permitted to engage in any exhibition or contest.

(13) The referee shall decide all questions arising out of a contest not specifically covered by these rules. In all other respects wrestling shall be subject to the General Rules and Regulations of the State Athletic Commission.

HENRY DIETZ LEADS HORSESHOE LEAGUE

Henry Dietz of the champion Flints continues to lead all players in games won and lost at the end of the second series of Division 1 of the Municipal Horse Shoe Pitchers' League with 30 victories and two defeats. J. Putnam of the Sunsets team is second with 25 victories and three defeats, while Fred Senns of the Flints is third with 28 victories and five defeats.

Putnam, with a 486 ringer average, ranks first, while Henry Dietz is second with a .477, and Senn third with .458.

GOLDMANS WIN TWICE TO ENTER LEGION FINALS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., July 27.—Taking advantage of Springfield errors to score all their runs, the Goldman (American Legion) junior team of St. Louis again defeated the Willow Springs Creamery team of this city, Southwest Missouri champions, 8 to 5, here this afternoon to win the right to compete in the state finals against the Kansas City District winner, Aug. 2, in St. Louis.

The Goldmans won the morning game, 10 to 7.

Magers, Springfield's slim pitching ace, was in fine form, allowing only five singles and striking out ten men, but his teammates played poor baseball behind him, all eight St. Louis runs being scored on errors.

The Goldmans mixed ten hits with 12 bases on balls to win the morning's game. The Springfield champions drove out 15 hits off Schnurmann, but failed in the pinches.

The work of Schnurmann at third base was a feature for the Goldmans in this afternoon's game. He handled 11 chances without a bobble, robbing the local team of at least five hits.

Passer also played brilliantly at shortstop.

Jce Matthes, manager of the Springfield Western Association team and Mike Schreck, a regular W. A. umpire, officiated at both games.

CASEY'S CUBS WILL REPRESENT OHIO IN LEGION TOURNAMENT

COLUMBUS, O., July 27.—Casey's Cubs of Portsmouth today won the right to represent Ohio in the American Legion's junior baseball tournament by defeating the Reservoir Midgets of Toledo, 15 to 5, here.

Portsmouth will meet the state champions of Michigan, Kentucky and Indiana for the right to play for the Eastern championship of the country and, if victorious there, to meet the Western winner for the national title.

Miss Bailey Wins Another Net Title

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., July 27.—Miss Ruth Bailey of St. Louis added another tennis title to her growing string when she captured the Western Michigan championship here this afternoon, winning in the final match from Miss Carolyn Swartz of San Francisco, 6—[illegible], 7—5.

Miss Bailey defeated Miss Catherine Wolfe of Indianapolis, holder of the Illinois State title, in her semifinal match, 6—1, 6—1. Her opponent in the final, Miss Swartz, arrived there by a semifinal victory over Miss Clara L. Zinke, first ranking woman player of the Western Association. Miss Swartz is ranked 15 in the national women's rating.

From Grand Rapids Miss Bailey plans to go East to Seabright for the invitational meet there next week, and then to the invitational meet at East Hampton, given by Maidstone Country Club. From there she will go to compete in the Eastern championship at Rye, N. Y., and then will go to the national at Forest Hills.

NEW YORK, July 27.—Continuing in the charmingly generous od, which marks their every appearance in New York, the Browns afternoon dropped their second straight of the series and their h out of 13 games to New York this year, when they lost to the kees, 5-3. It was a good game, well-contested and a battle all the y through.

Blaeholder went the route for Browns, but Pipgras, who rted for the Yanks had to be en out in the ninth when the ownies threatened. Pennock re ved Pipgras and when he did Browns were through for the ernoon. Ferrell, batting for Gowan, popped out with two and one out and Manush, hit for the second successive day ded the game with a grounder Lazzeri.

Tomorrow, the final will be yed with Crowder operating the Browns and either Zach y or Heimach pitching for the Yanks.

Yankees Score in Third.

For the first two innings, there no scoring. Then, the Yanks ke through. In the third, the pressible Dickey started with single but was forced by rocher. Pipgras unexpectedly gled and when Combs and Rob son did likewise, Pipgras scored. the fourth, with one down, zeri walked. He was forced by usel but Dickey doubled and usel scored.

The Browns rambled through first six innings with exactly ee safeties. In the seventh, ss began woefully by striking . O'Rourke then sent his sec d extra-base hit of the game to ht-center, making three bases the wallop. Brannon's fly to usel was too close in and Rourke stood by while Schang lked. Naturally, it had to be pitcher coming up in this ch. Blaeholder, however fooled opposition with a double to t center which scored Rourke and put Schang on ird.

Score Tied on Wild Pitch.

Blue then walked, and to make good, Pipgras made the fourth ll a wild pitch which scored ang with the tying run, moving aeholder to third and let Blue ch second. McGowan walked fill the bases. Manush was not ual to the emergency and his y to Combs ended the inning.

In the last of the seventh, Dick hit to left center and Schulte yed the ball badly and it went a triple, and he scored when rocher gave way to Koenig and signed to right. Pipgras tried ree times to sacrifice, fouled the st one and was called out on ikes. Combs doubled Koenig to ird and he scored on Robert n's sacrifice fly to McGowan. aeholder then took Gehrig's tap d touched him out.

Ruth Hits Twenty-third Homer.

Schulte flied out and Kress popped to Gehrig to begin the eighth inauspiciously. O'Rourke made it a perfect inning by send g a fly to Meusel.

Ruth was first up for the Yanks their half and he lined a drive o the right-field seats for homer . 23 of the year. Lazzeri sin ed to left. Meusel grounded to annon. Dickey hit to Blaeholder d was thrown out and Koenig pped to O'Rourke.

Brownie Notes.

NEW YORK, July 27.

Saw Judge Fuchs of Boston yesterday and he reported that e of his men, having struck t in a pinch, returned to the nch muttering, "Well, what n you expect; we haven't any anager."

People in New York are not ared about where the Yanks e going to finish. They think ey are going to finish second. They are quite right.

Dear old Schulte. He has an erage of over .300 composed the main of hits off some dy's glove or something. In e first inning yesterday, he ac pted one of the finest third ikes one ever saw.

The Yanks didn't score in the rst inning. There is no dispo ion to claim a record. So far as the Yanks-Browns are concerned, it might be a world mark, at that. Look at the records; they are illuminating.

Ruth refused to be bothered by Blaeholder and singled to start the Yanks' second. For his bravery, he was erased on a double-play that Kress started.

Great hitting game. The Browns made on hit in three innings, and the Yanks in the same chance managed to make six.

In the last of the third, with two out, the Yanks filled the bases. Gehrig was up. It might have been a good proposition to walk him but they pitched to Lou and he singled, scoring the first run.

In the days of the lively ball it is refreshing to see such a game as this. Yesterday, in the early innings, the pitchers were all powerful. The best chance the Browns had to score in the early innings was in the fifth. O'Rourke led off with what they called a triple, but was run down on Brannon's tap. Blue later came up with men on first and third and two out and fouled to Gehrig.

Both pitchers were in rare form. Pipgras allowed two hits in five innings and Blaeholder, despite the six hits off him, was more sinned against than sinning in allowing two runs.

The Browns had a chance to count in the sixth when McGowan led off with a single. But Manush, strangely hitless these days, forced McGowan and Mr. Schulte hit into a double play.

WALBERG IN FORM, MACKS BEAT WHITE SOX

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, July 27.—The Athletics had little trouble taking their second straight game from the Chicago White Sox today by a score of 8 to 1. Rube Walberg held the Sox to five hits and shut them out until the ninth inning. While the Athletics collected 15 safe blows off McKain and Weiland.

A four-run rally in the seventh inning made the game safe for Philadelphia. Five hits, including Jimmy Dyke's tenth home run of the season, brought the rally.

Foxx hit a single and a double that ran his hitting streak to 22 consecutive games.

NEWPORT TO HAVE POLO AFTER 15-YEAR LAPSE

NEWPORT, R. I., July 27.—For the first time in 15 years Newport has added polo to its summer sports.

Mrs. Moses Taylor has made the sport possible by the construction of a regulation polo field at "Sandy Point Farm," the residence of the late Reginald C. Vanderbilt.

Matches will be played late this season between Newport teams and those of other cities, reviving memories of the old Westchester Polo Club.

Cards Outhit Giants But Are Beaten, 3 to 2

afternoon against the Giants, Manager Bill McKechnie said last night. Jack Scott is due for New York, but he has a lame back, so it may be Henry or Fitzsimmons..

Bill Sherdel's young son underwent an operation recently and Bill will be rested until the worry is off his mind.

John McGraw is expected to rejoin the Giants this afternoon. He has been on a scouting expedition, and Coach Ray Schalk has been in charge during the two games with the Cardinals.

Chick Hafey was missing from the Cardinal lineup as a result of the injury suffered sliding home Friday. Chick's right hand was bruised between the thumb and fore-finger when he hit a bat as he slid. He will be out for several days.

Andy Cohen got a double in the second inning when Holm missed his attempt at a shoe string catch. Andy stayed on second, Jackson sending a fly to Douthit and Hubbell a grounder to Frisch.

Charley Gelbert opened the fifth inning with a double that bounced off third base, but Haid bunted foul on the third strike. Douthit fouled to Terry and Frisch, with a call of three and two, popped to Jackson.

Leach reached first to open the sixth when Gelbert's throw pulled Bottomley off the bag, but Terry hit into a double play to nullify the error. It was the nineteenth double play turned by the Cards in their last seven games with the Giants.

Bottomley singled to center with one out in the sixth and after Holm flied out, a hit and run play pulled Cohen out of position and Roettger's grounder went to right field for a single, sending Bottomley to third. Jackson made a good stop of Wilson's hot grounder, forcing Roettger at second to end the inning.

Bottomley, leading off in the eighth, was safe when Mays dropped Terry's throw, but Holm after failing in an attempt to sacrifice, hit into a double play. It was too bad as Roettger followed with a double to right center.

About 6500 persons attended the game.

New Amplifier Is Tried Out at Sportsman's Park

AN ELECTRICAL amplifying device to entertain fans before the game and to keep them informed as to changes in the lineups and official rulings on doubtful plays, was tried in St. Louis for the first time at yesterday's contest between the Cardinals and Giants. Eventually four or five loud speakers will be installed, but only one was in place for the trial.

The one amplifier was sufficient to handle the musical program, but announcements during the game easily were drowned out by the shouts of the fans. However, the announcer later learned to "put over" his announcements by waiting until there was a lull in the cheering.

In the sixth inning Leach was safe on a wild throw by Gelbert and the announcer hesitated because he said there was too much noise. Before he found a gap in the cheering the next half inning had started.

Indications were that the amplifiers would add much to the enjoyment of a game. The announcer's voice was not suited to the purpose and inexperience also handicapped him. If Announcer Kelley's mellow voice could be sent over the microphone it would be much better.

PIRATES SPLIT DOUBLE BILL WITH BRAVES

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 27.—Pittsburg and Boston split a double-header here today, the Braves winning the first, 10 to 3, and Pittsburg the second, 5 to 2.

Harry Seibold held the Pirates safe in the first game, while his teammates, led by "Rabbit" Maranville, pounded Larry French freely. French was relieved by Hill in the eighth, in which inning the Braves scored six runs.

In the second game the battered Pirates bunched enough long hits to pile up five runs off Bob Smith. Earl Sheely hit a home run, while Lloyd Waner drove out his fifteenth triple of the season.

ST. LOUISAN IN CHARGE OF HORSESHOE MEET AT MISSOURI FAIR

Crack horseshoe pitchers of Missouri are "warming up" for the annual tournament at the 29th annual Missouri State Fair, which opens at Sedalia Saturday morning, Aug. 17, and which will continue for eight days. The tournament will be held Aug. 21 and 22.

Tommie Meigher of Kansas City captured first place in the State Fair Horsheshoe Tournament last year, winning seven straight games and 16 out of 19 games all together. He tossed 19 ringers, ten of which were doubles.

Two hundred dollars is offered in cash prizes and trophies in this tournament at the 1929 Missouri State Fair, winner of first place to receive a cash prize of $50 and a gold medal. Adolphus Boeckler of St. Louis, member of Missouri State Fair Board from the Eleventh District, will direct this year's tournament.

CUBS TWO FULL GAMES IN FRONT AFTER WINNING DOUBLEHEADER

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 27.—The Cubs increased their margin over Pittsburg to two full games today, triumphing twice over Philadelphia, while the Pirates were dividing a double-header with Boston.

Charlie Root pitched the Cubs to a 10 to 7 victory in the second game, after Pat Malone had hung up his thirteenth win of the season in the first tilt, 6 to 1. Teh brace of victories ran the Cubs' string to six straight.

Rogers Hornsby's twenty-first home run of the season started Chibago on its way in te first game, in which Koupal and Willoughby, Phillie hurlers, were batted for 11 hits.

Hack Wilson got No. 27 in the second game.

HERMAN HITS RECORD HOME RUN BUT REDS DEFEAT THE ROBINS

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, July 27.—Babe Herman hit a record home run for the Brooklyn Robins today, but it was not enough to win and the Reds took the second game of the series, 4 to 3. Herman's drive went over the center-field fence and was only the third ever to clear that barrier. He also got two other hits.

Eppa Rixey of Cincinnati and Johnny Morrison staged a mound duel, each giving nine hits and working well in the pinches.

WORLD ROLLER SKATES CHAMPIONSHIP RACE

CHICAGO, July 26.—Two of Chicago's most widely known roller skaters, Joe Laury, world famous as one of the greatest roller skaters of all times, and Clifford Howard will compete in the world's championship at the Chicago Stadium Aug. 2 to 23, inclusive.

Promoter Paddy Harmon has received entries of a team of five skaters from the White City roller rink. Heading the list were the names of Laury and Howard. They will be accompanied by three teammates who have come to the fore rapidly.

DOWN the STRETCH

By Melvin D. Fulcher

Favored by both the soft track and the weights, Glen Wild, a maiden racer owned by J. F. Adams, beat a formidable field of 3-year-olds in the feature at Arlington. Glen Wild is by Meridian, Lazuli and was bred at his owner's Maryland farm. He ran sixth behind Blue Larkspur in the American Classic and previously showed some good form at Maryland and New York tracks.

Reigh Count was in the limelight at Arlington yesterday when he was paraded with Earl Sande in the saddle before the crowd in the grandstand, on the lawns and in the clubhouse. It will likely be his last appearance under colors. The Arlington management honored the Hertz colt by designating yesterday as "Reigh Count Day" at the track.

The Chicago strip was still heavy while Bainbridge had a fast surface. At the former, mud horses were prominent. Linger, Cayuga and Glen Wild, all soft track horses, were winners. At Devonshire, where racing began yesterday, the going was fast and the consistent mare Miss Rosedale won her fourth straight victory, beating some handy sprinters, going six furlongs.

Empire City Closes.

Maxiva and Lahor were both well played locally yesterday and both ran third in their races at Arlington. Eloise, at Brainbridge, was another which failed her backers, running second to Col. Drage. Old Dr. Glenn was also in the second position. Linger, however, in the first at Arlington, on the strength of his good form in the mud at Fairmount, was well fancied, and his big price was almost 7 to 1. He was formerly a member of the Gentry stable.

Yesterday marked the close of Empire City racing, with the running of the Wakefield Handicap and the Mount Kisco Stakes as the features. Peto, with J. Burke up, won the former over some fair juveniles, while G. A. Cochran's Healy repeated his success in the Empire City Derby and beat his stable mate, Valkyr, in the stake event which had $3000 added.

Racing opens at Saratoga tomorrow with the Saratoga Handicap the feature of the opening day. It is at a mile and a quarter, and has been won by some of the best horses in training, including Caughnawaga, Clambala, Borrow, Roamer, which won it in 1915, 1917 and 1918; Stromboli, Sir Barton, Gray Lag, Princess Doreen and Chance Shot.

A Puff for My Dandy..

It is doubtful if a more willing racer than the redoubtable Roamer has ever raced anywhere. The little gelding was possessed of unusual speed, which he could sustain for a mile and a quarter with weight up. He beat all the good horses on the American turf when he was in training, and holds the record for a mile against time, 1:34 4-5, made at Saratoga in 1918. Cherry Pie ran it in two-fifths of a second faster in a race at Belmont Park. Roamer at his best was considered not far from Man O'War by expert handicappers.

Former Jockey Chet Ivers, who rode his first races around the old St. Louis track years ago, later riding throughout the West and on the Pacific Coast, and who has made St. Louis his home for some time, believes My Dandy to be the equal of any of the sprinters that have been prominent in the West within the past 15 years or so. Under a good rating rider, Ivers thinks the Reichert owned Texas-bred colt, would beat a very formidable field at one mile, his natural speed allowing him to go to the front where he would be held the same as if racing in the rear of the leaders.

RUFFING SHUTS OUT TIGERS WITH 4 HITS

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, July 27.—Ruffing held Detroit to five hits today and Boston shut out the visitors, 4 to 0. He fanned nine, walked one and no Tiger reached third base.

Rhyne knocked in the first two Sox runs off Sorrell in the second and the others were made off Yde in the eighth.

PETO AND HEALY TAKE CLOSING DAY STAKES AT EMPIRE TRAC

WINNER IN THE WAKEFIELD PAYS 7 TO 1; KISKO IS 3-HORSE RACE

By the Associated Press.

EMPIRE CITY RACETRACK, N. Y., July 27.—The Belair Stud Peto, at 7 to 1, under Burke's good ride, scored a sensational victory in the Wakefield Handicap on the closing day of the Empire meeting today. Flying Heels, 9 to 20, was second, and Polygamous, coupled with Flying Heels, third.

The race was worth $4550 to the winner.

Burke got Peto away flying and he never made a mistake. Peto opened a two-length lead on Flying Heels in the stretch. Flying Heels came with a rush and got to the front. However, Peto came again in the final sixteenth and won by a head. Flying Heels beat Polygamous, his stable mate, a length for the place.

The time was 1:06 3-5 for the five and one-half furlongs.

Another feature, the Mount Kisko Stake, with $3000 added, was won by Healy, which beat Valkyr and Sepoy. Only three started.

Two other fairly long shots went over when Bask took the opener and paid 6 to 1, and Clarifier reached the wire first in the fifth event and returned his backers 4 to 1.

FIVE RECORDS FALL IN WOMEN'S TRACK MEET AT CHICAGO

by Vivian Hardwick of Pasadena, Cal.

Maybelle Gilliland of the Melrose A. C., of New York, tied the 220-yard dash mark of 27 2-5 seconds set by Elsie Shurke of Chicago last year. The high jump was won by Jean Shiley of Philadelphia, world record holder, who leaped 4 feet 9¾ inches, several inches shy of her best mark.

The summaries:

80-METER HURDLES—Won by Helen Filkey Warren, Illinois Women's A. S.; Evenly Hall, I. W. A. C., second; Nellie Todd, I. W. A. C., third; Catherine Whitcomb, Golden Cycline A. C., Dallas, Tex., fourth. Time, :12 3-5 (new world record).

Dee Boeckman Wins All St. Louis Points.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, July 27.—With only a single entry capable of keeping the pace set by America's premier girl athletes, St. Louis wound up in eleventh place in the National A. A. U. women's track and field meet with a total of three points, only two points back of the four team tie for seventh place.

All of the St. Louis points were won by Dee Boeckmann, who entered unattached and finished second in the discus throw with a mark of 96 feet 11¼ inches.

Heavily represented in the track events, the St. Louisans found the pace set by the victors so stiff that they were unable to qualify so much as a single entry.

In finishing second in the discus throw Dee Boeckmann outlasted all the contestants save the slight Rena MacDonald of the Boston Swimming Association. The two were the only ones to surpass the 93 feet 3¾-inch set by Evelyn Ferrara of the Illinois Women's Athletic Club, and a duel ensued between them with the Boston girl finally pulling far to the front with a superior throw of 113 feet 4 inches, only a trifle more than two feet short of the American woman's record set by Lillian Copeland of Pasadena in 1928. The world record for the event was set in 1928 by Halinaa Konopacka of Poland at 119 feet 5 inches.

The only other St. Louis performance to break into the records of the meet was the seventh place won in the baseball throw by Florence Wright of the Headlight Athletic Club. Her throw was 201 feet 6 inches, the event being won by Gloria Russell of Eureka, Cal., with a mark of 258 feet 8½ inches.

SEEKS TO MATCH CISENEROS WITH DAVEY ABAD

The main event of an outdoor boxing show to be held at the Battery A arena Aug. 1 will feature Davey Abad, the Panama featherweight, and Chico Cisineros, speedy Mexican, in a 10-round contact, according to the present plans of Matchmaker Jack Tippett.

The Battery promoter announced last night that he has virtually concluded negotiations for the contest, having reached an agreement as to terms and conditions with the fighters and their managers. He must wait, however, for official confirmation by the National Boxing Commission of Abad's restoration to good standing.

Secretary Burke of the Louisiana Boxing Commission, which suspended Abad three months ago for refusing to go through with a match arranged by Eddie Meade, a former manager of the Panamanian, notified Abad several days ago that his suspension had been lifted upon receipt of his payment of a $300 fine. Burke's letter also advised the fighter that the National Boxing Association would immediately be advised of the Louisiana board's action.

Cisineros' impressive conquest of Johnny "Peewee" Kaiser in a speedy 10-rounder on the card featuring Max Schmeling last Monday night, stimulated popular local demand for the Mexican to meet Abad. In a previous local encounter, Cisineros decisively outpointed Joe Lucas, a scrapper who fought the shifty Abad 10 rounds to a draw at Detroit last winter.

Abad captured the fancy of St. Louis fans during the winter by his dynamic ring methods in two bouts with Benny Bass, former featherweight titleholder, who he outpointed by a comfortable margin in the second encounter, avenging his defeat by a narrow margin in the first setto. The Panamanian also scored a decisive point victory over Johnny Kaiser.

CADDIES ENTER SECOND ANNUAL OPEN TOURNEY

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 27.—Toters of the clubs for 362 days of the year, Southern California caddies will come into their own here Aug. 5, 6 and 7 in the second annual $1000 open caddie golf tournament. Two hundred qualifiers, twice as many as last year, are expected to turn out for the 72-hole event.

Johnny Farrell of New York, former American open champion and noted also as the best dressed professional, will have to look to his honors. A special prize is announced for the caddy with the most sartorial appeal.

*Field.

Linger, taken into the lead at once, raced restrained to the final three-eighths, where he drew into lead and won in hand. Great Sport, in closest pursuit, begann tiring after reaching stretch but held others safe. Tom Byrne outfinished Honest John and John Peel. Latter two were done after seven furlongs. Others were badly outrun.

$2 mutuels paid: Linger, win $15.96, place $7.76, show $4.88; Great Sport, place $5, show $3.90; Tom Byrne, show $3.94.

SECOND RACE—$1500, claiming, 3-year-olds and up, mile and one-eighth— Start good, won driving, place same. Went to post at 2:51; at post 4 minutes. Winner, ch. g. 5, by Hanbridge—Nan Knoehr. Trainer—T. P. Hayes. Time—:25, :50 4-5, 1:17, 1:44 4-5, 1:58 4-5. Value to winner—$1050, $250, $150, $50.

HORSE.	WT.	PP.	ST.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Jockey.	Equivalent Odds to 1
Wolfy	107	7	3	2^{1}	2^{1}	3^{2}	$2^{½}$	1^{1}	J. Dell	20.35
Sweep Net	104	8	6	1^{1}	$1^{1½}$	2^{4}	1^{h}	2^{5}	V. Smith	4.77
Roxie Weidel	109	1	5	$6^{1½}$	3^{h}	1^{h}	3^{5}	3^{2}	D. DuBois	1.14
Billy Basil	98	3	7	4^{2}	4^{4}	4^{6}	4^{6}	4^{3}	H. Schutte	14.14

Bill Cosgrave	105	4	1	3^{h}	7^{4}	$7^{1½}$	8	8	R. Heigle	21.62

Wolfy, racing improved and well up from the start, responded well when urged hard and after reaching stretch and wearing down leaders won drawing away. Sweep Net showed the most speed from start, saved ground and held on fairly well. Roxie Weidel, close up after first quarter and restrained until final three-eights, headed Sweep Net for the lead, but faltered in the final eighth and might have been short. Billy Basil had no mishaps. Black Bart began slowly. Clover Club was done after three quarters.

$2 mutuels paid: Wolfy $42.70 win; $17.26 place, $7.92 show; Sweep Net $6.26 place, $4.42 show; Roxie Weidel $3.12 show.

THIRD RACE—$1500, The Wildwood, 2-year-olds, five and one-half furlongs: Start good; won, driving; place, same; went to post, 3:26; at post 1 minute. Winner, b f 2 by Wildair-Watersmeet. Trainer, F. M. Taylor. Time, 24; 50; 1:03 3-5; 1:11 1-5. Value to winner—$1050, $250, $150, $50.

HORSE.	WT.	PP.	ST.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Jockey.	Equivalent Odds to 1
Wild Waters	110	5	2	1^{1}	$1^{½}$	$1^{1½}$	1^{n}	W. Fronk	4.35
Lahore	115	3	1	$5^{1½}$	5^{1}	3^{1}	2^{2}	E. Shropshire	2.29

Hogan's Dance	109	1	5	6	6	6	6	C. Meyer	13.66

Wild Waters, well ridden and away fast, showed the most speed but began tiring after reaching the final furlong and just lasted. Labor unable to keep up the early part raced wide and closing with a rush would have headed winner in a few more strides. Lady Fingers appeared to change her stride repeatedly under hard riding and swerved when severely shaken up in the stretch drive. Star Lassi tired. Bernice Van began slowly, and after racing into contention tired.

$2 Mutuels paid: Wild Waters, win $8.70, place $3.46, show $2.48; Labor, place $3.34, show $2.38; Lady Fingers, show $2.44.

FOURTH RACE—$1500, The Dixiana Handicap, 3-year-olds and up, six furlongs— Start good, won easily, place driving. Went to post at 4:01; at post two minutes. Winner b. g. 4, by Trojan—Wawbeek. Trainer—J. H. Moody. Time, :24, :48, 1:14 2-5. Value to winner—$1500, $378, $202, $50.

Click	109	1	4	4	4	4	4	A. Collins	8.19

Cayuga easily the best, moved into command at once, opened up a big advantage approaching the stretch and continuing well under energetic tactics, held it. Greenock always in closest pursuit of the elader, outstayed Double Heart. Latter moved up menacingly after reaching stretch but weakened in final sixteenth. Click was outrun.

$2 mutuels paid: Cayuga, win $3.16, place $2.44, show, out; Greenock, place $3.22, show, out; Double Heart, show, out.

Duelist	111	3	5	3^{1}	$3^{1½}$	4^{2}	5^{h}	7	W. Fronk	8.76

Grand Dad, going in his best form, took command in the opening quarter, saved ground maintaining a good pace andtired badly near the end, but held his position safe. Armee Navee, closer up than usual from the start, finished resolutely. Maxiva, slow to begin and taken back repeatedly under a weak ride, closed full of run. Tony Joe had no mishap. Nicodemus and Congo II were outrun.

$2.00 mutuels paid: Grand Dad, win $8.64, place $4.60, show $3.10; Armee Navee, place $7.74, show $4.40; Maxiva, show $3.18.

Jack Horgan	112	2	8	8	8	8	8	8	C. Meyer	32.54

Indianapolis moved fast after half mile and, with a loss of ground, continued gamely after reaching stretch and slowly wore down Rasuli. Latter, urged to keep up, raced into lead with a rush on the stretch turn and held on stubbornly, but was not good enough. Ham saved much ground throughout. Sweet Mandy tired after reaching stretch. Homewood had early speed.

$2 mutuels paid: Indianapolis, win $30.58, place $8.76, show $6.54; Rasuli, place $4.92, show $4.06; Ham, show $7.30.

APPRENTICE JOCKEY STRONG ON PUBLICITY

NEW YORK, July 27.—If Paul Neal, sensational 16-year-old western apprentice jockey, cannot get in the news one way he manages to in another.

Usually the story is of Neal's double or triple victories. The other day his contract was sold for $10,000, and then for a day or two he dropped out of the sports column.

The lastest news, however, is his three-day suspension for rough riding.

The suspension followed the riding of three winners in a row at Arlington Park.

CARDINAL SYSTEM PUTS CHECK ON CONSTRUCTIVE ABILITY OF LEADER

CHAIN STORES WORK AGAINST INDIVIDUALITY, M'GRAW WRITES

By John J. McGraw,
Manager New York Giants.
(Copyright, 1929.)

The important development of the week which may be a real turning point in the National League race has been the ability of the Cubs to take advantage of the crippled condition of both the Pirates and Giants, making a gain of at least two full games.

Thus with New York and Pittsburg hampered by injured players, the Cubs, who have shown a great fight, have quite a shade. The absence of such men as Pie Traynor and Eddie Roush even temporarily, is a heavy handicap. Right now, with the race tightening, every ounce of driving power is needed.

Another advantage for the Cubs is the smooth way the pitching staff has settled down for the past three weeks. They seem to be in a real stride. The power of secondary strength to a ball club is shown in the way Cliff Heathcote has been going while Kiki Cuyler is out. With Heathcote hitting there has been no apparent slowing up at all. Another player who has been a most important cog in the Cub machine is Grimm, at first base. He has been so steadily efficient in the general defense that his wonderful ability has not received as much attention as it should.

Athletics Tighten Position.

And while the Cubs have taken advantage of their opportunity which will probably increase with so many games to play in their own ball park, the Athletics appear to have pretty well tightened their position in the American League. No team other than the Yankees has much of a chance of catching them. Even the task of the Yanks has begun to grow almost hopeless. The return of Ruth has put fresh life in the Yanks and they are fighting for all they are worth.

It's tough on the spirit of a ball club, however, when they are making a good winning record and still can't gain an inch. As fast as the Yanks step out, the Athletics with their run-driving power travel just a little faster. That is certainly discouraging to a runner-up. The slump that was looked for arrived, but it lasted but a few days. The ability of the Athletics to come out of it shows real championship caliber. The big thing for Connie Mack is the confidence of his players in themselves. They have caught the feel of winning, or superiority or whatever you wish to call it, but any ball player knows what I mean. The Athletics also have been helped by a growing sympathy of the fans for them. The feelings of the fans have a decided psychological effect on the pep and fighting spirit of a ball club.

Little Chance for Surprise.

There is little chance for surprises in either race now. The two fights have narrowed down to two teams in the American and three in the National. I can see no likelihood of any of the other teams driving their way to the top. The Robins have shown a real punch in beating the Pirates and they will cause trouble to all the contenders, but one team is just as likely to catch the force of their punch as another.

As we arrived here everybody was interested, of course, in the shift of managers, which sent Billy Southworth back to Rochester and brought Bill McKechnie on to lead the Cardinals again. The Cardinals appear to be caught in the limitations of their own chain of clubs and their officials seem to show a timidity about giving any manager a long term in office. In a way that works against constructive originality. The workings of a chain within itself unquestionably puts a check on individuality.

Another instance of this in a different form was the appointment of Rabbit Maranville as manager of the Braves, an office that he declined unless he was guaranteed a term of office long enough to build up a team according to his own ideas. Personally I think Maranville was wise in that decision. There is little satisfaction in leading a ball club that was built up by somebody else.

A team already organized and with the prospects of remaining that way can be directed by one man about as well another. The real test of merit and ability is when the manager has the opportunity of constructing and organizing the team that he will lead. In that way it becomes a creation of his own and he feels a lot different about it. Appointment to temporary leadership usually implies that the owners do not entirely relinquish their own ideas of direction.

Glad A. L. Made Move.

Maranville is a pretty smart baseball man and he sees the disadvantage of trying to carry out plans that may not be his own.

I am glad to note that the American League also has taken up the matter of the lively ball and is beginning to look into it. Lately several players and former baseball leaders have suggested that a return to the spit ball would give the pitchers an edge that they need. Personally I think they ought to be given a little help but I have never liked the idea of the spitball—not on account of its effectiveness but the sight of a man smearing up the ball that way always has been somewhat distasteful to me.

This spitball, though, has been of immense advantage to Burleigh Grimes because he is the only right-hander left in the National League who has a right to use it. It gives him an edge on the rest of the pitchers in the league. The baseball law allows him a strong weapon that others cannot use.

SPORT SALAD

by L. C. Davis

King for a Day.

FOLKS, we're pleased to have you meet
The one and only Gabby Street,
Whose record's one-and-none.
For one whole day he ran the Birds,
And won the game—in other words
He made a hole-in-one.

So Gabby let it go at that;
He figured that by standing pat
He'd never lose his fame.
We'd like to see somebody beat
The record of our Gabby Street,
Who never lost a game.

Though manager for but a day,
He showed the customers the way
The business should be done.
While his career was short and sweet,
The record of our Gabby Street
Was quite a brilliant one.

Not So Bad.

While Lady Luck wasn't making googoo eyes at Bill Southworth she gave the "Kid" a break when he turned a 13-game deficit to Bill McKechnie in exchange for a nice little seven-game lead at Rochester.

"Lowers Own Swimming Record, But Mark Will Not Be Recognized."

The A. A. U. can't see any water marks in the paper.

Maybe the swimmer had the tide with her and the mark was only tied.

Old "Pete" Alexander started his pitching career with Galesburg, Ill., at $100 per month. One hundred berries was pretty important money in those days but "Pete" proved that he was worth it.

Pitchers' Chorus.

NO longer will the pellet slip
Because we'll get a firmer grip.
When with dirt the ball they soil
The home-run hitters we will foil,
And keep the ball inside the lot—
Good morning, Messrs. Klein and Ott!

The Gored Ox.

Rubbing the ball with soil meets with the hearty approval of the hurlers but the batters claim it is rubbing it in on them.

The Browns have been so pleasantly placed in the American League we wouldn't be surprised if they renewed their mortgage on third place.

"Jess Sweetser Cup Is Jess Jess Sweetser's."

Atta boy, Jess, win your own game!

See where Umpire George Magerkurth put John McGraw out of his own ball park. Going to show that you can't judge a man by his name.

In rebuttal it might be said, however, that John has been put out of his own park by better men than George Magerkurth.

There is a feeling of unrest in organized baseball. The bottle throwers are swinging into action again and utterly ignoring the 10-day clause in the Kellogg pact.

And despite the denials of the manufacturers, the umpires maintain that the bottles are at least 50 per cent livlier than the pre-war containers.

Another reason advanced by the makers is that the fans are throwing better and that the bottles, while they cost more, go much further.

Rebuilt Century Club Crew to Make Bid for National Title At Springfield, Mass., Saturday

By Damon Kerby

Just 10 years and one day since he himself rowed in a race that brought a National championship to St. Louis, Coach Arthur G. Heyne of the Century Boat Club will send his eight on the water Saturday at Springfield, Mass., in an endeavor to bring another championship to St. Louis.

The St. Louis crew is scheduled to depart Tuesday for the annual regatta of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen—the most important event of the year for non-college crews. Coach Heyne's crew will compete Saturday in the senior championship race. Junior events will be run off Friday.

On Aug. 2, 1919, Heyne, with Oliver Belzer, Sam Osterricher, and Rudy Abeken, comprised a four-oared crew that won the national four-oared event at Worcester, Mass., and set a "dead water" record that has never been surpassed in non-college rowing. The St. Louis crew rowed a mile and a quarter "dead water" course in 6:56, finishing ahead of the second-place Duluth crew by eight boat lengths.

The Naval Academy crew of Annapolis finished third.

Heyne continued to row until 1923, when he dropped out of rowing activities and did not return until he took over the Century crew as coach, last year. In the past year and a half he has been inculcating a system and stroke somewhat similar to the late Pop Courtney's, at Cornell, in the Century oarsmen, which he and they hope will bear fruit in the form of a national championship this week.

Heyne Has a Fine Crew.

It is a great crew, physically, that Heyne will send into action Saturday, regardless of the lineup. Any eight men of the 12 listed in the official entries will average as much as six feet two and one-eighth inches in height and 178 pounds in weight. This is believed to be a better average than any of the great crews in the country can show.

To back up their power and pull, the Century oarsmen have trained hard under Heyne. Since Feb. 5 they have given up all outside activities to spend each evening on the water, rowing as late as 11 o'clock. A regular practice session has also been held each Sunday morning.

Following the defeat of the senior crew in the municipal regatta last Sunday by the junior crew, the lineup for the national regatta has been undetermined. Every seat in the senior crew was declared open and a bitter battle has been under way each evening of the past week under the lee of the bluffs on the South Side for seats in the first crew and a trip to New England.

Even Captain May Be Displaced.

Even the captain of the senior crew, John Bokel, was forced to give up his seat in the senior shell in favor of a husky young junior.

ARTHUR HEYNE.

It is likely that Bokel will be taken to the national, but it is entirely possible that he will have to sit on the side lines as a substitute while the races are in progress.

Coach Heyne was asked if the constant last-minute shifting wouldn't endanger the teamwork of the Century crew. "It might have some tendency to hurt their teamwork," he replied, "but the extra competition for seats among all the contenders will more than offset any little lack of smoothness in the boat. However, any combination I send in will row with more teamwork than the average crew. The boys have trained hard and the training is bound to show."

The nation's leading non-college crews, from Duluth, Chicago, Philadelphia and New England, will compete in the national event. If more than eight crews are entered, the race will be rowed in heats.

Under the St. Louis crew will be the new "Lydia D. Buder" shell, which was built at Cambridge, Mass., last winter and delivered here for approximately $1500.

Those whose names are listed on the official entry list of the local club, two of whom may be weeded out before the crew departs, are: Capt. John E. Bokel, George Antrobius, William Buder, William Duchek, John Forst, Armond Forster, Raymond Huber, Fred M. Karches, James Meyer, Harold Smith, Frank Schmidt, Orville Telthorst and Robert Ruedi, coxswain.

County Net Event Starts Aug. 10 At Westborough

The fifteenth annual St. Louis County tennis championship will be held on the courts of the Westborough Country Club in Webster Groves during the week commencing Saturday Aug. 10. There will be events for men in singles and doubles. The tournament has been officially sanctioned by the United States Lawn Tennis Association. Herbert Weinstock, Westwood Country Club player, is the present holder of the St. Louis County men's singles title which he won two years ago at the Woodlawn Country Club in Kirkwood. Theodore R. Drewes, local municipal champion and Richard Dietrich, Ferris Tennis Club player, are the present men's doubles champions.

According to an anouncement made by Walter L. Pfeffer, chairman of the tournament committee, the county championship will be open to all players residing in St. Louis County. The entry fee for the men's singles is $1 while the doubles fee is $2 per team. Players may enter at 921 Locust street, 1127 Pine street or 823 Locust street. Mail entries accompanied by the necessary fee may be sent to W. L. Pfeffer, Westborough Country Club, Webster Groves, Mo. The entry list will close Thursday Aug. 8 at 6 p. m.

The committee in charge of the tournament hopes to secure the entries from every section of St. Louis County. Players residing in Brentwood, Oakland, Glendale, Clayton, Jennings, Webster Groves, Kirkwood, Maplewood, Ferguson, Jefferson Barracks, University City, Wellston, Richmond Heights, Pine Lawn, Luxemburg and all other sections are urged to enter.

FEW EXPECTED TO BEAT PAR IN U. S. AMATEUR

DEL MONTE, Cal., July 27.—So far par has evaded any official attempts against it at Pebble Beach links where the National Amateur Golf championship will be determined Sept. 2 to 7.

The official course record is 73 (one over par) and was made by Johnny McHugh, San Francisco, on the second day of the qualifying round of the recent California amateur championship in which McHugh unsuccessfully defended his title which was won by Jack Neville of Monterey Peninsula Country Club; Neville defeating McHugh in the semifinals and winning from Franklin C. Stevens Jr., of Pebble Beach in the finals.

In unofficial competition, however, par has been bested a very few times. On July 16, Phillip Finlay, former Eastern Intercollegiate star, now a resident of Redlands, Cal., scored a 71 (one under par) on this occasion. Finlay who is one of the longest drivers in America, sank all putts. His card with par:

Out—
Par: ....454 435 344—36
Finley ....454 335 364—37
In— 443 454 435—36—72
343 354 435—34—71

A number of months ago, before Chandler Egan had completely revised the Pebble Beach course for the coming national tournament, Dr. Paul Hunter of Pasadena, former California champion, was credited with a 71. Both Finley and Hunter have entered this year's National. Young Finley has been shooting great golf since his arrival at Pebble Beach. On July 14, he scored a 74 in spite of a "young gale." This score included 4's on every par-3 hole. On the preceding day, he shot a 73 and missed six putts for birdies.

There is much speculation as to what Bobby Jones will do at Pebble Beach when he reaches here some 10 days before the start of the big tournament. General opinion concedes Jones at least one or two rounds under 70. However, it is freely predicted that most of the visiting Eastern stars will find the ocean and other natural and artificial hazards at Pebble Beach quite severe and that below par rounds are going to be few and far between throughout the tournament.

BIRMINGHAM BARONS BEAT ST. LOUIS STARS IN SERIES OPENER, 12-10

The Birmingham Black Barons in the Negro National Baseball League defeated the St. Louis Stars in yesterday's game at the Stars' Park. The score was 12 to 10. Meredith was the leading hitter for the visitors when he collected four hits including a home run in six trips to the plate, while Creacy led the locals in batting. Suttles, Oden, Wells and Smith hit circuit drives.

A double-header is scheduled for this afternoon with the first game starting at 1:30 o'clock.

Obear Serving Fifth Term as Valley Official

Davison Obear, of St. Louis, who is completing his fifth year as secretary of the Missouri Valley Tennis Association is one of the busiest tennis officials in the United States.

OBEAR.

Beginning his career in 1917 as first secretary of the St. Louis District Tennis Association, Obear has worked unceasingly for the past twelve years to further the cause of amateur tennis in this country.

In the various positions which Obear occupies at present, he considers his membership on the Executive Committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association as the highest honor. Two other posts he values highly are those of president of the National Public Parks Tennis Association and secretary-treasurer of the Missouri Valley Tennis Association.

Among other affiliations are the following:

Member of the Public Parks Committee of the U. S. L. T. A.
Member of the Executive Committee, National Public Parks T. A.
Member of the Executive Committee, Missouri Valley T. A.
Member of the Executive Committee, St. Louis District T. A.
Delegate to Municipal Tennis Association of St. Louis.
President, Bartmer Tennis Club of St. Louis.
Member of the Forest Park Tennis Club, St. Louis.
Member of Principia Academy Tennis Club, St. Louis.

In addition to being chairman of the membership committee of the Missouri Valley Tennis Association, is chairman of the Constitution and By-Laws Committee of the St. Louis District Tennis Association and also a member of its finance committee.

In 1920 Obear conceived the idea of a National Tennis Umpires Association and he was named first secretary of the organization now sponsored by the United States Lawn Tennis Association. During the past few years Obear has assisted other local officials in bringing to St. Louis the National Public Parks and National Clay Court Tennis Tournaments, Davis cup matches and trials and various exhibitions in which many prominent players took part.

Obear inherits his tennis enthusiasm from his father, Frank Obear, who was the first president of the Western Lawn Tennis Association and who organized the Knickerbocker Tennis Club, the first tennis club in St. Louis in 1881.

Zuppke Seeking Third Successive Conference Title

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., July 27.—Application blanks for football games here this fall will be put in the mails at various periods so as to enable all on the mailing list to have their applications back here by Aug. 15 when the ticket sales will start. With the exception of students and faculty members, there will be no over-the-counter sales of tickets for the Army-Illini game Nov. 9 all other tickets being sold by mail.

It has been announced army cadets will not make the trip west for the Army-Illinois game. The expense of transporting and caring for the nearly 1500 cadets would amount to between $120,000 and $150,000, which is considered prohibitive.

Coach Zuppke will start the fall football practice on Sept. 16 with the opening practice game on Oct. 5 with Kansas playing here.

With approximately twenty letter men expected back this fall and a goodly number of last season squadmen and several promising sophomores, who made favorable showings on the freshman team last fall, Illinois will have fairly bright prospects for another strong team. The Illini won the Big Ten conference championship the last two seasons and nothing would suit Zuppke better than to make it three in a row. With conference games with Iowa, Michigan, Northwestern, Chicago and Ohio State, the going will be extremely hard.

Claims Contenders Make More Money Than Champions

CHICAGO, July 27.

IT'S the lively contender and not the champion who makes the most cash in the lighter divisions of the ring industry, Sammy Goldman believes.

Goldman, manager of Tony Canzoneri, who meets Sammy Mandell for the lightweight crown at the Chicago Stadium Aug. 2, said Tony made more money after losing his featherweight crown than he did while champion.

AVOIDED GRID INJURY; BREAKS ARM AT BASEBALL

By the Associated Press.

ABILENE, Tex., July 27.—Franklyn "Bear" Allday played four years of college football without injury, but he failed to survive two months of professional baseball.

He has been laid up indefinitely as the result of a broken arm sustained in a game between Abilene and San Angelo of the West Texas League. At that time his .397 batting average was the second highest in the circuit.

Allday, a former Centenary College backfield star, is the property of Wichita Falls of the Texas League. He is considered a promising prospect.

SIX MUNICIPAL BASEBALL LEAGUE CHAMPIONSHIPS ARE CLINCHED

QUEST, PITCHER OF NO-HIT GAME, HURLS SHUTOUT, GIVING ONE HIT

Six divisional championships were won in yesterday's Municipal Baseball League play as the various leaders clinched the pennants by winning their respective games. The season will close officially in two weeks.

In the Y. M. C. A. Industrial Leagues, the McQuay, Wabash and Western teams appear as certain winners. The McQuays won their twelfth straight victory in League No. 1.

The Weatherbirds clinched the title in the International Shoe League by taking a forfeit game from the second place Star Brand nine.

The Kroemekes seem assured of first place in the Commercial League with a lead of two games two weeks before the season ends.

In the South Side Evangelical division, St. Matthews swamped Ebenezer, 13 to 4, to become the champions. St. Matthew was considerably helped in its victory not only by the pitching, but also the hitting of Fischer, who had five hits out of five times at bat, including a double and triple.

Wilbert Quest, who last week pitched the Pilgrims to a no-hit, no-run victory in the North Side Evangelical League, maintained his high standard yesterday by letting down St. Peters with one hit and no runs. He walked one batter and struck out 13, to enable his team to win easily, 15 to 0.

Miss Endicott Beats Mrs. Dueker in Parks Singles

The Forest Park Tennis Club team defeated the O'Fallon Park players, 3 to 2, in a match in the women's Inter Park League at Forest Park yesterday afternon. O'Fallon Park is leading the league although not a certain winner. The match between O'Fallon and Fairgrounds Park today will decide the race.

In the singles yesterday Melicent Endicott, Forest Park, defeated Mrs. Virginia Baer Dueker, O'Fallon Park, 6—1, 6—3. The 1928 district ranking committee placed Mrs. Dueker ahead of Miss Endicott on comparative scores against Ruth Bailey, as the two did not meet during the season. Miss Endicott's victory yesterday will entitle her to be seeded No. 1 in the coming Municipal championship.

Lottie Hagemeyer, Forest Park, defeated Mrs. Violet Furlong, O'Fallon, in the second singles encounter yesterday. Mrs. Furlong outplaced her opponent in the opening set but Miss Hagemeyer proved too steady in the next two sets. The score was 2—6, 6—2, 6—2.

In the third singles match Mrs. B. K. Brouster added another point for Forest Park when she defeated Wilma Benson, of O'Fallon. Mrs. Brouster took the first set 6—4. In the second set Miss Benson led at 3 to 2 and 4 to 3 but Mrs. Brouster's consistent playing gave her the set, 6—4 and the match.

O'Fallon Park won the first doubles match when Mrs. Ann Lindemann and Ann Kaiman defeated the Dubuque sisters, 6—4, 6—3. The other doubles match played last week, was won by O'Fallon Park.

RACE ACROSS DESERT SET FOR NEXT YEAR

By the Associated Press.

ALGIERS, Northern Africa, July 27.—The Grand Prix of the Sahara will be disputed in 1930, upon the 100th anniversary of the conquest of Algeria by the French. The event is a 1500-mile automobile race from Algiers across the desert sands to Timbuctoo.

Fifty years ago Timbuctoo was synonymous with the unattainable. It required a lifetime to reach it, and bones of the countless men who gave up their lives in the attempt still litter the sandy trails.

In 1922 the crossing of the Sahara to Timbuctoo by the Audoin-Dubreuil mission in caterpillar automobiles was hailed as a glorious feat.

A regular courier-automobile service now makes the round trip in 20 days.

JANE WAITE, ST. LOUIS, SAILS FOR SWIMMING MEET IN HONOLULU

The New Coliseum Athletic Club will hold its second monthly City Indoor Swimming meet Wednesday, at 7:00 p. m., for both men and women. Entries are open to all registered swimmers in the Western Association of the A. A. U. Entry blanks can be secured at the New Coliseum Pool. Entries close on Wednesday at noon.

In the women's events, Jane Waite, the Coliseum star, will be absent as she sailed for Honolulu yesterday on the S. S. "Malolo" to compete in the National A. A. U. championships. Miss Waite left immediately after her record breaking swim in the Meramec River last Sunday. She was designated by the National Swimming Committee of the A. A. U. as a member of the team and through the co-operation of the National Committee, the Western District of the A. A. U. and the New Coliseum Athletic Club her expenses were assured.

SOUTHERN METHODISTS TO PLAY NAVY IN 1930

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., July 27.—An agreement for football games between Southern Methodist University and the United States Naval Academy to be held in the East in 1930 and 1931, has been reached. J. N. Blackwell, business manager of athletics at Southern Methodist, announced tonight.

Blackwell said contracts were not signed, but that the first contest would take place Nov. 15 at Baltimore, Washington or Annapolis. The contracts probably will be signed next month when Commander Jonas Ingram, director of athletics at the Naval Academy, comes here to attend the Rockne-Warner coaching school.

The 1931 game also will be played in the East.

U. S. WINS ONLY TWO EVENTS IN REGATTA

PORT DALHOOSIE, Ont., July 27.—Oarsmen from the two Toronto clubs, the Dons and Argonauts, dominated the final day's races in the annual regatta of the Canadian Association of Amateur oarsmen today.

Of the nine races on the closing day's program the two Toronto clubs won no fewer than six. Invaders from the United States, rowing in six events, fared badly, but the Penn Boat Club of Philadelphia recorded a victory.

The Penn club's victory came in the senior four, last event on the program, the Philadelphians winning by three lengths from Brockville, Ont.

The Argonauts' victories came in the senior eights, the singles sculls and the junior 150 pound fours. The Dons won the quarter mile single sculls dash, the senior 140 pound fours and the senior 150 pound fours.

Another American victory was recorded in the senior 150-pound eights when the West Side Club of Buffalo defeated Detroit by six inches in 6:46. The McGill University eight also started but dropped out when it wandered off the course.

Minnesota Golf Champion.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 27.—Frank Brokl of the Keller Golf Club, St. Paul, today won the Minnesota State Amateur Golf championship by defeating H. L. Robinson Jr., of Minikhada, Minneapolis, 8 and 6.

News of Society in The National Capital

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Washington suffered a great disappointment this week in the inability of Mrs. Coolidge to return to Washington for even a brief visit. Scores of women who had made known their intention of going to the Union Station to meet the train bearing Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge changed their plans when they heard the disappointing news and left the former President to be conducted with masculine formality to the Willard Hotel where he lived while serving as Vice President. It was much like a homecoming to him, for he was shown into the vice presidential suite on his arrival there and slept in the same room and on the same bed he occupied for several years.

While the Vice President, Charles Curtis, took himself off for a series of family visits, his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, remained at the Mayflower, driving and walking, dining in simple places and meeting old friends. Mrs. Gann's nimble fingers are never idle and, like Mrs. Hoover, she constantly plies the needle. She has just sent by parcel post to her two great nieces, Anne and Pamelia George, three charming little wash dresses, every stitch of which she made. As soon as plans are completed, she and Mr. Gann will leave Washington for New York where business calls him, and from there they will make a few visits and then go to Topeka, Kan.

Senator Tasker L. Oddie of Nevada, and Mrs. Oddie have just started on a trip to Brazil, where, at Rio de Janeiro, the Senator will attend as President Hoover's representative the Pan-American road conference. They are sailing on the Western World and with them will be another delegate and his wife, the former Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Walter Drake. Representative Cyrenus Cole of Iowa, a newspaper man and author, was appointed on the same commission. Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes gave Mrs. Oddie a good deal of advice on the subject of her wardrobe, including the warning to take many winter garments. Mrs. Oddie is one of the handsomest women in the Senate, tall and stately.

Woodley, the place on Woodley road recently bought by Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry Lewis Stimson, is undergoing many repairs, but very few changes. Almost all of the work is in the way or restoration and there clings about the fine old mansion, with its grounds filled with forest trees, many delightful traditions. The late President Cleveland took his bride there to spend a summer that she might be removed from the constant stream of visitors that beset the White House, and it was not unusual for those driving up the then country road to see the President and the first lady of the land strolling under the trees or going out to meet some friend just arriving from the city. Now the place is surrounded by city houses and when the social season opens next winter the visiting world will have no trouble in going calling there.

The nearest official neighbors of Secretary and Mrs. Stimson will be Senator and Mrs. Lawrence C. Phipps of Colorado.

Smart Misses and Matrons Will Select Their Winter Apparel During This—

AUGUST COAT EVENT

$58

The great occasion that ushers in the New Season's Styles.....and brings you the ultimate in Coat Fashions and Coat Values ....

THE announcement of this annual event is of paramount importance because it provides Variety of Styles—Luxuriousness in Furs—Super-workmanship—and Values that will not be duplicated later in the season. It is a signal to fashion-loving misses and women to select their coats NOW, as every preparation has been made to make this one of the outstanding 1929-1930 fashion achievements. Plan to make your selection while our stock is complete with models for every type of figure and in a full range of sizes.

A Small Deposit is all we require to hold your selection in our storage vaults for later delivery

The Masterful Supremacy of this Large Style Store will be demonstrated by this Dominant Value-Giving Coat Event.........

CUNNINGHAM'S, with an established reputation for exclusiveness in style, planned this event in cooperation with Parisian couturiers and foremost American manufacturers. Each coat has been literally "hand picked." This season of lavishness in furs accentuates Paris-inspired styles—ripples—flares—back-dipping hemlines—Princess silhouettes and tailleur effects. Expert workmanship and distinctive fabrics meet high standards of requirement to carry out Cunningham's prestige as the style store of the community.

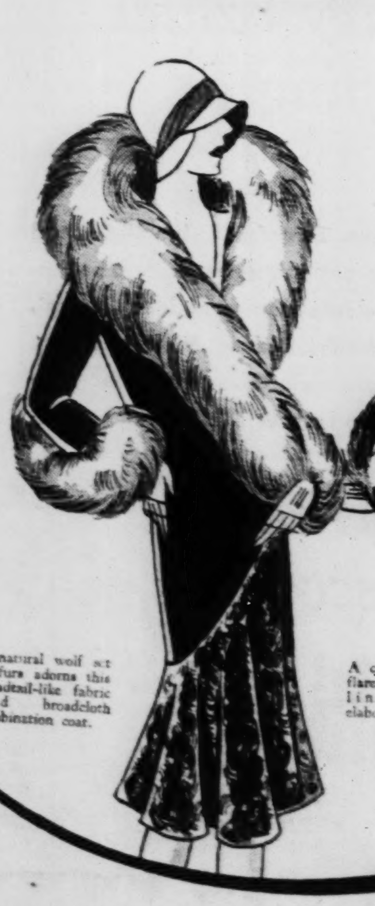
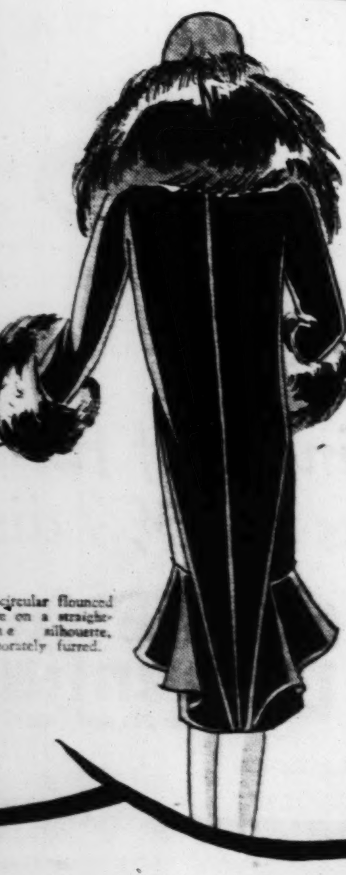
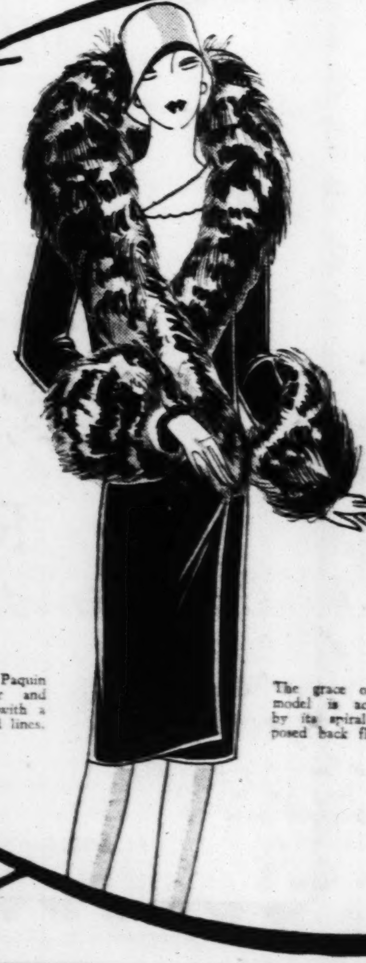
All the New Fabrics—New Colors—Furs of Exquisite Pelty in generous variety —contribute to these smart styles



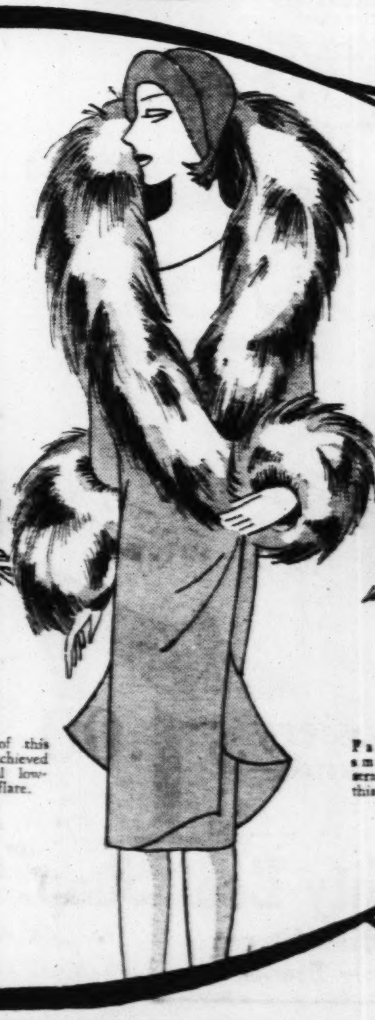
A natural wolf set of furs adorns this broadtail-like fabric and broadcloth combination coat.



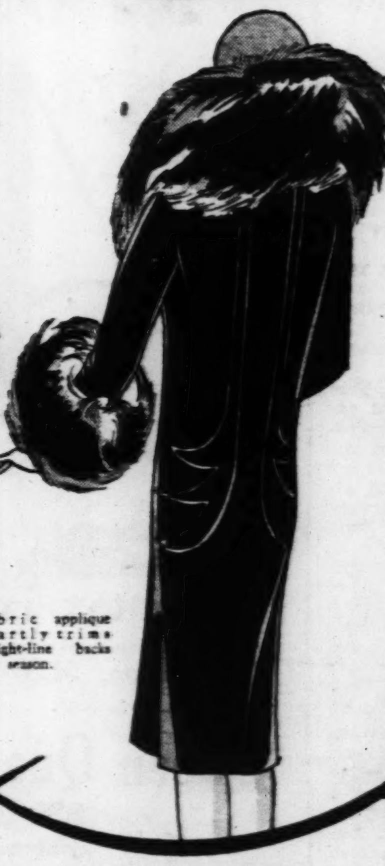
A circular flounced flare on a straight-line silhouette, elaborately furred.



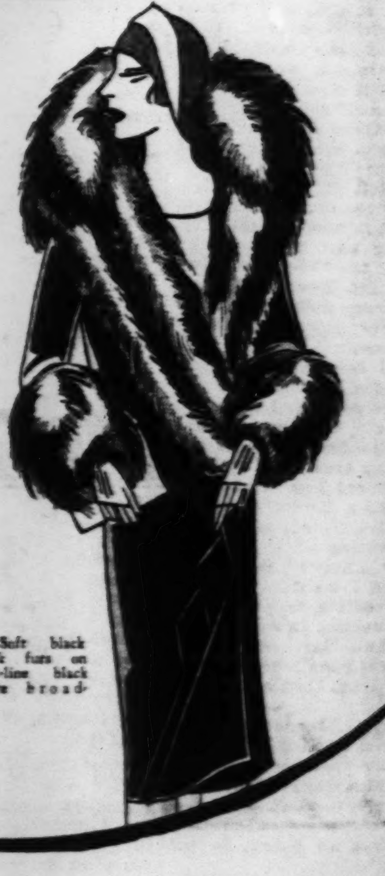
Civet Cat Paquin shawl collar and deep cuffs, with a hint of fitted lines.



The grace of this model is achieved by its spiral low-posed back flare.



Fabric applique smartly trims straight-line backs this season.



Fine Soft black skunk furs on straight-line black cashmere broadcloth.

Downee-Didee

The NEW Downee-Didee
Prevents Diaper Rash

This new convenience for mothers offers the solution to one of your most trying problems. It has been thoroughly tested and approved by maternity hospitals, physicians and mothers everywhere. This new, modern diaper is ever so comfortable for baby, and

Dee-Dee Pads Protect the Skin

A soft, fluffy, absorbent Dee-Dee Pad (made to fit), that protects the baby's delicate skin and prevents diaper rash, is placed in the Downee-Didee. When soiled it is as easily disposed of as ordinary tissue. The carrying or saving of soiled diapers is no longer necessary.

Eliminates the Endless Task of Diaper Washing

Each Downee-Didee will replace a dozen or more ordinary diapers. They are made in three sizes to correctly fit babies of different ages. Dee-Dee Pads come in convenient packages of 24. Both Downee-Didees and Dee-Dee Pads are reasonably priced and will save their small cost many times by keeping baby's outer garments unsoiled, and blankets and crib always dry. Know the relief and convenience they afford—try them.

A CHALLENGE TO SKEPTICS!

This is a challenge to skeptics who haven't heard the Ampico.

You have read that the Ampico exactly reproduces the playing of great artists upon the piano itself. Yet somehow you don't believe it. Having heard the old-fashioned player-piano and never the Ampico, you probably think, "It must sound mechanical; can't be the same as the artist's playing."

In print we cannot correct that impression. But if you will visit Ampico Hall and listen to the Ampico for five minutes, we'll guarantee you will get as much pleasure from hearing Rachmaninoff on the Ampico as on the concert stage. Only your eyes will tell you whether he is sitting at the keyboard or whether the Ampico is reenacting his playing; to the ear there is no difference.

AMPICO

The only instrument that exactly reproduces the playing of great artists upon the piano itself.

Tune in on Ampico Hall Radio Program Every Sunday. 9:30 P. M.—Station KMOX

In Upright Models, $750 Up

Initial Payment $75

In Grand Pianos, $1345 Up

Initial Payment $134.50

Convenient terms may be arranged. A generous allowance made for your old piano.

EAST ST. LOUIS SOCIAL NOTES

MISS CORA EVELYN WHITLOCK, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Whitlock of 730 Veronica avenue, and the Rev. Delbert Lacquement, son of Ernest Lacquement of Sparta, Ill., were married last evening at 8 o'clock in the First Methodist Episcopal Church at Thirteenth street and Summit avenue. The Rev. C. L. Peterson of Mount Vernon, Ill., performed the ceremony.

The bride wore a gown of white georgette and carried ivory tinted roses and lilies of the valley. Her veil was held in place with a Juliet cap.

Mrs. George Jacobs of Chicago was the matron of honor. Miss Laura Willhite of Mount Carmel, Ill., and Miss Ruth Henry of Oblong, Ill., were the bridesmaids.

Clarence Brennan served the groom as best man and Virgil McCormick of Newton, Ill., and Melvin Patek of Collinsville, Ill., were the groomsmen. George Jacobs of Chicago and Walter Whitlock, brother of the bride, acted as ushers.

Immediately following the ceremony the pair left for a motor trip to Washington, D. C., and then to Southold, L. I., where the Rev. Lacquement has a summer pastorate.

Mrs. D. Schroeder, Mrs. E. E. Henry and her daughter, Miss Marie Henry, of 418 North Ninth street, have returned from a short visit at Jacksonville, Ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Coffey of Brighton place are spending the week-end in Chicago.

Miss Marjory Spannagel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Noel Spannagel of 3225 Forest boulevard, returned yesterday from a visit of several weeks in Jonesboro and Pocahontas, Ark., and Memphis, Tenn. Miss Gail Spannagel is spending this week at Camp Vandeventer at Waterloo, Ill.

Mrs. Harold G. Baker of 1108 Summit avenue will entertain with a bridge luncheon on Saturday in honor of Miss Mary Louise Williamson, who will become the bride of James P. Dillie of Granite City, Ill., Aug. 5.

TRAINING POLICEMEN IN USE OF INHALATORS

Department Now Has Four Machines for Producing Artificial Respiration.

Four new H-H type inhalators, recently purchased for $200 each by the city in connection with the Police Department's first aid program, have been placed at strategic points for use in accidents in which it is necessary to revive persons by artificial respiration. Four such inhalators already are in use by the Fire Department.

The Fire Department's inhalators are at Engine Co. No. 50, Newstead and Duncan avenues; No. 38, Grand boulevard and Potomac street; No. 40, Eleventh street and Lucas avenue, and No. 31, Kossuth and Warne avenues.

For the last two weeks, the Police Department has been training officers and each district now has a crew of six or more men familiar with the operation of the inhalators. Eventually, every man in the department would receive this instruction, Chief of Police Gerk said yesterday.

Chief Gerk pointed out that inhalators had been found to be of great value in cases of gas asphyxiation, electric shock, drowning and asphyxia of the new born. In such cases he directed that officers apply artificial respiration and send at once for an inhalator.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT ARRIVES AT HONGKONG

Governor of Porto Rico on Way Back to U. S. From Central Asian Hunt.

By the Associated Press.

HONGKONG, July 27.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt arrived here today from Saigon, en route to the United States, accompanied by Harold Coolidge of Boston, with trophies of the Kelly-Roosevelt Field Museum expedition to Central Asia.

Roosevelt said that he was anticipating taking up his work as Governor of Porto Rico.

"I am most deeply sensible of the importance of the work to be done and also most grateful to the President for the confidence expressed in me," he said.

Discussing the hunting expedition, Roosevelt said:

"The undertaking was exceptionally successful. One great sorrow we have in connection with the expedition is the death of Russel Hendee, who died of malignant malaria. He was a scientist with a great future. Mr. Coolidge and his associates collected birds and small mammals in Laos. They are bringing out the first scientific survey of that district ever made. Their collections undoubtedly contain many new species and it is impossible to foretell what they are. An Indo-China authority who saw the collection expressed the opinion that it contained an extraordinary number of subspecies.

"I collected large mammals for mounting as groups, comprising water buffalo, sledang, being the largest wild ox, as well as smaller species. I also shot a splendid specimen of a bull elephant. The live animals we collected arrived in Hongkong in good health. In all the collection consists of 3000 birds and 1000 small mammals. Mr. Coolidge is taking home 70 cases of the collection too valuable to send any other way."

AIR-RAIL LINE TO CONNECT WITH VIRGINIA, CAROLINAS

T. A. T. Announces Association With Norfolk & Western for 48-Hour Service.

A new air-rail association, effective Aug. 1, between Transcontinental Air Transport and the Norfolk & Western Railway was announced here yesterday by T. B. Clement, general traffic manager of the air line.

The new association was made, Clement said, to provide coast-to-coast service between the Virginia and Carolina cities served by the Norfolk & Western, and the Pacific Coast served by the air line through its present associations with the Pennsylvania and Santa Fe Railroads.

The service will be similar in arrangement to that with the Pennsylvania. Norfolk & Western passengers, traveling aboard the Pocahontas, will be transferred to T. A. T. planes at Port Columbus, O., after an overnight ride from the Eastern cities. They will be transported then aboard the planes during the day and the Santa Fe Railroad during the night to arrive in Los Angeles 48 hours after leaving the Atlantic Coast.

Service eastbound will be on a similar schedule—T. A. T. plane from Los Angeles to Clovis, N. M., Santa Fe from Clovis to Waynoka, Ok., T. A. T. plane to Port Columbus and Norfolk & Western Railroad to the Atlantic seaboard.

NATIONAL PROBATION OFFICER TO AID WELFARE LEAGUE

Will Visit St. Louis to Help With Recommendations for State Survey Board.

Ralph E. Drowne, field secretary of the National Probation Association, will arrive in St. Louis tomorrow to assist the Missouri Welfare League in formulating recommendations relative to probation and parole to be submitted to the Committee on Penal Institutions of the State Survey Commission.

The recommendations are to be submitted as soon as possible, as the committee has advised the Welfare League that suggestions pertaining to prevention of delinquency and treatment of offenders should be made this summer. Drowne will remain in the city for several days.

NEW RED CROSS CONVENTION SIGNED BY 32 COUNTRIES

U. S. Among Signatories of Revised Agreement Formulated at Geneva.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, July 27.—A Red Cross conference which has been in session here since the beginning of the month to revise the Geneva Red Cross convention concluded its labors today with the signing of a revised convention by the delegates of 32 countries as well as a conventon to improve the condition of prisoners of war.

The signatory states include the United States, Brazil, Chile, Cuba, the Dominican republic, Mexico and Uruguay.

The convention remains open for signature till February, 1930, and after that for adhesions.

Snails Tie Up Train.

By the Associated Press.

CASABLANCA, Morocco, July 27.—Snails have taken such a liking to the hot railroad tracks as to constitute a nuisance. Recently a freight train ran into so many of them that the locomotive could not get traction, although the engineer emptied his sand box on the tracks. He had to wait for a relief locomotive.

LEXINGTON, KY., EDITOR WEDS

NEW YORK, July 27.—A special dispatch to the New York Sun today from Nantucket, Mass., said Mrs. Mary Frazer Lebus and Desha Breckinridge of Lexington, Ky., were married today at the summer home of the bride, Quanata, near Nantucket. Mr. Breckinridge is a well known turfman and editor of the Lexington Herald. He is a graduate of Princeton, class of 1889, and a veteran of the Spanish-American war. His first wife, Madeline McDowell, died in 1920. The bride is the former Mary Frazer of Cynthiana, Ky. Her first husband was the late Clarence Lebus, Kentucky tobacco grower.

Among those present at the wedding were Jouett Shouse of Kansas City, Mrs. Breckinridge Long of St. Louis and Washington; Mr. and Mrs. John M. Clancy and Mrs. Charles Horner of Louisville, and Col. and Mrs. Henry Breckinridge of New York.

150-MILE GYPSY HIKE BY BOY SCOUT GROUP

In Two Weeks' Trip They Visit Meramec State Park, Other Places.

Today finds the Boy Scouts participating in the 150-mile gypsy hike about two-thirds the way along their two-week itinerary. The gypsy hike, which has become a feature of the Irondale camp's annual program, including visits to such points of scenic interest as the Meramec State Park, the Huzzah Springs country and the Steelville valleys. This year the hike is under the leadership of William F. (Skipper) Thompson, Arthur Werder and Alan Austin.

The trip carries the boys in a circuit which they travel entirely on foot. Much of the way is by trail and part overland. Seldom are they on roads. Each night at a prearranged camping place they make contact with one of the camp trucks which has preceded them carrying the duffel, tents, camp kitchen—and Lou Benson, the hike chef. Numerous side trips have been made to caves and other attractions nearby.

First-Class scouts and ex-rangers will be interested in the announcement of a 14-day ranger ride which begins Wednesday. The rangers will start off on horseback from Irondale and for a fortnight will guide their mounts through several hundred miles of Ozark scenery, camping in much the same manner as the gypsy hikers, but covering more ground. The entire ranger staff, headed by M. N. Leavitt, Bob Miller and Roy Birkicht, will be along. According to an announcement from headquarters, a few vacancies still exist on the ride. Qualified first-class scouts will be accepted for these places.

The fifth section cabin camp and the merit badge camp will be held on Wednesday. Headquarters will still accept applications for places at either of these units.

DISTRICT COURTS OF HONOR TO BE COMBINED TOMORROW

Session Will Be Held at 7:30 P. M. in Assembly Room of Public Library.

The only Court of Honor of the summer will be held at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night in the assembly room of the Public Library, Fourteenth and Olive streets. The four District Courts of Honor will be combined for the awarding of first-class and merit badges to first and second class scouts. Star badges also will be presented.

Troop 155 of the McCausland Avenue Presbyterian Church, through its scoutmaster, Charles S. Pollock, will provide the color guard and bugler. E. N. Birge will be chairman of the meeting.

Scouts are requested to be present a half hour before the meeting starts in order to be checked in.

Troop Notes

North District.

Scout Herman Mast planned the program of last week for Troop 3 of the Grace Holy Cross church. Scoutmaster Simons talked on the meaning of the Scout oath and the pastor of the church, the Rev. Mr. Taylor spoke of the value of scouting. Scouts William Miller and Fred Pomeroy are the new flag bearers for the troop. Scout Jack Hunt will arrange this week's program.

South District.

The Rev. Benjamin Redpath of the Methodist church at Oleatha venue and Hereford street announces the formation of a new neighborhood 12 years old or more are invited to join. A. Kalinowsky will be Scoutmaster. A troop committee has been organized to sponsor the infant troop, which will meet in the church room at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday nights. Not only recruits, but also parents and friends are invited to the early meetings.

Instruction in lifts and carries was gone over thoroughly at the regular meeting of Troop 20 of the Holy Family School Tuesday night. Scoutmaster Bokel gave a description of bows, arrows and other matters pertaining to archery. The entire group participated in a compass game. Chairman of the Troop Committee Kirchmer gave each Scout a bar of candy, a practice which has become a weekly feature of the troop's meetings. Three new members were welcomed. They are Bernard Weber, Paul Weber and Joseph McMichael.

West District.

For winning the inter-patrol contest conducted recently by Troop 113 of the Church of the Messiah, the Tiger patrol of the troop will enjoy a trip to Committeeman Norman G. Neuhoff's camp in the Ozarks, Aug. 2-4.

Troop 113 is planning a trip through the Anheuser-Busch plant under guidance of Joseph Roither, father of one of the scouts, a foreman at the mills. The troop will have regular meetings during August.

The scouts of Troop 49 of the First Presbyterian Church are contributing books toward the establishment of a troop library.

Troop 30 of the Y. M. H. A. is having a contest to determine who shall succeed Senior Patrol Leader Frank Gollub, who will go to college this fall. Each patrol leader will plan and carry out at least one troop meeting during the competition. Patrol Leader Melvin Hertzman had charge of the last meeting, while Patrol Leader Edward Hopper directed this meeting.

An unusual meeting was held last week by Troop 246 of the B'nai Amoona Temple. Electric lights were not used during the meeting, but illumination came from a campfire made of wood and flashlights. After the opening ceremony, an indoor nature hike was taken under the guidance of Senior Patrol Leader Abe Gallant and Patrol Leader Rudolph. By means of flashlights displays of leaves scattered around the room were studied. Stories were told by Assistant Scoutmaster Becker and Scribe Sorkin, after which campfire songs were sung under the direction of Scoutmaster Charles Fischlowitz. It was one of the most entertaining meetings the troop has ever had.

Nature study hikes are taken every week by the troop. Senior Patrol Leader Gallant, Patrol Leader Rudolph, Assistant Patrol Leader Weisman and Junior Assistant Scoutmaster Drazen are the nature experts. Progress is so rapid the troop plans to engage in much inter-troop competition during the fall and winter. Candidates for offices are working very hard in view of the election in September.

Suburban District.

During the week that Troop Thomas Station 1 spent at Big River, Scout Wesley Wright picked up in a cave a Spanish coin dated 1779. The find brought home to the scouts the historic nature of the country in which they were camping. The early settlers, they learned, frequently had to defend themselves against raids by the Osage, Shawnee and Sioux Indians who ranged the river valley. The troop camped near the starting point of an escape from Indians through the wilderness made in 1800 by John House, 14-year-old pioneer scout. The outing was a success despite two days of rain and a rising river, which threatened to flood the camp site.

PRAYER FOR KING OF ITALY

To Be Said in All Catholic Churches of Kingdom.

By the Associated Press.

VATICAN CITY, July 27.—The prayer for the King of Italy, long in abeyance until the signing of the Lateran treaties between the Church and State, is now to be said in all the Catholic churches of the kingdom.

This has been promulgated by the Sacred Congregation of Rites, acting in accordance with Article 12 of the concordat. "Let us pray for our King, Victor Emmanuel," the prayer begins. "O God, to whom are subservient all powers and dignities, give unto Thy servant our King, Victor Emmanuel, a prosperous exercise of his dignity wherein he will always fear Thee and will worthily take counsel of himself, together with the people subject to him, for Thy pleasures

Exhibit Gives Life to Garb And Manners of Pioneers

Chouteau's Wedding Coat, Oversize Coffee Cups, Shoes, and Silver Shown at Jefferson Memorial.

LIFE in St. Louis from the days of the 'coonskin cap, hair jewelry and three-pint coffee cups is pictured in a new display which is attracting hundreds of visitors daily at Jefferson Memorial.

The exhibition follows the theory of Isaac H. Lionberger, president of Missouri Historical Society, that the society's function is to make the manners and customs, hardships and achievements of other-day St. Louisans real and living to every person who visits the Memorial.

Accomplishment of that object seems certain, within a few days after the beginning of the initial experiment. In the west wing is the great Lindbergh trophy collection, signalizing the latest milepost set by St. Louis. In the east wing is a great array of Indian relics, from which the casual visitor may gather some idea of how the white American's predecessors lived.

In the extreme end of the east wing is a room where visitors formerly were confronted by a forest of flags. The flags were fraught with historical significance, but few visitors investigated far enough to learn it from the labels. Most took one glance and departed.

A few cases have been rearranged, in line with Mr. Lionberger's idea, to show how old-time St. Louisans lived, by what they wore and what they dined, drank and wooed with. The display is not half completed, but already hundreds, at least, of the thousands who see the Lindbergh tropies are thronging this room and commenting with interest.

Wedding Garb Is Gorgeous.

First to meet the visitor's eye—and one judges it still would be first, even in a dark cellar at midnight—is the gorgeous wedding coat of Auguste Chouteau, pale green with rose lapels and lining, over a vest of Joseph-colors, including red and yellow. "Forms" which lend reality to the display, without the frozen stares of wax models, were donated by a downtown store.

Beside it is the "second-day" dress, elaborate beyond the description of even a woman in this day, worn by Chouteau's bride, Marie Therese Cerre, according to the custom of the times, for the reception on the day after the wedding of Sept. 21, 1786. For contrast is Chouteau's deerskin coat, wampum-fringed and embroidered with brightly colored porcupine quills by the Indians.

Andrew Jackson's top hat, the cane of William Carr Lane, first Mayor of St. Louis; wedding gowns of French St. Louis, dressing "sacques," dainty baby clothes and children's dresses of every period, aprons which were tightly laced about the waist in days when their wearers thought anything comfortable or peasant must be unladylike—all these and many more may be seen in this tall central display case.

Drawing particular attention in the east side of the case is a collection of millinery. It includes a flat straw hat, worn coquettishly over a slim eyebrow about 1850, a charming bonnet of the same ear in gray lace with blue ribbons that would have been incompatible with gray a decade later, and a pair of what look like exceptionally artistic sunbonnets, with the label "Old ladies' caps—worn when ladies considered themselves old at 35."

Shoes Worn Four Years.

At either end of the case the women visitors, especially, find much of interest in "Fashions in Footwear," all the way back to the low brown wedding slippers, almost heel-less, in which Mrs. Thomas Hope was married 100 years ago—Aug. 8, 1829. Progress may be seen in the wedding shoes of Mrs. Emma R. Pitzman, worn in 1868. By that time, it appears, brown had changed to white, the tops had stretched half-way to the knees, with laces at the side, and the heels had become fully 1¼ inch tall.

Eliciting smiles and fluttering chatter from the women-folk are a pair of tiny leather boots, the color of iron and hard as iron but still preserving the hint of busy, exploring childish feet. The boots were made in Mexico, Mo., in 1856. And beside them are shoes with a label that conveys the full flavor of times gone by—"worn by Thomas R. Stark, 1848-53." Try and wear ap air five years now!

Massive combs and no less massive watches of a century ago, a French Revolutionary snuff-box bearing the miniatures of Robespierre, Marat and others, hair jewelry, the slim decanters—of days when decanters were made to hold a little of something very particular, and not as much as possible of almost anything—used by Gov. and Mrs. Daniel Dunklin in 1825, are included in the jewelry display.

Silver Display Is Popular.

Possibly most popular of all is the china and silver display. Miss Anne Kinnaird, assistant in charge of the society's offices, washed the china, fished the blackened silverware out of the darkness and cobwebs, and spent a week polishing it. Now, resplendent in a case to itself, it is under the glance of admirers virtually every minute of the day.

Among the silver pieces are heavy spoons—to drop one in an ordinary bowl would be disastrous—which have been in the Chouteau and other St. Louis families for a century and more. The earliest bear only cryptic marks, perhaps known to the connoisseur, and then come the marks of early St. Louis jewelers, Beauvais and Jaccard. One of the spoons bears the note, "used by George Washington."

Thomas Jefferson's blue asparagus bowl is the imposing center of the display. In an adjacent case, incidentally, is a sundial which the statesman-scientist etched, autographed and used at Monticello. Ranged around the asparagus dish are a great tureen from old Virginia, early St. Louis tumblers of cut glass so heavy as to look like "dime-store stuff," whalebone spoons, a horn cup carried through the War of 1812 by Gen. David Thompson, Laclede's blue plate, a liqueur set presented to Dr. James R. Clemens of Webster Groves by his cousin, Mark Twain, and three small blue Chinese plates which belonged to Martha Washington.

They Really Drank Coffee.

Coffee cups of the French and English in the Seventeen-seventies differ in degree of ornament, but not in thinness, obvious excellence of material and workmanship, and immensity.

They drank COFFEE in those days. And they drank it from the saucer. The saucers were miniature bowls, and not so very "miniature" at that. On display are the small plates, like the later bonedishes and the individual butter plates of today but thicker, on which belles and statesmen set the half-empty cups while they drank from the saucers.

RUSSIA STILL HOLDS 10,000 HUNGARIAN WAR PRISONERS

Said to Be Scattered All Over Siberia and Working in State Mines.

BUDAPEST, July 27. — Count Czaky, minister for war, told Parliament that 10,000 Hungarians, captured in the World War, were still held in Russian prison camps annd forced to work in the state mines of Siberia.

He explained that these men could not be repatraited because the Government has no money for such a purpose and also because there are no diplomatic relations between Hungary and Russia. A friendly power, which is represented at Moscow, has been asked to collect information as to the fate of thousands of ex-soldiers of this country who have been separated from their homeland for more than a decade.

Count Czaky said that the prisoners were distributed all over Siberia and led a miserable existence. He said they were not even allowed to correspond with their relatives in Hungary because the letter censorship permits use only of Russian, German, French or English.

Some escaped prisoners have come back with startling tales of the life in Siberia. The mortality among the Hungarians is appalling, they declare, because the men are underfed.

Emelia Da Prato Soloist in Atwater Kent Concert—Theodore Roosevelt Recalled in Reminiscences by Chapple.

The nasal tone of an oboe is used effectively with a strumming guitar in Echoes of the Orient concert at 4 o'clock over KSD under direction of Sven von Hallberg, who discovered the melodies during his own travels in the East. The program:

Eyes of Egypt
Odalisque
Veil Dance
March of the Khedive
Egyptian Dance

Theodore Roosevelt is to be the subject of Joe Mitchell Chapple's reminiscences in the "Face to Face With Our Presidents," broadcast at 4:15 this afternoon over KSD. As usual, there will also be a program of music.

Songs dealing with the rose will be broadcast by a women's octet and orchestra over KSD at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

The chorus will be assisted by Robert Simmons, tenor, and a string quartet, in the following program:

Dusk in June .... Beach
Ensemble.
To a Water Lily .... MacDowell
Orchestra.
Briar Rose .... Vierling

Beal Hober, lyric soprano, will be the featured artist with Maj. Edward Bowes' Capitol Family at 6:30 over KSD. Miss Hober, unlike most successful artists, studied singing merely for her own pleasure and that of her friends. She began singing in public at the age of 16 at many social and charitable functions, later becoming soprano soloist in large church choruses.

Owing to untoward circumstances, Miss Hober, two years ago, found herself obliged to use her talent professionally. Since that time she has become well known in New York, in oratorio and on the concert stage.

She specializes in oratorio singing and in interpretations of German lieder. Her solos will include an oratorio aria and one of the most popular German songs.

David Lawrence is to give his usual talk on "Our Government" at 7 o'clock.

Emelia da Prato, the young lyric soprano of San Francisco who won second place in the National Radio Audition of 1927, is to be soloist at 7:15 tonight in the Atwater Kent concert over KSD. She is returning to the Pacific Coast after two years of intensive study for opera.

Miss da Prato, a native of Lucca, Italy, came to the United States with her parents when 3 years old. Her parents worked in a packing plant in San Francisco and there the young Emelia attracted attention with her voice when she was 6 years of age, the Italian colony of the town flocking to hear and applaud her when she was so small she had to stand on a table to sing.

Opera has always been her ambition and through her school days and nights after her work as a stenographer in a lumber yard, she

Tour Takes Vacationist Through Estes and Mesa Verde Parks in Colorado

By ROBERT L. BRADLEY,
Automobile Editor.

COME up to cool Colorado! That's what the railroads and the persons who make their living out of tourists keep telling us. And the remarkable thing about it is that the advice is good. Come up to cool Colorado and help yourself to a real vacation.

At this time of the year, the columbine, Colorado's little blue State flower, is blooming amidst the pine trees—evergreens, they call them out there. And the pines themselves are in full bloom, if pine trees can be said to bloom. It is a peculiar thing about these kinds of trees—they are said to be always green, yet it is a fact that at certain times of the year they are much greener.

But to return to the purpose of this narrative, Colorado is within striking distance of St. Louis vacation-seekers who like to do their vacationing in automobiles.

One travels the main St. Louis-to-Kansas City route, United States Highway No. 40, all paved. From the Western Missouri metropolis, one heads off through Topeka, Manhattan and Salina to Oakley, Kan., and Limon, Col. At Limon, the road branches, one section going to Colorado Springs, the other to Denver.

Denver should be checked off on the map as the starting point for Colorado travel, and those who have never been there before should arrange to stay at least two days. After the heat and dirt of Middle Western cities, Denver is a cool, clean paradise. White collars and shirts are hardly ever worn for less than two days in the "mile-high city."

One day should be allotted for a motor tour of the famous Mountain Park system, municipally owned, that stretches on either side of a network of hard gravel roads, leading up canons, down valleys, across and around mountains and beside splashing mountain streams.

The capital city of Colorado has gone in for parks in a big way. Although none in Denver proper are as large as our own Forest Park, the Mountain Park system, rivaling the Alps almost for winter sports in the summer time, is worth the entire trip.

Out a paved road from Denver, the little town of Golden, second territorial capital of Colorado, lies at the foot of Lookout Mountain. It is said that the proof of the desirability of any spot is in its popularity with the natives, which should give the Golden drive the crown, for on a Sunday afternoon, four lines of automobiles make the highway resemble a big, black, winding snake.

The Colorado School of Mines, where the students refine oil, crush and assay ores and experiment on the latest methods of mining and metallurgy, is a block or two off the main street in Golden. And on the side of majestic Lookout Mountain, the Mines youths in years past erected a gigantic "M" from solid rock. Each spring and fall, the "freshies" are shunted up the mountain in squads and ordered to clean off this historic letter.

The inclined road becomes pretty steep at the entrance to the Lookout road and gets gradually steeper as the ascent is made. Hairpin turns that cut down momentum and give second gear a good workout, give one first a view of the blank rocky wall of the mountain and then a sudden, beautiful view of the plains. Natural springs bubble out of the side of the mountain. Stunted pines, twisted and gnarled by hundreds of years of exposure to the vicious assault of the elements have taken fantastic forms.

By peering over the edge of the roadway, one can look down thousands of feet to where a narrow silver ribbon winds through rocks and trees.

At the summit of the mountain, there is a magnificent view of Denver. At night the lights twinkle and glow like countless numbers of fireflies. In the day the clear atmosphere permits a remarkable view.

At the summit, also, is the historic final resting place of Buffalo Bill, American boyhood's hero. The city has erected a lodge museum where are gathered relics of the plainsman's career.

From the top of the mountain, the road winds off over plateaus that are breath-taking in their beauty. One seems to be only a few miles from the awesome snow-capped peaks of the great Continental Divide, yet if one were to start walking it would take all day and then some to reach them.

From some points, on a clear day, the pointed form of Pike's Peak, 75 miles to the south, may be glimpsed. Other peaks, even higher, are clearly visible. The highway winds on and on, each mile giving the traveler a new view.

The accepted circle tour of the Mountain Parks leads back to Denver through Bear Creek canyon, through which the tiny creek that on occasions becomes a raging torrent, makes its way. The roads are marvels of the engineer's and surveyor's genius. At sharp curves, mirrors have been placed to warn of cars approaching from the other side. Incidentally, it was at one of these curves that an automobile in the late President Harding's

Innovations Keep Car Buyers Guessing as to New Models

Front Wheel Drive and Four-Speed Transmission Gain in Popularity and Owners Can Be Sure of Changes.

By FREDERICK C. RUSSELL.

Will the new models introduced this summer set the pace for the industry and dictate design for 1930?

Hundreds of thousands of motorists who wait for the summer release of new products from Detroit are asking this question. They are the buyers who endeavor to shop with an eye to the future. They forego the pleasure of having a new car in the spring in order to see which way the wind blows, but if history repeats itself they may have to do the usual amount of guessing. Probably more.

The front-wheel drive impetus is under way and four-speed transmissions are gaining in popularity, but the shrewd observer cannot use these as infallible guides to the future because many manufacturers are proceeding with improvements in those features which are designed to make rear drive and three-speed gearsets more efficient. A double high, three speed transmission is just around the corner. Never before in the history of the automobile have trends been so conflicting.

Four-wheel brakes and balloon tires came in on a wave of new summer and fall models, but last year a number of changes that seemed to forecast universal adoption proved to be "sports." Change itself seems to be the only development that the summer shopper can bank on.

While it is true that high compression and two-way hydraulic shock absorption received an important impetus last summer a number of other developments remained innovations with their sev-

Susquehanna Trail Traverses Three States on Scenic Route

St. Louisans May Motor Through Indiana and Ohio or Travel by way of Ontario to Destination.

By KENNETH D. RHONE.

ST. LOUIS motorists who have yet to solve the annual "where-to-go" puzzle should consider a Susquehanna Trail solution. This famous highway traverses the three states of New York, Pennsylvania and Maryland, connects Niagara Falls, the great scenic wonder, with Washington, D. C., and holds the key to innumerable points of scenic beauty and historical interest. The Susquehanna Trail has all the elements which go to make up a real motoring paradise.

The trail may be reached by way of a number of routes out of St. Louis although the logical point to start the tour is at Niagara Falls which can be reached via Indianapolis, Fort Wayne, Toledo, Detroit, Windsor, Ontario; London, Hamilton and St. Catherines; or, if it is desired to travel entirely in the states, from Indianapolis via Lima, Cleveland, Ashtabula, Erie and Buffalo.

Niagara Falls with its cataracts, its illumination, its many beauties and its great hydro-electric power development, has a strong appeal to the traveler. Each evening 24 gigantic searchlights developing 1,440,000,000 candle-power illuminate the dark cataracts.

From Niagara Falls the Susquehanna Trail runs east through Batavia and East Avon, N. Y., and then southeast to the New York-Pennsylvania state line via Wayland, Bath and Painted Post.

In Pennsylvania it strikes a rugged section of the country. The tourist will climb to the top of Steam Valley hill, 2200 feet above sea level, and then will make a gradual descent, dropping 1500 feet in seven miles into a narrow valley with mountains towering above on either side.

Following a beautiful stream, Lycoming Creek, noted for its fine trout fishing, the Susquehanna Trail swings into Williamsport, a charming city of some 50,000 population, where the first glimpse of the shimmering Susquehanna River is obtained.

Williamsport is the "half-way point" on the trail and has very fine hotel accommodations where motorists may spend the night and rest and refresh themselves for the next day's journey. And if the tourist wishes to make a one or two-day's stop in the "Queen City" he will find it worth while to visit Penn's and Red Panther (Woodward) caves, Eagle Mere, the historic Tiadaght . Elm under which a local Declaration of Independence from Great Britain was signed; and perhaps Pennsylvania State College.

From Williamsport to Muncy the Susquehanna Trail passes through a rolling farming country with higher wooded hills stretching out to the north and the Blue Bald Eagle range of mountains looming high on the southern horizon. Between Muncy and Milton the tourist enjoys the delightful panorama of mountains and fertile valleys and below Milton River scenes of unusual beauty.

At Northumberland the tourist arrives at the junction of the north and west branches of the Susquehanna River, forming a stream of truly majestic proportions. Crossing the river here the St. Louis motorist may follow the river on its right bank all the way to Clark's Ferry through Selinsgrove and Liverpool. No man can fail to praise the grandeur of the many gaps cut by the river through the majestic mountains along this portion of the Trail.

Harrisburg, the Pennsylvania state capitol, a few miles further on, on the opposite side of the river, is known as a city of beauty and order, presenting one of the most beautiful state capitol buildings in the country.

From Harrisburg there is the option of taking a fine new road to York, Baltimore and Washington, or of following another excellent highway through the fertile and historic Cumberland Valley to Gettysburg and Washington. The quiet green beauty of stately Wash-

Highways Put in Good Condition By Dry Weather

Auto Club Survey Shows Even Dirt Detours in Fine Shape.

Dry weather for several days has placed virtually all of Missouri's highway detours scattered in all parts of the State in unusually good condition and travel to any section has been unimpeded along the routes of all United States highways and Missouri State routes, according to a summary by the Automobile Club of Missouri.

Two short stretches of new concrete slab were opened to travel during the week, one on U. S. 61 between Jackson and Cape Girardeau, and the other on U. S. 36 east of Clarence. Most of the detours in the part of the State north of the Missouri River are dirt and consequently are bad, in fact virtually impassable, in time of heavy rains. The continued fair weather has placed these in as fine condition as they have ever been, according to local reports received by the Auto Club.

Detours south of the Missouri River are, for the most part, gravel or semi-gravel, and consequently are nearly all weather roads. The semi-gravel detours are rendered impassable only in event of rain heavy enough to cause washouts or softening of the surface and travel in that portion of the State is usually uninterrupted.

The new concrete opened this week for travel on No. 61 is adjacent to Cape Girardeau and runs six miles toward Jackson. Travel will be routed over the old gravel road three miles out of Jackson. The detour on No. 61 between Farmington and Fredericktown has been placed in good condition with gravel and grading. There are some narrow places and sharp blind turns, however, that should be watched carefully by the motorist. The detour connects with Missouri No. 70 about two miles west of Fredericktown, and 61 is routed through Fredericktown to a point northeast of the town where it rejoins the concrete.

This detour probably will be in effect for the most of the summer. Construction work on the gap between Farmington and Fredericktown is in progress on the north end and grading of a new part of the route is being done on the south end. Another dirt detour on No. 61 is in effect between New Madrid and Marsden. By the close of the construction season this fall, No. 61 will be concrete from St. Louis south to Arkansas with the exception of about 34 miles between Cape Girardeau and Sikeston and a short gap of about three miles on both sides of Jackson.

The new slab opened east of Clarence on U. S. 36 is a part of construction work between Shelbina and Macon. A 22-mile stretch also is being concreted on No. 36 between Macon and Brookfield. Dirt detours have been established around both jobs.

U. S. 54, which has been used by many tourists recently going into a section of the Ozarks tapped by that route, is in good condition. From Louisiana to Jefferson City, it is all gravel except for three miles of gravel construction south of Mexico. From Jefferson City it is good gravel or semi-gravel to Eldon, Bagnell, Linn Creek and other resort areas such as around Hahatonka.

On U. S. 66 a change has recently been made in the detour between Cuba and Rolla. There is a six-mile detour west of Cuba and traffic is temporarily routed from St. James on No. 68 to Vichy, thence via No. 63 into Rolla.

Other roads leading into favorite Ozark vacation sites in the eastern part of the region are in excellent condition. No. 21, according to a check just made, is in good condition for a gravel highway and leads through one of the most beautiful scenic routes of the Eastern Ozark section. U. S. 60, which crosses from Birds Point to Springfield via Sikeston and Poplar Bluff, likewise is in good condition save for a three and one-half mile detour near Seymour, which now is reported in good shape.

New Buick Seen For First Time In St. Louis Area

Body Changed, Car Longer and Lower, Many Improvements.

By the Automobile Editor.

St. Louisans received their first glimpse yesterday of the 1930 Buick, with longer, lower and more luxurious bodies, on larger wheelbases and with many improvements and refinements that stamp it as one of the outstanding automobiles of the year.

As is his custom, F. W. A. Vesper, president of the Vesper-Buick Auto Co., local Buick and Marquette distributer, gave newspaper men a private showing of the new cars, which come in 14 models, divided into three series known as the 40, 50 and 60 series. Series 40 embraces six models, series 50 two models and series 60 six.

Notable among the changes is the body, from which the bulge which excited so much comment in the 1929 silver anniversary Buick, has been removed. The radiator has been changed and automatic shutters added, giving the front of the car a distinctive appearance.

Additional power has been built into the Buick by increasing the bore one-eighth of an inch, producing in the overhead engine an 8 per cent increase in power. This gives the models of the 40 series 80½ horsepower, while in the larger engine 99 horespower is developed. All models are capable of a speed in excess of 70 miles an hour.

The wheelbase in the 40 series has been increased from 116 to 118 inches, in the 50 series from 121 to 124 inches and in the 60 models from 129 to 132 inches. In addition, all models have been lowered approximately two inches, giving long, low, graceful lines.

While retaining the Buick individuality of appearance, the lines and contours of the body have been refined to such an extent that the 1930 is truly distinctive. The margin of the radiator shell has been reduced to more slender proportions and thermostatically controlled shutters protect the radiator core. An attractive moulding enhances the beauty of the car.

Impresive new designs are embodied in the head and tail lights and the former are mounted on sturdier support posts. New hub caps, larger brake drums, stocky wooden wheel spokes and large section balloon tires give a solid yet flexible appearance, which is made smoother by a metal gas tank cover and a wider frame.

Mechanically, the new Buick is the last word—to date. The steering assembly is of the worm and roller type and is fully adjustable. A steering wheel road shock eliminating device make for smoother riding.

Four wheel internal expanding Servo brakes, semi-elliptic rear springs and double-acting shock absorbers are additional advances, together with a sloping, non-glare windshield, redesigned transmission and clutch, larger rubber motor mountings and a sturdier and wider chassis frame.

The series 40 replaces the former series 20 and is offered in the following models: a five-passenger, two door sedan, four-passenger sport roadster, five-passenger phaeton, two-passenger business coupe and a five-passenger, four-door sedan and four-passenger de luxe coupe. This series takes a 29 by 5:50 tire size.

Replacing the former series 40, the series 50 is produced in a five-passenger, four-door sedan and four-passenger coupe. Series 60, replacing the former series 50, is presented in these models: sven-passenger, four-door sedan, seven-passenger, four-door limousine sedan, five-passenger, four-door sedan, four-passenger coupe, five-passenger coupe and seven-passenger phaeton. The 50 and 60 series are equipped with 31 by 6:50 tires.

Months of testing on the General Motors proving ground have assured that in acceleration, hill-climbing ability and road speed the Buick is far superior to the older models.

In its carburetion system, the new Buick embodies two major improvements. The gasoline pump has been redesigned and improved and the low speed carburetor adjustment has been eliminated. Each carburetor is carefully calibrated to give the best all-around results. Special calibration for high altitudes is furnished when required.

The shutters warm the car up during the period of starting. The double action shock absorbers check the car on both bound and rebound.

Remarkable ease of steering has been obtained by the use of an accurately made worm and roller type of steering gear. All road shock through the steering wheel is eliminated by a device placed at the front end of the frame on the steering gear side. This allows for a slight movement.

Wheels are constructed of 10 large spokes, giving a sturdy appearance. The gasoline tank capacity has been increased to from 16 to 19 gallons on series 40 and from 19 to 22 gallons on series 50 and 60.

The springs are entirely inclosed with spring covers and contain a lubricating compound which, together with the double acting shock absorbers, explain why the 1930 model is such an easy-riding car.

Closed car interiors are unusually attractive and luxurious. Upholster, is a specially developed mohair plush of fine, heavy weave with an extremely durable waterproof backing. Cloth is selected to harmonize with the body color of each model.

Travel Bureau Meets Need of Motor Tourists

TOURIST needs, insofar as routings, maps and mileage and road conditions are concerned, are met daily at the Resort and Travel Bureau of the Post-Dispatch, which maintains excellent information department.

A valuable part of this service is the distribution of maps and of these the 50-page auto trails atlas of the United States and Eastern Canada is one of the most sought after. The atlas sells at 50 cents at the Post-Dispatch and 60 cents mailed.

Pocket size State maps are retailed at 10 cents and 12 cents, mailed. Maps of the St. Louis street system sell for 30 and 40 cents, city guides at 25 and 30 cents and maps of Greater St. Louis for 20 and 24 cents.

A new feature of the bureau is dissemination of free information as regards the condition of lakes and streams in Missouri for fishing. This data is obtained through an arrangement with the State Fish and Game Department at Jefferson City.

Age Resisters of Goodrich Company Effect Tire Economy

AKRON, O., July 27.—A total of $50,000,00 annually is the estimate placed on the saving to the rubber consuming public through the development of age resisters by the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co. This estimate was made by the committee on Recent Economic Changes.

The development of age resisters by Goodrich is the result of many years of experiment by the chemical research department, James D. Tew, president, said when asked about the working of this outstanding economy in rubber goods. Rubber was subject to greater oxidation or premature destruction before the discovery of anti-oxidants, Tew said. The effect of light and heat was to cause checking and cracking, or a continuation of the vulcanizing process which destroyed the vitality of rubber products. Many more miles have been added to tires and much longer life to other rubber products through this Goodrich process.

Roberts, Oldest Chrysler Dealer, Sells Business

Handled Case Cars Here in 1912, Organized West Side Buick Co.

With the sale of the Roberts Motor Co., 5187 Delmar boulevard, to the Lasker Motor Co., one of the oldest automobile dealers in St. Louis retires temporarily, at least, from the field in which he has been a leading figure for upwards of 17 years.

W. S. Roberts, president of the Roberts Motor Co., oldest Chrysler dealer in the city, started his career in the auto business here by handling the old Case line of cars, in 1912. His first establishment was in the same block of Delmar boulevard that he has been in of more recent years. Roberts was originally associated with F. W. A. Vesper, president of the Vesper-Buick Auto Co., in Kansas City, Mo., when Vesper was the Reo distributer there. He came to St. Louis at about the same time Vesper did and organized the West Side Buick Co.

Later, for a year, he sold Hudson cars in Clayton. Since 1924, when the Chrysler line came out, he has acted as a metropolitan dealer for Chryslers.

The Lasker Motor Co. will take over the entire organization and equipment of the Roberts company and both Roberts and his son, Richard W. Roberts, will remain with Lasker for the time being.

De Soto Achieves Name of Being Comfortable Car

In these summer days of vacations with their extended motor trips and week-ends spent miles from town at the quiet lake, by the trout stream, in the woods or at the seaside, the holiday seeker demands a car with easy riding qualities.

Not so many years ago the holiday to the driver of an automobile was a holiday in name only. If he was fortunate enough to get back home without some serious mechanical trouble, after what in those days was considered a long trip, he returned in most cases physically and mentally exhausted. The idea of coming back refreshed after a 100-mile spin in the country was unknown to the driver of yesterday.

The "comfort-ized" modern car, however, was not an accidental discovery. The engineers who designed the De Soto Six, the popular Chrysler Motors product that has gained the reputation for unusually high standard of riding comfort, developed this particular feature of the De Soto only after an exhaustive study of mechanical requirements needed to offset the innumerable jars and bumps the car is subjected to in a day's driving.

Studebaker "8's" Break Four Hill Climb Records

Tests in California Show Ability of President on Steep Grades.

New laurels were added to the hill climbing performance of Studebaker's President eight with the successful negotiation of four notoriously stiff hills in a series of California road tests recently. The tests were carried out under the severest conditions, the cars under test being called upon to carry as many as 16 passengers in their record-breaking ascents, according to Sam Lurie of the Lurie Motor Car Co. Studebaker-Erskine distributer here.

At Watsonville a President roadster with Ab Jenkins at the wheel and four passengers aboard climbed the historic Mount Madonna trail. Two other Presidents later duplicated the performance. The steep and unpaved mountain road was traveled with ease in high gear, the gradient being 25 per cent and the narrow trail twisting and winding from a few feet above sea level to 2000 feet in a few miles.

The five persons aboard weighed a total of 950 pounds. Throughout the trip the President eight motor never faltered for an instant. Throttled down to 22 miles on one of the dangerous curves during the ascent, the car leaped ahead to 27 mile san hour as soon as the curve was cleared.

Following Jenkins' trip, Mrs. A. D. Sgarlato of Santa Cruz, took the wheel and negotiated the climb with the same ease noted in the previous performance. Then Roy Wittschen of Watsonville drove a fully loaded President sedan up the steep mountain grade, starting on a 25 per cent grade a few hundred yards from the bottom.

At San Francisco, a President roadster carrying 16 passengers weighing 2752 pounds, roared to the summit of South Peak, the highest point in the city. No road leads to the top of the hill, and the President had to negotiate the 51 per cent grade with nothing better than loose dirt and gravel for a roadbed. Not only did this President make the climb but another President likewise demonstrated its climbing ability by following its predecessor. This car was likewise loaded with as many passengers as could find a place to hold on.

The Marin avenue hill at Berkeley was the next to be conquered by the President. Carrying nine men, it negotiated the stiff climb in second gear. The gradient registers from 25 to 35 per cent on this hill, which is seven-eighths of a mile long. Few cars have ever made this grade in second gear, even without passengers.

At Fresno the President made a successful ascent up the famous Toll-House Grade, fully loaded. Again the sturdy straight eight motor roared to the top with apparent ease and without any strain, evidently demonstrating its ability to mount any grade on which the wheels could find traction.

Russell Gardner Praises Pilots in Endurance Flight

Commenting on the record-breaking endurance flight of O'Brine and Jackson, Russell E. Gardner Jr., president of the Gardner Motor Co., Inc., and chairman of the board of Parks Aircraft, Inc., said: "No better indication of the progress made in aviation in the past decade can be pointed out, than that revealed by the seemingly endless endurance flight of O'Brine and Jackson, and this flight tells as nothing else can what care and skill are needed in the design, construction and operation of airplanes.

"At this writing the two flyers piloting the jaunty St. Louis Robin had been in the air more than 313 hours. It is reported that the flyers give no indication of landing and are resolved to fly as long as the ship will fly. This is the spirit that wins in war, in peace, in business and in airplane endurance tests.

"In accomplishing this feat these two intrepid airmen have given the airplane engineers a new high mark to shoot at. Furthermore, they have given the public an insight into the tremendous progress already made and being made in aviation. But, best of all, by this almost superhuman feat, Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine have given to an ultra-modern world an even keener insight into the vast possibilities in airplanes and in sky transportation.

The Motorist Pays!

As a result of an increase in the gasoline tax in 17 states, and the adoption of this form of taxation by three others, namely, Illinois, Massachusetts, and New York, motorists in the United States will pay $75,000,000 more in "gas" tax in 1929. The gas tax was first adopted in three states, just 10 years ago, and today it is a means of raising revenue in all of the 48 states and the District of Columbia. Moreover, during this time the total amount of the tax has risen from around $10,000,000 to over $300,000,000 a year and the total will swell to over $400,000,000 in 1929.

never before - -
this instant acceptance

Never before has any car, however fine, received the cordial and instant acceptance by the motoring public given the Chrysler-built De Soto Six. And this implicit public confidence in the ability of Chrysler Motors has not been misplaced.

The De Soto Six from the start has proved to be a most brilliant performer, a motor car with more sparkle, dash and stamina than any other six selling below $1000.

More than that, it has proved to be long-lasting and economical—the best investment in mileage life and mileage thrift that ever was offered in its field.

You will do well to join the many thousands of owners who are finding the De Soto Six by far the most satisfactory motor car that a moderate investment can buy. Come in and let us arrange a demonstration to suit your own convenience.

Industry Sees Improvement In Agriculture

Auto Manufacturers Look for Big Sales to Farmers.

By Fred Kingsbury,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., July 27.—Motor car manufacturers are receiving optimistic reports from the agricultural districts, indicating that such commodities as wheat, hogs, corn and sheep are on a firmer basis, and that sales of automobiles to farmers may be expected to increase during the balance of 1929. Weather conditions a couple of months ago made the farmers' outlook a bit gloomy but with the coming of better weather, agriculture is picking up.

And with the farmers more prosperous, it means a bigger year in automobile production, observers point out.

In addition, the export situation is brighter than it has ever been. For a long time, the industry has sought to export 1,000,000 cars a year. Figures for the first five months of 1929 showed exports of 510,064 and, although a decline is expected, it is expected that the 1,000,000 mark will be reached for the first time this year.

The truck division of the industry has been performing in a spectacular manner. There is a continued demand for the heavy duty type, although small commercial delivery cars have been bought by the thousands.

Then, too, truck makers report a brisk market in the bus field. The truck makers, for the most part, do not make bodies and this fact, of course, brings the commercial body makers into the picture. They are very pleased with the situation, according to reports just received from several points throughout the country.

Many rumors have been flying around Detroit regarding new models and considerable talk is heard regarding several new eight-cylinder cars and possibly a 12. Nothing tangible is heard, however, regarding these rumors.

It is true that factories are constantly experimenting with multi-cylinder automobiles and when one of these experimental units is seen, rumors start at once.

One thing is certain—there will be an increase in the number of cars using four-speed transmissions. Two makes of cars are at present using this type and another will come into the field and possibly two.

It is claimed for these transmissions that they give higher speeds on the open road with less effort and wear on the engines, yet they are just as flexible in heavy traffic in cities.

Four-speed transmissions were used on cars years ago but the shift was "heavy" and the gears were noisy. The new jobs are quiet, very easy to shift and are giving the utmost satisfaction.

There is a tendency in new cars towards wider treads. For years 56 inches was considered the standard. Now cars, especially the rear wheels, have treads as wide as 58 inches and at least one will have a tread of 58½ inches. The center of gravity has been lowered and, coupled with the fine four-wheel brakes and sturdier frame construction, they are safer than ever before.

As far as fore wheel drives are concerned, there will be at least two. These were announced in trade papers some time ago—the Cord and the Ruxton. These cars have required a great deal of pioneering work, and it will undoubtedly be some time, by this I mean at least next year, before any other company enters this field, if they do then.

Detroit received reports from Canadian factories today to the effect that more cars are now being made for domestic consumption. At one time, several weeks ago, farmers were six weeks behind in their work and were not in the buying market. However, they have caught up rapidly and are coming to the market in large numbers.

A greater portion of production at the Canadian plants, at one time, was for export and this, in a measure, continues, but with agricultural conditions pulling up to date, purchases will be larger.

One thing manufacturers are watching closely is highway conditions throughout the world. There must be plenty of "floor-space" for motor cars and more and more highways must be constructed. Those, of course, should be of the hard-surface type and every state in the Union must provide good highways for cars. Funds for these roads are being provided through various channels.

Motorists demand good roads and, as long as they are paying gasoline taxes and other taxes on cars there is no reason why they should not be built. It is just these conditons automobile makers are checking closely.

The automobile was never in a more strategic position than it is at the present time.

Big Phillips Profits

Earnings of the Phillips Petroleum Co. in the first six months of 1929 were $8,510,807, compared with $6,519,977 in the same period in 1928, according to a report to stockholders, made public yesterday. Earnings in the second quarter amounted to $4,897,927, an increase of 43 per cent over the same period last year. June earnings were at an annual rate of $24,000,000. Gross crude oil production is approximately 50,000 barrels a day.

Book Reveals Story Behind Invention of Self-Starter

"Men, Money and Motors" Describes How Death of Friend of Cadillac Head Led to Device's Creation.

Publication of the book, "Men, Money and Motors," reveals for the first time the story behind the development of the self-starter. The authors, Theodore F. MacManus, Detroit advertising man who has been intimately identified with the automobile industry for nearly 25 years, and Norman Beasley, say this invention, more than any other single development in the industry since the inception of the first car, has been the motivating force behind the vast popularity the motor car has achieved.

It is a morning early in 1910. The scene is in the office of Henry M. Leland, then president of the Cadillac Motor Car Co. Charles F. Kettering, an electrical engineer, and even then a man who had assumed a dominant role in the inventive phase of the automobile business, was telling Leland of his idea for a self-starter. Leland, after listening, began discussing the death of a dear friend.

The story from the book continues:

"He was driving across the Belle Isle Bridge, here in Detroit," Leland was saying, "and he saw a woman trying to crank a stalled car. Stopping his own machine he got out, went over and asked if he could help.

"The woman thanked him and explained she did not have sufficient strength to spin the motor. He grasped the crank handle. Tried to spin it. The engine kicked back and the handle struck him in the jaw. Unthinkingly, the strange woman had not retarded the spark. My friend died—from the injuries."

Leland got up from his chair, walked over, and stood looking out of a window. His lips were trembling. His eyes were moist. Kettering, staring at the floor, was silent. Finally the manufacturer turned back.

"You know, I loved that man. I am glad you are going to work on something that will do away with hand cranking."

Kettering returned to Dayton and through the hours on the train he thought of little else. A self-starter for an automobile. All through the next day it was in his mind. And the next day—and the next . . . until days crept into weeks and weeks grew into months. A year later he brought what he had built to Detroit and demonstrated it to Cadillac engineers. They were skeptical.

"It won't work," they declared, as he concluded his theoretical explanation.

"How do you know?" he challenged.

"Because it takes from two to five horsepower to crank an automobile."

"Does it?"

"Don't you know that it does?"

"No."

"Well, it does," they affirmed. Then asked:

"How does this device work?"

"It operates off the storage battery."

This must have sounded ridiculous to them, for they laughed. "Don't you know that no small storage battery can furnish enough power to crank an automobile?"

'No."

"Well, the companies making the batteries will agree to that."

Kettering was unimpressed. "How do you know this starter won't work until you try it" he asked.

That sounded reasonable as a suggestion so they made the test.

The self-starter worked.

The reason it worked was because Kettering had spent months and months experimenting and perfecting its details. He knew his device would respond to all necessary demands placed upon it. A year before, electrical engineers had told him that a small storage battery could not furnish enough power to crank an automobile so the arguments the automobile engineers advanced were theories he had already eliminated.

Once his experimental car slid into a ditch, breaking his leg. That same night the garage which contained the Cadillac test car on which had been installed the only other self-starter in existence, was destroyed by fire.

If all the progress that had been made toward getting the self-starter on an automobile were not to be lost then someone had to put it in working order, so performance tests at the Cadillac Motor Car Co. could be continued. No other person was familiar enough with the mechanism so Kettering, two days after his accident, with his broken leg in a heavy cast, traveled 200 miles on a train—from Dayton to Detroit—and then worked on his back, underneath a car, until he had his starter again in operation.

Several months later, in June, 1911, Cadillac announced electrical starting, lighting and ignition as standard equipment for its cars. Mr. Kettering, inventor of them, is now president of the General Motors Research Laboratories and a vice president of General Motors.

Since this memorable contribution to the industry he has likewise been responsible, probably more than any other single individual, for two other tremendous accomplishments, Duco and Ethyl gasoline. Development of the latter was a direct outgrowth of the self-starter, since engineers who found fault with the starter held it responsible for what they called a "spark knock." Kettering argued they were wrong, that the "spark knock" was actually a fuel knock, journeyed to the far frontiers of the elements seeking proofs, and came back with Ethyl gasoline after probably 100,000 experiments.

The automobile industry has undergone tremendous changes since that June of 1911 when Cadillac announced the starter. Kettering is known as an inventive genius of the first magnitude. Sales of motor cars for the year 1911 were 199,319. Now they are greater than that twice over in a month!

But men's hearts and minds are guided today in much the same way as then. And in the Cadillac plants, men who have grown gray in the fascination of intimate contact with things automotive, are pausing to reflect back to that wintry day of years ago when Kettering convinced them that his starter would actually work.

And youngsters at Cadillac, many of them still in rompers on that memorable day, are listening to that story and kindred others of motor car romance because the business of designing, building and selling motor cars, now grown to be the greatest single industry in the world that can be classified, still retains all the glamor and all the romance, perhaps, that it did in those days gone by.

Studebaker Brings Out Big Bus Chassis

A 220-inch bus chassis powered by a 115-horsepower straight eight motor and designed to accommodate a 25-passenger parlor car type of body is announced by Studebaker. It is capable of a maximum weight allowance for chassis, body and load of 15,070 pounds.

Among the outstanding features of this new unit are four forward speeds, Gruss air springs in front, an inside luggage rack supplemented by an exterior roof rack at the rear, adjustable driver's seat, double cushion chairs with head rests and abundant leg and head room.

Can You Qualify?

California law provides a scale of speed at which a car must stop within a certain distance. At 10 miles an hour, a car must stop in 9:8 feet; at 15, 20.8 feet; at 20, 37 feet; at 25, 58 feet, and at 30, 83.3 feet.

Southern Cross Buys Two Goodrich Tires

AKRON, O., July 17.—Having blazed an air trail almost half way round the world above ocean waves, Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith and his companions are planning another epochal flight in the famous "Southern Cross." Confirmation of this contemplated hop was received by the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co. in an order for two new tires for the famous ship. The new flight is planned to start from England across to the United States and possibly to circumnavigate the globe. The huge Goodrich tires on the Southern Cross have hung beneath the famous ship for 60,000 miles of history making flight.

More Cars in Havana.

There has been an 18 per cent increase in automobiles in Havana during the past fiscal year. There are now 7718 private cars, 6170 taxicabs, 699 cars for hire, and 4600 trucks in the Cuban city.

Iowa Leads in Paved Road Construction

Iowa has jumped into national leadership in miles of new paving on State road systems this year. When contracts for new paving to be let in July are executed, Iowa will displace Illinois as the State with the most paving under construction for completion in 1928.

At the present time Iowa has 611 miles of new paving under construction on its primary road system. The State Highway Commission has called for bids on 74.5 additional miles of paving, and will let further contracts for about 30 more miles of paving, bringing the total to be under contract this month to 715 miles.

Three General Motors Officials Are Fokker Corporation Directors

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Fokker Aircraft Corporation of America, Fred J. Fisher, C. F. Kettering and C. E. Wilson were elected as members. These men have long been associated with General Motors Corporation and will represent the General Motors Corporation's interests in this company.

General Motors Corporation recently acquired 400,000 shares of no par common stock of the Fokker Aircraft Corporation of America in exchange for all the capital stock of the Dayton Wright Co., which is now a subsidiary of the Fokker Aircraft Corporation of America.

Far surpassing every known non-stop record on the ground or in the air

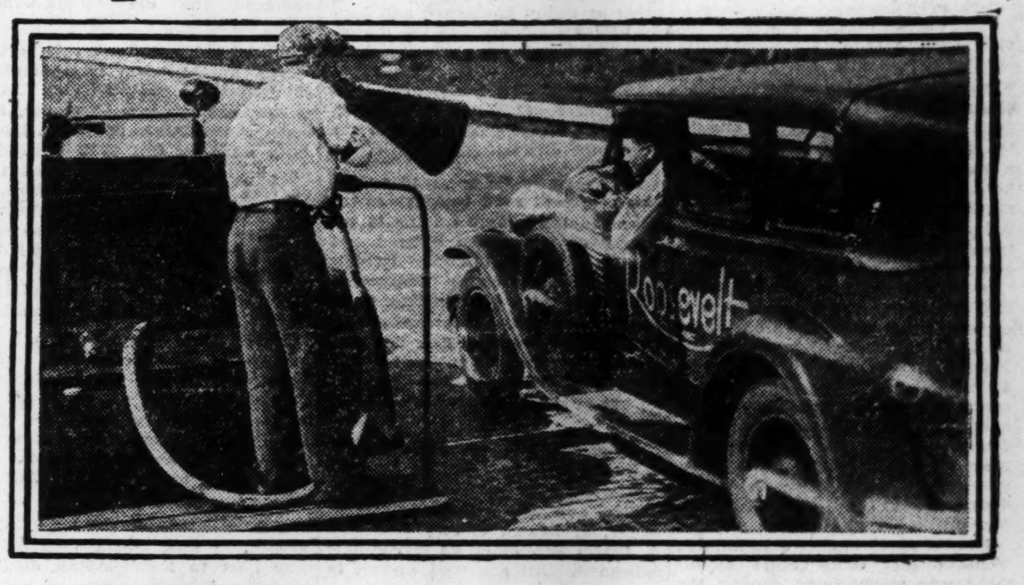
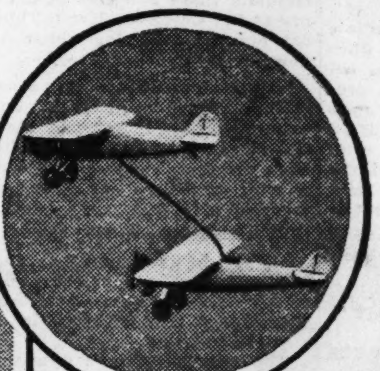
(Run made under official observation.
Record subject to final confirmation.)

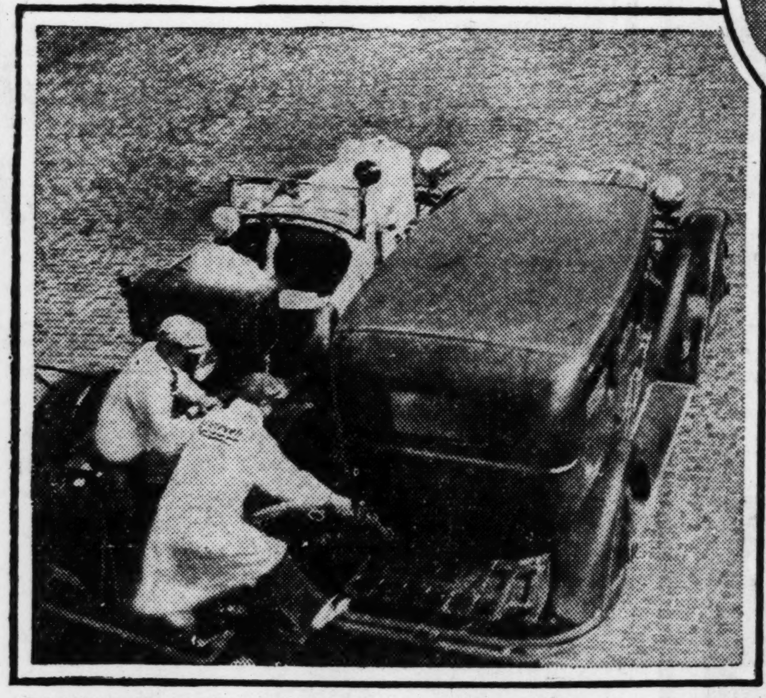
THROUGH blinding rains, pitch black nights, burning suns—taking gas, oil and water "on the fly"—over a punishing brick course—every eight hours taking fresh drivers on the run—these are a few of the highlights of the longest non-stop run in history, either on the ground or in the air . . . For 440 hours and 30 minutes (over 18 days) the sturdy Roosevelt straight-eight carried on—its engine never shut off, the car always on the move over the famous 2½-mile oval of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway . . . It is not only the longest non-stop run on record—but also one of the greatest demonstrations of stamina and all-round dependability ever registered by any stock car.



DAY AND NIGHT SUPERVISION BY A. A. A. OBSERVERS—Every operation—changing drivers—re-fueling—taking on gas and water, etc.—was supervised by representatives of the A. A. A. Contest Board . . . The official shown here is giving instruction concerning a track driving rule during the early stages of the run.

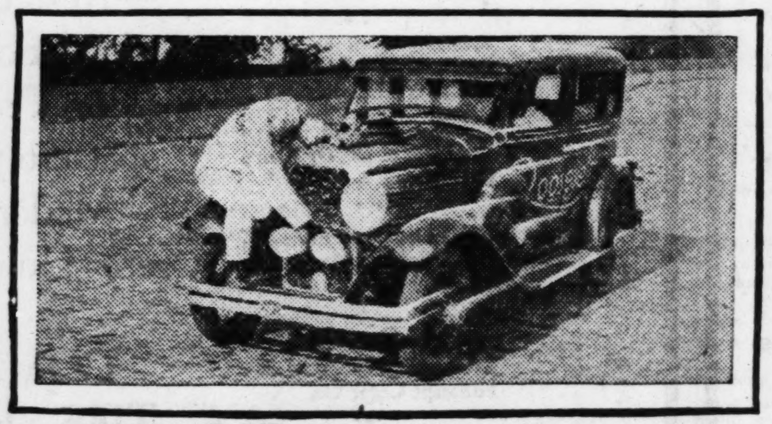


TAKING GAS—The most important phase of the "non-stop" successes recently made in the air.



TAKING GAS ON THE RUN—Not quite so hazardous as it is in the air, but a time when drivers of both cars must have "eyes front" and keep constant speed and distances . . . Re-fueling was accomplished throughout the record run without a single mishap.

AFTER 18 GRUELLING DAYS ON THE TRACK—At the completion of the run the Roosevelt was taken down and examined by A. A. A. officials to again verify that all parts were strictly to stock car specifications. Shown here is a piston from the car being compared with a new piston taken from the motor assembly at the Marmon factory. Every detail of the record-breaking Roosevelt was stock—even to bumpers, tires, etc.



ALL BUTTERFLIES OFF—Constant driving produced butterfly and insect casualties by the hundreds . . . They were cleaned off every day—no chances were taken of clogging up the air passages of the radiator.

2 Men Complete 18,244 Miles in Roosevelt Sedan

Only Eight Cents Spent on Motor in Tour of 48 Capitals.

Completing an 18,244-mile journey in just seven minutes less than 30 days in a Roosevelt straight-eight sedan, two men from Lawrence, Mass., have returned to Boston, their starting point, after having visited each of the 48 state capitals in the country.

This unusual test of automobile and human endurance was made by Leslie Morrison and Norman Neal, who planned and set their goal without outside aid, and proceeded to achieve it. Acting on their own intiative and independent of the Marmon-Roosevelt factory, they selected and purchased a Roosevelt car in Metheun, Mass.

The start of the run was made in Boston June 8 at 12:10 p. m. and the finish came at 12:03 p. m., July 8, one month later, almost to the minute. Foregoing sleep, except for that obtained at irregular intervals in a special compartment of the car where one slept while the other drove, the men maintained an average of more than 600 miles a day for the entire period.

The object of the run was to visit each of the state capitals within one month, but stops also were made in many other cities along the route. In one instance, fatal injury or at least an end to the test, was narrowly averted in a serious accident in North Dakota which delayed progress for more than 24 hours. At each capital city the men checked in at a telegraph office or police headquarters as evidence of their visit.

A final survey of results at the end of the test showed that a total of only eight cents had been spent on the straight eight motor of the Roosevelt car during the entire 18,244 miles. This was the cost of a nut and bolt used to secure the exhaust pipe to the exhaust manifold. Not a spark plug was removed for adjustment or replacement, nor were the points on the distributer or the carburetor adjusted.

Almost every conceivable kind of weather and temperature conditions was encountered during the tedious trip. In the mountains of the Northwest, Morrison and Neal wore fur coats, while near Carson City, Nev., and in the desert region of the Southwest, the temperatures mounted to 114 to 120 degrees. A heavy fog in the White Mountains slowed progress to a point where two hours were required to travel 25 miles. From Indianapolis, Ind., to Springfield, Ill., a violent storm was encountered and several times it was necessary for one of the men to get out of the car and remove limbs and branches of trees from the road. At another point the road was covered with water so deep that it entered the tonneau of the car.

The long journey involved traver over the kind of paved roads for which America is noted the world over, as well as driving through almost impassable lanes. Wide city boulevards and backwoods roads were traversed, sometimes within a few miles of each other.

2,500,000 by 1930.

Based on the average percentage of increase since 1921, it is estimated that New York State will have more than 2,500,000 automobiles by 1930. Eight years ago there were 800,000 cars registered in the State. Last year there were 2,115,000 cars registered.

Along Auto Row

Two hundred and fifty Chevrolet dealers and factory officials visited St. Louis Friday, prior to a trip to the main plant at Flint, Mich., over the week-end. They came from Decatur, Ill.; Memphis, Tenn.; Kansas City, Mo., and Wichita, Kan.

Under the leadership of E. P. Feely, regional organization manager, and Roy Evans, regional truck manager, the party arrived early and inspected the local assembly plant at Union boulevard and Natural Bridge avenue. In the majority of instances, they saw cars built that they will later sell themselves.

In Detroit, the party were the guests of R. H. Grant, vice president of General Motors and a Chevrolet official.

Emphasis is being given to the observance of road courtesy as the prime factor of safe driving in the course of instruction offered by the St. Louis Automobile Driving School, 4057 Delmar boulevard. According to V. L. Stanfield, manager, 12 dealers along automobile row are turning over new car purchasers to the school for instruction. The St. Louis Safety Council has approved the school's methods.

Harry W. Lohrum, general sales manager of the Lambert-Graves Motor Co., Oldsmobile and Viking dealer, announces the appointment of W. J. Brady, J. J. Cratty and J. Dixon Schneider as Oldsmobile salesmen. All are well known in St. Louis.

"Simonizing" gives an immediate and lasting protection to a duco or lacquer automobile finish, according to Mrs. E. E. Gilham, proprietor of the Missouri Simoniz Co., 4530 Delmar boulevard. Hard rubbing, which removes the original finish, is not necessary in the application of Simoniz, she says. The secret of application is not in the rubbing, but in the frequent changing to clean rags, to prevent streaking.

Motovox, the new warning signal for automobiles that is being produced by the Moto Meter Co., Inc., of Long Island City, N. Y., is distributed here by the Koochook Co., 2209 Pine street. This signal is said to be the first real improvement in warning signal design since the electrically operated horn replaced the old "honk-honk" bulb horn.

A clogged radiator will often wreak untold harm to a motor, sometimes even warping the valves, causing loss of power, according to officials of the St. Louis Auto Radiator Co., 3326 Washington boulevard, who say that 160 degrees is the best temperature at which a motor runs. A clogged radiator will sometimes cause cylinders to be scored or cylinder heads to crack. Before a long trip, it is pointed out, the radiator should be boiled out thoroughly.

P. K. Marcla and Joseph Nies, proprietors of the Local Auto Painting Co., 3948-62 Laclede avenue, one of the oldest painting plants in the city, announce that for the first time they will offer special high grade paint jobs at special low prices during August only.

The Vesper-Buick Auto Co., Marquette and Buick distributor, was host to metropolitan dealers handling these two cars at a dinner at the Coronado Hotel, Thursday evening, following which the new Buick was inspected.

Dealers from the territory served by the Vesper company at large were entertained Thusday morning, at luncheon and in the afternoon. A sales meeting preceded a general inspection of the new models.

Oldsmobile Adds Another New Unit To Produce Parts

Another huge building will be added to the rapidly expanding Oldsmobile-Viking factories, according to an announcement just made by I. J. Reuter, president and general manager of Olds Motor Works. This is the tenth large structure to be built in the past two years.

This latest addition will be devoted to service parts. It will be 420 feet long, 130 feet in width and three stories in height, containing 169,300 square feet of floor area. With this new building and other construction projects either completed or now under way, there will have been 1,194,498 square feet of new floor area added to the Oldsmobile-Viking factories in the past two years.

The new building will be constructed of concrete and yellow face brick, to correspond with the other nine new structures. Owing to the topography of the land, the first floor will be on ground level at the east end and will be six feet below on the west end. Extending along the full southern length of the building and the west end will be a covered loading dock. The floor of the dock will be on the level of the second floor of the building and a railroad siding will extend along the dock on the south side. The space under the dock, containing 5500 square feet, will be constructed for a closed warehouse space on the first-floor level.

Fewer Revolutions Mean Burden on Motor Is Lighter

The vital importance of minimizing engine revolutions for better performance and more economical operation of motor cars was stressed recently by H. J. Shorter, assistant general sales manager of Durant Motors, Inc., who just returned from a series of "drive-away" meetings throughout the Middle West.

"Every motor wise person knows that excessive engine speed is the direct cause of engine wear, rapid depreciation, added repair bills and greater gasoline and oil consumption," Shorter declared.

"The Durant '6-70' model, with its exclusive four forward speed transmission, needs only 2450 revolutions per mile. Think what the difference between this figure and a total of 3000 or more means to an automobile owner. It takes no technical knowledge to understand that all that excess is waste motion, and constitutes costly practice. Moreover I believe the public is coming to understand that the four forward speed transmission used on the Durant Six-Sixty Six and Six Seventy because of its lessened wear on the engine is a major factor in car value."

Cars Blessed.

More than 500 automobiles were blessed by the Rev. Joseph Morin, pastor of St. Edmund's Church, Manchester, N. H. The ceremony as practiced in France, is merely reciting a prayer by the priest to St. Christopher, patron of all travelers, and then sprinkling each car with holy water. The Rev. Morin plans to make the blessing of automobiles an annual custom.

Treat It Gently.

If the radiator ornament does not snap into place easily don't pound it. The chances are that it is fragile.

Graham-Paige, in Hill Climb Race, Wins First Place

The characteristic difference between British and American motor cars was strikingly demonstrated recently in a new kind of competition, combining tests of hill-climbing ability and of fuel economy in one continuous run. The event was held under the official control of the Royal Automobile Club of Queensland.

The British cars, built for use where gasoline is costly and where high taxation rates are based on engine displacement, naturally led in the economy test.

The American cars, built to meet the national demand for speed and acceleration ability in a country where gasoline is cheap, were supreme on the hill climb, the 10 best records being made by cars of six different makes from the United States.

The best time of the day was by a six-cylinder four-speed Graham-Paige, driven by Jack Moran, who covered the winding ascent of Mount Coot-tha, one and one-fifth miles, in one minute and 45 2-5 seconds, nine seconds faster than the next best time, made by an eight-cylinder car.

In the gasoline test the best mileage record was made by a British Austin.

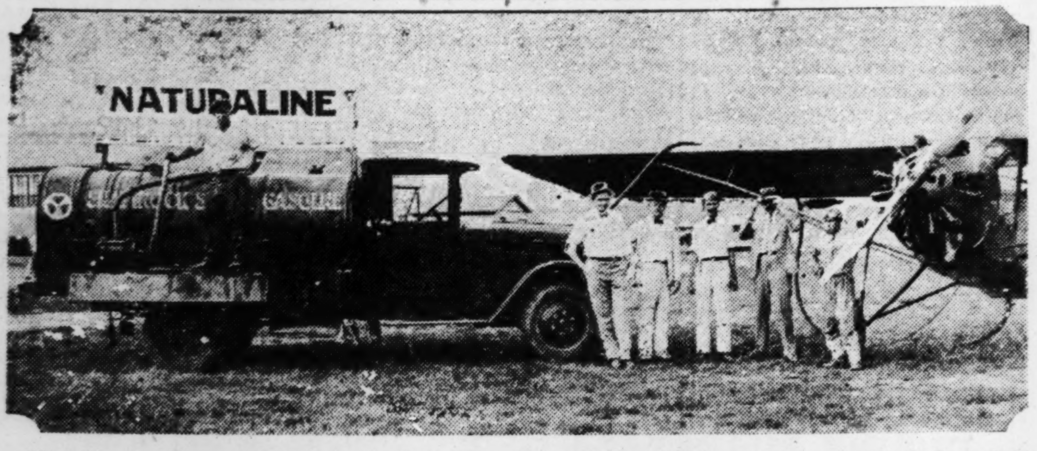
Shamrock Naturaline Fuels the Refueling Ship



Naturaline gasoline, special aviation fuel, was shipped by truck from Oklahoma to be sent to the St. Louis Robin in its battle against time. Left to right: F. B. Oswald, president of the Shamrock Oil and Gasoline Co., exclusive Naturaline distributer here; G. E. Yeldell, Maj. C. Ray Wassall, pilot of the refueling ship; Jim Jensen and P. V. "Shorty" Chaffee, co-pilot with Maj. Wassall of the refueling plane.

At St. Louis Air Fields

LAMBERT-ST. LOUIS FIELD has just gone through the busiest two weeks since the 1923 air races.

Thousands of persons visited the airport daily—and even nightly—in the hope of glimpsing the endurance plane. Commercial companies did a booming business in passenger hops. Several records for individual day's receipts were broken. So attractive were the possibilities for profit that the Von Hoffmann Aircraft Co. placed a telephone order for a four-passenger Stinson-Detroiter at 4:30 p. m. Tuesday, sent Jack McMillan to Detroit that night, and had the plane on the field next day.

Night passenger flying ceased suddenly Wednesday when a trimotored plane made a landing at the No. 1 air mail beacon with a load of passengers when one motor cut out. Mechanics started the engine without difficulty next morning and a careful check failed to show anything wrong. The plane could have returned to the airport with two engines, but the pilot followed the safest course in landing as he did.

To Enlarge Parking Space.

Additional parking space for spectators' cars will be supplied at Lambert-St. Louis Field as the present construction program progresses. Large additional areas on the south and west sides of the field will be established, with entrances on Natural Bridge and Bridgeton Station roads.

Endurance Flight Helps Business.

The endurance flight of the St. Louis Robin has had a material influence on the business of the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co. The plant is more than a week behind on orders, according to Ralph Damon, factory manager. In addition to the influx of orders, the flight has placed the office force several weeks behind in their work, due to the increased correspondence that must be handled.

Parks P-1 Certificated.

The Department of Commerce has awarded an approved type certificate to the Parks P-1, a three-place open biplane manufactured by Parks Aircraft, Inc. The P-1 is powered with an OX-5 engine and is especially adapted to training work. A second approved type certificate for the Parks P-2, also an open biplane, is expected this week. The P-2 is a sport plane with a 150-horsepower Axelson engine. It is capable of a high speed in excess of 120 miles an hour and has a landing speed of 35 miles an hour.

$78,000 Order for Ryans.

An order for six new Ryan broughams, costing approximately $78,000, was received unexpectedly last week by the Ryan Aircraft Corporation from Pickwick Airways, Inc., of Los Angeles. The planes are to be used on a new air line in Mexico.

Terrier Flier to Kansas and Back.

Babe, Sergt. Jimmy Tate's Boston terrier, made the trip to the Fort Riley, Kan., training camp and return in a plane with her master, in place of on a troop train. Babe enjoyed both rides.

Apron Under Construction.

Work was started at Lambert Field during the week on the concrete apron along the west side of the field. The apron will be 2000 feet long and 200 feet wide and will go far toward eliminating the inconvenience caused by dust stirred up by the propellers of starting planes. The 200-foot width will be divided by a chain, one section being reserved for spectators and the other as a starting place for planes.

Exit the Sprinkling Cart.

In an effort to reduce the clouds of dust which made life miserable for watchers at the endurance flight, Acting Field Manager Parks sought to find a sprinkling wagon among city equipment. The Street Department notified him that street flushers were to be had, but not one sprinkling cart, since practically all city streets are now hard surfaced.

Installment Plan Tuition.

Payment on the installment plan for flying courses is now possible for prospective students of Parks Air College. The arrangement includes a system of loans to students to cover payments for tuition and maintenance, and has been put in effect to meet a widespread demand for extended payments for flying school courses.

Airport Newspaper Contemplated.

A St. Louis County editor is said to be contemplating publication of a weekly paper "The Airport News," to be distributed at Lambert-St. Louis Field.

Ben Brinkman Takes a Ride.

Ben G. Brinkman, owner of Forest Park Highlands, was the first St. Louisan to use the special resort air passenger line between Chicago and Rhinelander, Wis., operated by the Universal Aviation Corporation. A plane leaves Chicago every Friday at noon, returning Monday.

Day's Receipts for Flyers.

After carrying more than 2000 persons on sight-seeing trips during the first 12 days of the endurance flight, the Universal Corporation donated a day's receipts from sightseeing rides to Jackson and O'Brine.

Barney Zimmerley Wins Again.

Barney Zimmerley, chief pilot for Nicholas-Beazley increased his 1929 prize money by $1000 on July 19 by winning the "On to Des Moines Race."

Slotted-Winged Plane.

The first slotted-winged training plane to appear here was placed in service last week by the Von Hallmann Flying School. The ship, an Avro-Avian, will be used for primary training. The slots, on the leading edge of the top wing, open when the ship loses flying speed, preventing a stall. The ship is powered with a Cirrus engine and has a top speed of 102 miles an hour.

Condors to Stop in St. Louis.

St. Louis will be the daily stopping place of the new Curtiss Condor 18-passenger transports shortly. The first of these great planes was demonstrated a week ago at New York and was placed in service by Trans-Continental Air Transport, Inc. The Condors have a top speed of 140 miles an hour and are equipped with berths for night passenger service. This type of plane will replace the tri-motored Fords now used by T. A. T. eventually, it is expected.

Hammer Wants to Ary Again.

Joe Hammer, one of the pilots of the Missouri Robin, has announced that he will make another endurance flight, probably this year. "I learned a lot," Hammer said, "and think I could break a record next time."

Two Trimotors Stop Here.

Among the planes stopping at Lambert-St. Louis Field during the week were two tri-motored craft. One was the Stanolind III, belonging to the Standard Oil Co., and the other was a transport to be placed in regular service between El Paso, Tex., and Los Angeles by Ctandard Air Lines.

Aircraft Welding Class.

A school of aircraft welding has been opened by Parks Air College at 3553 Olive street, and the first class will begin work during the coming week. The course will last ten weeks. The school headquarters will also serve as a city office for Parks Air College.

Another Welding School.

St. Louis will have another aircraft welding school, to be operated by American School of Welding. W. J. Patterson will be in charge of instruction and George Adams will be superintendent.

Gets Distributing Agency.

The Universal Aviation Corporation has become distributer for products of Curtiss Flying Service in the extensive territory served by the Universal's various passenger and air mail routes. An original order for 20 Curtiss Robins was placed.

Thrush Factory Under Way.

The steel structure of the new Thrush factory of the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Mfg. Co., at Lambert-St. Louis Field has been completed.

Von Hoffmann School Moved.

The Von Haffmann Rlying School has been moved to the new hangar on the south side of Lambert Field, although the structure is not complete. The old Von Hoffmann hangar is now used for storage.

Visitors at Lambert Field.

Visitors to Lambert Field during the week included Maj. R. H. Fleet, head of the Fleet Aircraft Corporation, and Tex La Grone, veteran pilot.

Parks Airport Callers.

Among visitors at Parks Airport during the past week were Stanley T. Stanton, former University of Michigan geology professor and now test pilot for the Cessna Aircraft Corporation of Wichita, Kan., on his way from Wichita to New York; B. Hatch in a monocoupe from Moline, Ill.; E. W. Goff Jr., in a J-6 Stinson monoplane bound from Battle Creek, Mich., to Des Moines, Ia.; Ray Bank, in a Waco-Ten from Milwaukee, Wis.; J. L. Brown in a Command-Aire from Momence, Ill.; William A. Ong in a Great Lakes biplane from Kansas City; J. Harpan in an Arrow Sport from Kansas City; Fred Kane in a Stinson from Kansas City; Thomas R. Potts in an American Eagle from Montgomery, Ala.; Leonard Rhiner in a Stinson monoplane from Kansas City; O. G. Haned in a Tarvel-Aid from Albany, N. Y.; Dick Allen in a Fokker Super-Universal from Chicago, and E. M. Laird in a Laird Whipoorwill biplane from Chicago.

Student's Idea of Landing.

"Flying students do queer things," narrated George Lea Lambert, vice president of the Von Hoffmann Aircraft Co. "We had one the other day who decided to make a forced landing not far from the airport. He had his pick of a clear field, three haystacks or a group of poles. He plowed through the haystacks and smacked the poles—and another training ship went to the shop."

Addresses Ground School.

The first class of the ground school of the Curtiss Flying Service convened Monday evening in its newly equipped quarters on the eleventh floor of the Syndicate Trust Building. Over 60 students and 40 visitors were addressed by Maj. William B. Robertson, president of the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Co., who spoke on the endurance flight, the importance of ground school instruction and the future of the aviation industry. Visitors included David Visel, vice president of Curtiss Airports Corporation, New York; Frank L. Hale, business manager, Curtiss Flying Services, New York; J. D. Livingston, vice president; Ralph Damon and Mr. Brandeweide, Curtiss-Robertson officials, and Harry C. Willson, legal adviser of the Curtiss Flying Services, St. Louis.

Traffic Survey From Air.

Traffic experts conducted a thorough study of the highways of New York City from an airplane. They were particularly impressed by the crooked, narrow streets of Manhattan and the great number of traffic bottle necks formed at places all over the city. They decided that traffic congestion would be greatly relieved if some way could be found to overcome the motorists' "sheep instinct" or tendency to herd in certain avenues.

Chevrolet Predicts More Sixes Than Fours This Season

In First Six Months Sixes Totaled 1,900,000, Against 1,265,000 Fours.

DETROIT, Mich., July 27.—For the first time in the history of the automobile industry, six-cylinder cars promise to lead the field in production this year, according to a survey by the Chevrolet Motor Co., completed today. Up until this year four-cylinder cars ranked first in annual production volume.

Comparative production figures for the first six months of this year are offered in support of the forecast. During this period there were produced approximately 1,900,000 sixes, as compared with approximately 1,265,000 fours, an indication of what the total for the year is apt to be.

How the change comes about is illustrated in the survey. Chevrolet's manufacturing goal for the year is 1,350,000 cars. Chevrolet's change over from a four to a six means a deduction of this enormous total from the four-cylinder field, and adds it to the six-cylinder field.

How the automobile picture has changed almost overnight will be noted in an inspection of the 1928 showing. Last year, when Chevrolet was producing a four-cylinder car, four-cylinder manufacturers built approximately 2,098,000 cars, with one large manufacturer of four-cylinder cars on limited production due to model change, while six-cylinder manufacturers were making 1,617,000 cars.

As it now stands, the year 1929 should show approximately 3,000,000 six-cylinder units, as compared to only 2,250,000 four-cylinder units.

5000 Aviators To Hold Reunion At Kansas City

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 27.—Thousands of pilots, airplane and accessory manufacturers and notables in the aviation industry will gather for the International Air Circus, Exposition and Pilots' Reunion at Fairfax Airport under the auspices of the Army Air Corps Reserve Officers' Association, Sept. 21 to 29.

It will be the first regularly organized airport circus and aircraft show ever held, its sponsors assert. A committee of 100 outstanding flyers, including Capt. Edward Rickenbacker, Col. Arthur Goebel, Col. Clarence Chamberlain, George W. Haldeman, William Brock, Edward Schlee and Edward Stinson, will act as hosts to more than 5000 American and foreign aviators. The reunion will be the first since that held at Columbus, O., shortly after the war.

The circus will be featured by stunt flying, balloon strafing, maneuvers by bombardment and pursuit squadrons, sky writing, refueling airplanes in flight, radio communication from ground to planes, aerial ambulance demonstrations, parachute jumping, aerial fireworks, races and contests.

Displays will be housed in a huge airdrome at Fairfax Airport, large enough to accommodate 200 airplanes.

Funds derived from the exposition and circus will be used to build a clubhouse in memory of Lieut. John F. Richards, first Kansas City flyer to be killed in the World War.

With Franklin's air-cooled power, which is 40% greater than last year—and the biggest power increase of any present-day car—you get the stamina, the endurance, the power and safety that are necessary to produce record-breaking performance. A short drive in a Franklin and you sense great reserve power as you gain speed on your favorite steep hill—or flash ahead to 50 in second gear as quietly as in high. You pass easily in a pinch—without a feeling of strain. In traffic you have absolute peace of mind—so confidently and easily you control Franklin. On the open road only joy and comfort are your motoring companions. And all day you can drive Franklin at top speed without over-heating, loss of power or fear of injury to the motor.

In one year, Franklin has captured all America's major road records—a feat never before accomplished by one car—a dramatic testimony of Franklin's amazing air-cooled performance.

Willys Resigns As President After 21 Years

Succeeded by L. A. Miller, First Executive Vice President.

Announcement of the election of Linwood A. Miller to succeed John North Willys as president of the Willys-Overland Co., places the active leadership in the hands of an executive who has an admirable background through his 15 years' experience with the company. For the past four years Miller has been first vice president and in this capacity has maintained a close personal contact with Willys.

Although relinquishing the reins of active leadership in the company, Willys, who has been one of the dominant figures of the industry for years, remains as chairman of the board and thus enters into a new phase of activity in the company which he had continuously headed for more than 21 years.

At the meeting of the board at which Willys' resignation was accepted, Marshall Field and Charles F. Glore, both of Chicago, were elected as directors, succeeding C. B. Mertz and C. B. Wilson, resigned. Both of the new directors are internationally known in the world of finance and business and lend additional strength and prestige to the organization. C. O. Miniger, for many years a member of the executive committee, has been elected its chairman.

In an interview at the close of the meeting, Willys said:

"With this meeting of the Willys-Overland directors, my activities with the company enter into a new phase. After 21 years as its first and only president, I have become chairman of the board.

"For 21 years I have borne the heavy burdens of this business. Now comes a time when I want a greater degree of freedom and I regard it as essential to my health that I relinquish some of my responsibilities. I feel warranted in doing this because we have the strongest executive organization in our history.

"Particularly are we fortunate in having for our new president L. A. Miller, who has been with us for 15 years and in his upward progress has had training in every phase of the business. He is a balanced, forceful, experienced executive, and his selection is popular with our entire organization.

"Our company shows a marvelous transition from the original handful of buildings to our present great plant, with its capacity of 2000 automobiles daily. Our plant and equipment can now be conservatively estimated as being worth $42,000,000, and we have a total of 9596 distributers, dealers and authorized service stations. Last year was the biggest in our history, with a total sale of 413,000 cars and a volume of business in excess of $187,000,000."

Miller is 44 years old, and was born in Salem, N. J. The Quaker ancestors of Mr. Miller were among the first settlers in John Fenwick's colony in New Jersey.

From 1905 to 1910 Miller was secretary to the general superintendent of the Pennsylvaina Railroad, a further experience in transportation.

Joining the Curtis Publishing Co., Miller spent five years with that organization as efficiency engineer. His work attracted the attention of Willys, and he joined the Willys-Overland organization in 1915 as office manager.

In 1920 he was made assistant to the first vice president. Later he became vice president and secretary. In 1925 he was chosen first vice president, member of the board and member of the Executive Committee.

During all the 15 years of his connection with Willys-Overland, Miller has enjoyed the closest personal contact with Willys and has been entrusted with full responsibility. In the Willys-Overland organization he is recognized as an official of force, experience and foresight.

Franklin Dealers To Demonstrate Power of Motor

Tests Will Show Acceleration on Hills, Low Speed and Reserve.

The forward strides of air-cooled power plants for motor cars, which have been brought to their present high peak of efficiency through long years of development by the Franklin Automobile Co., builders of the air-cooled Franklin, will be brought more forcibly to the attention of the American public during the coming week through a series of demonstrations by the nation-wide Franklin dealer organization.

A general invitation is issued to the motoring public to learn through actual demonstration the splendid performance now possible through the 40 per cent greater power in the current line of Franklin cars. Company executives state that this unusual increase, the largest of any present day car, is a pertinent factor in extending popular interest in Franklin to its present high point.

Although the Franklin for years has showed its ability to climb long, steep grades in high gear with an even flow of air-cooled power at all times, the superiority of the present car in making such climbs under adverse conditions will be demonstrated in two ways. One will prove its rugged pulling ability in high gear where low engine speed is necessitated because of a restricted approach to the hill. A second test will bring the car to the beginning of the climb in high gear at normal touring speed and will show the extent of its reserve power by steady acceleration to the top of the hill. It is this reserve power which Franklin construction makes usable on roads of all kinds that play an important part in making Franklin the outstanding road car of America.

Rapid acceleration throughout every speed range will be shown over measured courses and against stop-watch timing. Other tests will show the speedy getaway of the Franklin in its silent, fast second gear as an example of its power in traffic.

Tests have clearly proven that in the present Franklin more power is available in the higher speed ranges, this providing much faster acceleration as well as adding to its maximum top speed. This is especially desirable when traveling at 50 miles an hour or more, and the driver desires to pass a line of cars ahead. The speed at which the Franklin mounts from 45 to 60 miles an hour gives the driver this "power to pass in a pinch" with safety.

More efficient power development by means of a perfected carburetion system has long been the aim of automotive engineers, and it is admitted by technical authorities that the system employed in the current Franklin series is one of the most highly developed units so far designed and is a chief factor in its outstanding performance.

Time and again during the present year the power development in the Franklin has been demonstrated, when "Cannon Ball" Baker shattered nearly every American road record, which included transcontinental runs, mountain climbs, races against the fastest limited trains and gruelling drives across the burning desert sands.

Stopped by Light.

Major Byron Parsons, 93, of Evansville, Ind., afer driving for 20 years, is selling his car—not because of his age, but because there are too many traffic lights.

Capt. Hawks Buys Marmon "68" Coupe

Capt. Frank M. Hawks of transcontinental flight fame, is the owner of a new series Marmon 68 coupe which he purchased in New York shortly after his recent record round-trip flight between New York and Los Angeles.

The well-known aviator, who also is superintendent of aviation of the Texas Co., took delivery of his new car a short time ago. It is rust brown in color and has cream striping and cream wire wheels.

U. S. Rubber Co. Fleet Returns to Michigan

DETROIT, Mich., July 27.—With 750,000 miles rolled off during the winter and spring over the rough, gritty roads of Arizona, the "traveling proving grounds" as the tire-testing fleet of the United States Rubber Co. is known, has returned north and is now covering 300 miles a day over Michigan highways.

Heat and gritty roads are the worst enemy of rubber. This is why Arizona is chosen for driving during the winter. In summer, when the mercury gets up around 80 or 90 in Michigan, the fleet is brought home, where results of the tests can be studied close at hand, for the company's largest tire factory and its tire development division are located in Detroit.

Greater Wear.

When the differential gears begin to growl the story of their maladjustment or lack of lubricants the car owner should not be indifferent. Wear means that these gears do not mesh properly and in such a case, breakage is likely.

Used Knights Valuable

A distinct tribute to the long life of cars employing the Knight sleeve-valve engine, their reputation of being the fastest selling used car in the market and their excellent trade-in value comes as the result of a survey of the market. Not alone does this survey reveal that the Knight sleeve-valve engine is in great demand in the used car market but also that these cars command the highest prices.

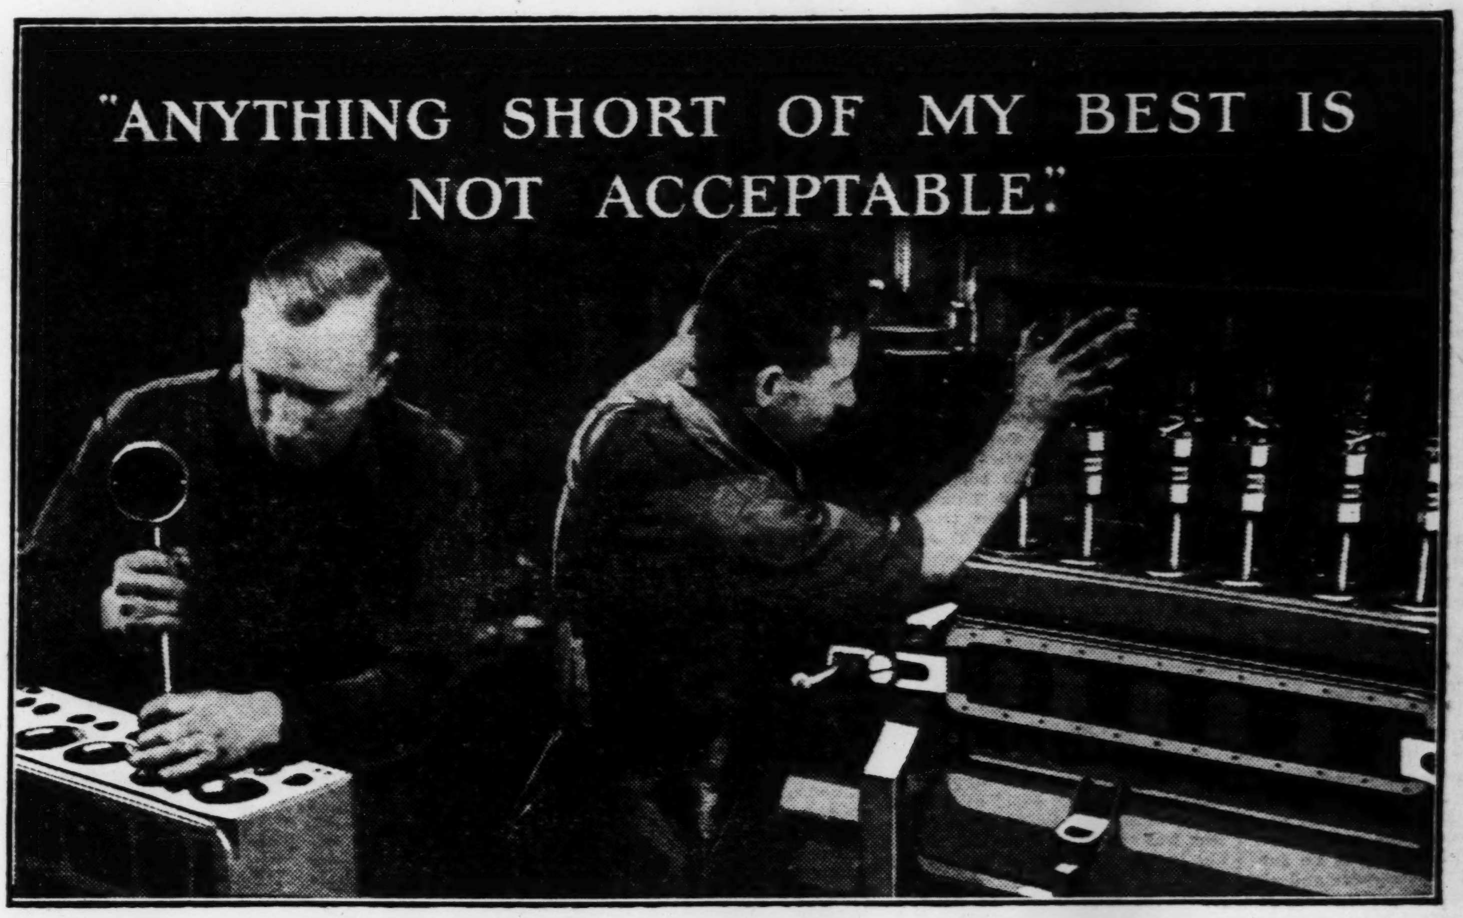
Back of the satisfaction of Oldsmobile owners stands the satisfaction of Oldsmobile workers in a job well done



"ANYTHING SHORT OF MY BEST IS NOT ACCEPTABLE."

AFTER all, what is a motor car? Is it merely so much wood and metal . . . so many gears and cotter-pins?

Or is it, as Oldsmobile workers believe, something more . . . the culmination of the skill and ideals of the men who build it, from the first engineering sketch through to the final check-up and inspection? To express this spirit one of these workers—a veteran milling machine operator—coined the phrase, "Anything short of my best is not acceptable." And this charge of responsibility has been adopted by his fellow workers throughout the organization, as their plant slogan.

Oldsmobile engineers are constantly at work—proving and re-proving the product they design—testing the merit of new ideas—ever seeking the better thing. In addition, they call upon the vast resources of the General Motors Proving Ground and Research Laboratories. Always they have in mind . . . "Anything short of my best is not acceptable."

Skilled operators, unerringly guiding great machines—efficient workmen, accurately fitting Oldsmobiles together, part by part—keen-eyed inspectors, rigidly checking the work of the producers—each man, whatever his job, from the highest executive to the newest shop employee, follows the same rule . . . "Anything short of my best is not acceptable."

The result is a standard of precision, and a degree of accuracy which are worthy of the finest cars.

The satisfaction of Oldsmobile workers in a job well done is largely responsible for the satisfaction Oldsmobile owners find in their cars. Oldsmobile owners are loyal, because they know that Oldsmobile is loyal to its owners, not only in the matter of fine workmanship but in all the details of manufacture—in the quality of materials, in progressiveness of engineering, and in the generous measure of Oldsmobile value.

This owner enthusiasm is reflected in Oldsmobile's tremendous and ever-increasing success. Month after month, Oldsmobile sales continue to grow. Time after time, new owners write, "My neighbor praised his Oldsmobile—and I find that everything he said is true."

Oldsmobile respects this great public confidence. And, in return, Oldsmobile promises the public, in behalf of every worker in the Oldsmobile factories, to maintain steadfast allegiance to the Oldsmobile pledge: "Anything short of my best is not acceptable."

Used Knights Valuable

A distinct tribute to the long life of cars employing the Knight sleeve-valve engine, their reputation of being the fastest selling used car in the market and their excellent trade-in value comes as the result of a survey of the market. Not alone does this survey reveal that the Knight sleeve-valve engine is in great demand in the used car market but also that these cars command the highest prices.

45 Below Zero Temperatures Test Chevrolet

Engineers Try Effect of Extreme Cold Weather on Operation.

The cold room of General Motors research laboratories, designed to put cars through tests in freezing temperatures, is one of the chief reasons for the ability of the Chevrolet six to start easily and quickly no matter how frigid the weather. The cold room was the first of its kind in the automobile industry and was originated and developed six years ago by General Motors engineers.

The object of the cold room, obviously, is to furnish Chevrolet engineers an opportunity to study at intimate range the reaction of the Chevrolet car to the temperatures an automobile must withstand in winter, whether left overnight in an unheated garage or parked for hours alongside a curb. It is, in short, an indoor "proving ground" where winter "weather" can be produced at will.

Through the use of ammonia gas, much after the manner in which it is employed in cold storage plants or in establishments devoted to the manufacture of ice, the thermometer readings can be raised or lowered by the engineers within a short space of time. For instance, with the mercury at zero, the temperature can be dropped to 45 degrees below zero in three hours.

The use of an electric dynamometer, which is both motor and dynamo, is a part of the program which follows whe na Chevrolet car is lowered on an eelvator and rolled into the cold room. By means of the dynamometer it is possible to furnish a road torque for the car, when its rear wheels are placed against a set of steel rollers set in the concrete floors of the room. The torque can be made to parallel the resistance the car would encounter when driven outdoors on a highway in the same temperature. In other words, the car can be made to haul its load in the cold room. To add to the severity of the test, a blast of air is directed against the radiator, to simulate the wind resistance which the car would have to conquer traveling in the open.

It is no easy road that a Chevrolet car travels when it is being tested out in subzero weather by earnest but unfeeling General Motors engineers. Even though it remains inside of four concrete walls for hours, when the test is completed the car knows that it has "been somewhere."

Experiments in the cold room can be made singly—and are—with any unit of the car—the manifold, the universal point, the action of the rear axle in low temperature, the performance of the fan, the starter, the carburetor and so on. Likewise, the engineers are able to make a detailed study of how the motor itself reacts to the frigid atmosphere, and what effect 45 degrees below zero has on the lubricants and on the gasoline that are in the machine. Or, if they wish, the engineers can make a blanket test of the car as a whole under the same circumstances. Any car, in order to meet a thorough test must remain in the cold room for a period of five days.

The "cast of characters" in the cold room consists of capable engineers garbed in aviators' suits, even to helmets, patterned after the costumes worn by round-the-world flyers, as the temperatures in which their work is done is on a par with the bitter cold which our flyers are made to undergo at an altitude of 10,000 or 20,000 feet. Passers-by in the busy and more or less congested area of Detroit, where the General Motors laboratories are located, are more or less puzzled on a hot summer's day, when they see these heavily clothed young men standing about taking the sun-bath treatment. The engineers are merely enjoying a respite from extreme cold, in order to get warm after having worker in "weather" that would do credit to a first-class January blizzard in our northern climes.

Chevrolet engineers are constantly engaged in experiments similar to the one outlined. Not all of these, however, are conducted in the laboratory. General Motors proving ground is used summer and winter for test purposes, so that the car will be as nearly a perfect product as automotive science can produce.

De Soto Sixes Set Stock Speed Marks

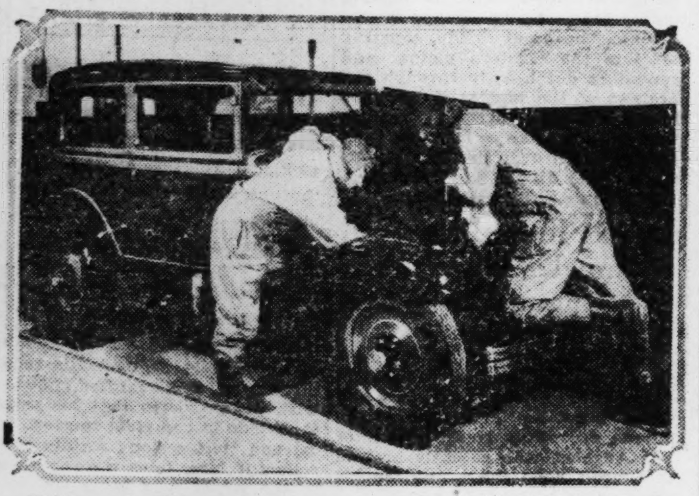
The story of how speed and endurance records are being broken by De Soto sixes throughout the world is being told in letters from drivers and owners to officials of the De Soto Motor Corporation at Detroit, Mich.

During the past few months many letters have been received, not only from America, but from many foreign countries, praising De Soto dependability and stamina —through city traffic, over country highways and on the speedways.

In a 100-mile "free-for-all" stock car race June 9 over the dirt oval at Wichita Falls, Tex., a De Soto six roadster won first place. The same car won first place and set a new record for the Bellaire track at Houston in a 15-mile race May 7. Five days later this roadster set a new record for stock models on a dirt track.

News was received from the East, too, of another De Soto roadster—a car that already had been driven more than 10,000 miles —breaking all previous marks on the Charter Oak half-mile dirt track there.

Chevrolet's Reaction to Cold Tested



Engineers in flying suits are shown at work in the "cold room" of the General Motors research laboratories in Detroit. Temperatures can be lowered at will to 45 and 50 degrees below zero.

Colorado Tour To Estes Park And Mesa Verde

party plunged through the railing, hurtling several correspondents to their deaths. But average, careful driving makes a mock of these climbs and descents.

Estes Park, which annually draws more visitors that many other national parks combined, including Yellowstone, is a matter of 90 miles from Denver, through which the road picks its way warily, will not easily be forgotten.

In the park are facilities for many sports, the principal ones being horseback riding and mountain climbing. One does not have to climb all the way up Long's Peak to get an idea of the grandeur of that rocky monument.

From Ester Park, the Fall River road leads over two high passes to Grand Lake, highest yatching waters in the world, where each year sportsmen vie for Sir Thomas Lipton trophy. Grand Lake offers everything that Minnesota or Wisconsin do, with the mountains thrown in to upset the shores of the lake and many Easterners as well.

One St. Louis broker, widely known for his interest in aeronautics, has a large ranch near Granby, where he spends much of the summer with parties of friends.

From Grand Lake, it is not far to Steamboat Springs on the west or the Moffat Tunnel, built through the heart of towering James Peak, to the East.

The Sunday supplements were full of stories about the tunnel when it was bored through. Suffice it to say that an inspection will produce more thrills than some persons get all their lives.

Roads lead north, south and west from Steamboat Springs. One may either go on down the Western Slope toward Leadville, pioneer mining camp which, despite the efforts of the revenue agents, is still wide open, and, ultimately Glenwood Springs, at one end of the Royal Gorge. Glenwood's swimming pool is favorably known all over the West. The town offers many inducements for prolonged stays.

One may return to Denver by way of Colorado Springs, which has gone into the tourist business in a highly, specially serious manner. A trip up Pike's Peak, particularly for the sunrise, gives a marvelous vista of the surrounding country.

For those who have the time to dally, the San Juan Basin, the "land of the golden sunset," should be visited. A trip through Mesa Verde National Park is also interesting from an educational standpoint. In these ancient villages and homes, there once dwelt a race that now is veiled with mystery. Traces of the cliff dwellers are still found each year, a quaintly fashioned basket or bit of pottery, or an arrow head.

Indians, Indian lore and Indian legends are a part of the San Juan Basin. Three tribes live there now —the Navajoes, Utes and Apaches. The most interesting, the Navajoes, are a race of nomads, and travel about, as much as possible in these days of reservations, with their tepees and hogans, weaving their rugs and blankets, herding their cattle and sheep and performing their religious and ceremonial rites just as they did centuries ago.

The history of the early mining camps is one of fabulous strikes of gold and silver, followed by stampedes of gold-crazed men and women who formed towns overnight.

In 1776, Padre Francisco Escalante passed through the basin seeking a route from Santa Fe to the coast of Upper California. He gave to the rivers the musical Spanish names they now bear—the Dolores, Los Pinos, Rio de Los Animas Perdidas (River of Lost Souls), La Plata, Mancos and Piedras. These rivers and their tributaries form the 1500 miles of fishing waters in the Basin.

The "million-dollar highway" from Ouray to Durango, in Southwestern Colorado, is undoubtedly the most picturesque mountain highway in the Rockies. The mountains through which the road stretches are fittingly called the American Alps.

We could go on indefinitely singing the praises of Colorado, but after all there is but one satisfactory way of learning about it, and that is to come up to cool Colorado.

Hot weather creates thirst. The motorist, especially on the long drive, should realize this is just as true of the car as of himself, particularly of the radiator and the battery.

Innovations Keep Buyers Guessing On New Models

eral sponsors and did not instigate trends. The year passed without any other manufacturer adopting the twin-spark plan of one popular car and without the narrow radiator of another being imitated.

The Teutonic lines of another popular car offered last summer found no manufacturers interested in picking up the style while a synchronized method of shifting gears was not adopted by other makes. In the light of these facts it might be poor prophecy to believe that the offering of any unique feature this summer will constitute a landslide in the direction of that particular design.

Eight-cylinder motors are increasing in popularity but the prospective buyer of a 1930 model will do better to consider the improvements that go with the multicylinder type of engine. New features in manifolding, the adoption of automatic choking and improved fuel feed, for instance, are of greater significance than the mere adoption of two more cylinders if a car has been a six previously.

If a motorist wants to read the future in the light of the earliest of the new models he can do this best by observing the relationship between various features. If several straight eights are offered with four-speed transmissions, for instance, it will mean that the normally greater cost of operating and servicing additional cylinders is being offset by the economy of higher gearing and a wider selection of gear combination.

Those who buy their new cars in the summer or fall in order to have the very latest are cautioned against taking the introduction of any one model too seriously. In some cases one particular feature of design is seized upon to stimulate interest because of the belief that a demand exists for it in the popular mind.

Susquehanna Trail Traverses Three Eastern States

ington is a fitting end to the tour.

Akin to the Susquehanna Trail is a rich and colorful history. In Southern New York and North-central Pennsylvania the tourist will be carried through the heart of the old Indian land and he will see from the road markers of bloody massacres and forts of the early settlers.

At Gettysburg guides will point out such places of interest as the highwater mark of the rebellion, the site of Pickett's charge, and the place where Lincoln delivered his immortal address.

In the sanctified Gettysburg area there is something impassive. It heralds the work of master craftsmen, workers in bronze, iron, steel, and stone, and their artistry is so displayed in such quantity as to command immediate attention.

Washington also has a host of points of historical interest. The capitol grounds, White House, Governmental buildings, Washington's monument, as well as Mt. Vernon, Arlington and Annapolis, near by, hold much of interest for the thoughtful tourist.

St. Louis motorists interested in the Susquehanna Trail and in knowing more about it may write to the Williamsport Chamber of Commerce which has prepared an illustrated booklet containing a description of points of interest along the way as well as a two-page map and correct routes.

High Speed Cuts Down Tire Mileage

Few motorists realize the part that speed plays in tire mileage, according to J. M. Vitt, manager of the Economy Tire Service Co., 2749 Olive street, Fisk dealer, who recently received reports of a series of tests conducted under actual road conditions to determine the relationship between tire life and speedometer readings.

For comparative purposes, two sets of tires were run to destruction at average speeds, respectively, of 35 and 50 miles an hour. The tires run at 35 miles an hour lasted twice as long as the others.

"Average speeds on the open roads have been increased perhaps 10 or 15 miles an hour in the last three years," Vitt stated. "Tires nowadays wear as long as they do because the manufacturers are building better tires."

Open Cars Gaining In Popularity, Say Oakland Officials

The open phaeton, once the most common type of car on the road, today has assumed the artistocratic position formerly held by the closed automobile according to executives of the Oakland Motor Car Co.

Not so many years ago, only the well-to-do were able to purchase the closed models. Due to the limited production of this type, its cost far exceeded that of the open models. Naturally the latter greatly outnumbered the former. And the passage of a closed car on the road invariably caused envious comment and a curious turning of heads.

Price was of course the principal factor in determining the original popularity of the phaeton and the roadster. But as new production methods and greater factory efficiency were introduced into body building, the cost of the closed cars was brought down to a level that opened a wider market. Appreciation of the greater utility of the closed models brought a steady increase in demand until sales volume exceeded that of the open cars.

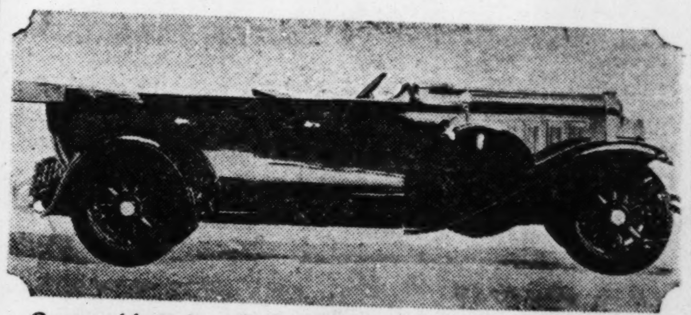
Now the tables are turned. The phaeton attracts the same envious attention formerly given to the closed bodies. Today the open car demand comes from three sources. First is the hardy open car enthusiast who always has driven an open car in all seasons and who always will. Second is the youthful motorist to whom the freedom of the open model makes an appeal. And third is the two or three-car owner who desires an open model for motoring to the country club and for summer touring.

A similar evolution is occurring overseas, it is declared by C. C. Thompson, export manager of Oakland.

Licenses Remembered.

A novel way of numbering license plates so they can be more easily remembered is the suggestion of E. F. R. Lent of New York City. He believes that if common nouns combined with small figures are used—such as "Cow-218", or "Boy-408"—the plate number will be more firmly impressed.

Oakland Attains New Distinction



Open models, such as this Oakland "All-American" six sport phaeton, are now regarded as the aristocrats of the road.

Auburn Opposes Radical Changes In Body Styles

AUBURN, Ind., July 27.—Radical changes in the lines of automobiles are being avoided by manufacturers, in the opinion of R. H. Faulkner, vice president of Auburn.

The chief reason for this, according to Faulkner, is that the public has demanded security in its investment and frowns on any attempt to obsolete models by unusual changes in lines or general design.

At one time, Faulkner said, many manufacturers were of the opinion that in order to sell their new models they must be totally different in appearance from the previous ones. The bringing out of these radical new models obsoleted the old ones and the purchaser of a last year's car suffered a tremendous loss by the depreciation of value of his old car.

The success of Auburn's policy of a standard design and the avoidance of radical changes at any one time is an outstanding example of the public's response. Since the adoption of this policy Auburn's sales, for instance, have increased more than 700 per cent and its acceptance is the greatest the company has ever known.

In 1925 Auburn adopted its general lines. Since that time there has been constant refinements, both mechanically and in appearance, but at no time have the changes been radical. Consequently, Faulkner pointed out, the models built in any one year have not been obsoleted the following year and the owner of one of these cars has been protected.

Faulkner called attention to the fact that many of the advancements offered by Auburn in 1925 are just now being adopted by some manufacturers and that the general lines of the 1925 car compare very favorably with those of 1929.

Replace Burned Bulbs.

Now that the dash light no longer is controlled by an independent switch on a majority of new cars, the motorist cannot drive without it if he would. If, however, he does not replace a burned out bulb he is left in the dark as to what the instruments may be showing in the way of possible trouble. Good car care condemns failure to replace such a bulk at the earliest opportunity.

"THE BEST MOTOR OIL IN THE WORLD"

Is this an extravagant claim or a plain statement of fact?

WE have long hesitated to say that we believe Pennzoil to be the finest and most economical lubricating oil you can buy. Yet what else is there to say? Consider these facts:

(1) Pennsylvania fields are universally accepted as the source of the best crude for the manufacture of the finest lubricating oil; (2) Pennzoil is refined from Pennsylvania crude of supreme quality—and nothing else; (3) It is made by the world's largest refiners of pure Pennsylvania oil; the refining methods employed being the most advanced in existence—the famous Pennzoil process; (4) Pennzoil lasts twice as long as ordinary oils—is more economical regardless of price.

We would not for a moment imply that there are not good Pennsylvania oils other than Pennzoil. Our statement is simply a guide to the motorist who wants to be certain of obtaining highest quality Pennsylvania oil.

Pennzoil is sold from Maine to California. Look for the Pennzoil sign. The man that displays it believes in quality merchandise. He is a good man to deal with.

Filling Station For Airplanes Started Here

Storage for Ships, Bunks for Transient Pilots Provided.

The Robertson Airplane Service Co., owned and operated at Lambert-St. Louis Field by Frank H. Robertson, is a forerunner of the future aircraft filling station.

Robertson, who with his brother, Maj. William B. Robertson, formed the first active commercial flying concern here, leased a double hangar with an area of 132 by 120 feet from the city and spent $50,000 reconstructing the building. His plan is to offer service to transient planes chiefly, providing storage space, gasoline and oil, minor repair facilities and conveniences for pilots. The hangar offers space for 28 planes, the overnight storage charge being $2. The building is steam-heated. Planes are serviced with gas and oil from a tank truck and a wide concrete apron affords ready access from hangar to flying field.

In addition to providing refueling, storage and repair service for airplanes, the Robertson company is prepared to offer pilots a shower, a bunk for the night or a ride into town. One section of the hangar has been equipped with showers, lavatories and sleeping quarters. Ford sedans will be rented to pilots wishing to go into town on a "drive-it-yourself" plan. The service was started June 10 and at present the concern is open for business 12 hours daily. As the business increases a 24-hour service schedule will be established.

Believing that his present hangar will not meet the demand, Robertson has arranged to take over the two National Guard hangars, which will be abandoned by the State when new quarters for the Thirty-fifth Division Air Unit, authorized under the municipal airport bond issue, are erected. He also has obtained a site at the field for a fourth hangar and a two-story office building, which he will erect. In the event the local venture is successful he will install similar service stations at other municipal airports.

Large Savings Are Effected at Plants By Ford Motor Co.

Enormous savings are made at the plants of the Ford Motor Co. of materials that without careful management might go largely to waste.

The sale of scrap of all kinds netted the company $3,573,877.60 during 1928. That figure represents only the scrap that was sold; vast quantities in addition were salvaged and converted back into use by the company. This kind of saving it is pointed out, is one of the important reasons why the Ford automobile may be sold at its low price.

Next to the sale of coke, the largest single item in revenue-producing by-products is scrap metal. Daily an average of 28 freight cars pull out of the plants loaded with metal shavings and trimmings—about 900 tons a day.

Orders for Parts Prove Stamina Of Dodge Cars

Dependable operation of Dodge Brothers cars after 12 years and more of service is reflected by the activity of the company's service parts plant where orders are received for parts on 1914-15 models. Usually, the parts are ordered for an engine still driving a car—sometimes the power plant has been removed for a stationary engine, but every mail brings in orders indicating that except for the desired replacement these ancient sturdy motors are giving satisfactory performance.

"Dodge Brothers Corporation has always been proud of its worldwide dealer and service organization," said C. W. Matheson, general sales manager. "Back of this distributing organization is the factory service parts division that stands ready to supply replacements for nearly every Dodge car, regardless of age or model. It is this type of service, backed by the manufacturer's reputation for dependability that insures satisfied owners of motor cars."

Officials in charge of the eight-story service parts plant of Dodge Brothers estimate that more than half the models built in 1915 and 1916 are still running. Orders are received nearly every day for minor parts, used in these early Dodge cars. Every part has a number so orders can be promptly and accurately filled.

To insure that no Dodge owner will have an orphan car in any sense, Dodge Brothers guarantee parts service for 10 years back, and many replacements can still be supplied on the first Dodge models. The characteristic ruggedness of Dodge cars has made this long service necessary. More than 25,000 separate parts are kept in stock, and to make sure of complete service, the service parts plant maintains a miniature factory where odd parts not on hand can be machined or built. Even cushions that match the upholstery of cars of years ago can be supplied. Rarely does an order balk this small factory specializing in parts long out of production.

Snake As Watchdog.

A seven-foot black snake is the best "watch dog" to keep thieves away, in the opinion of Howard Sides of Farmington, Mo., who uses the snake for that purpose. The reptile lives in Sides' automobile and guards it against thieves.

Vacationists Find Nash an Ideal Car for Outings

KENOSHA, Wis., July 27.—While the biggest vacation touring movement in automobile history urged over national highways this week, officials of the Nash Motors Co. received reports from every section of the country which indicate that, in the new "400" Nash models, motorists have found a car that overcomes any and all driving conditions and whose utility is unhampered by the old-time problems of changing temperatures, altitudes and roads.

Assurances of this versatility lie in official registration lists, which show an unusual equalization of Nash 400 sales throughout the United States during the last five months. The national maps in which the motor tourist sees endless trails through the prairies, woods and mountains of his chosen route, picture another vital Nash achievement when spread before experts of the sales department and shaded to reveal the registration percentage ratio of new Nash cars.

Beginning with the Pacific states they show a heavy block of shaded territory which covers California and the far Western states, where large counties and vast distances in sparsely settled country makes automobile merchandising difficult and where cars are called upon to meet the hardest kind of driving tests. This shading extends to and through the great divide, tapering off into the Western plains and spreading out heavily through the prairies of the Middle West. The heavy shading covers Wisconsin and Illinois like a blanket and sweeps south over the rich Mississippi Valley all the way from Itaska in the north to the delta.

Drives From Los Angeles to Detroit Chained to Wheel

From Los Angeles to Detroit, chained to the steering wheel of a Plymouth roadster, in 86 hours and seven minutes driving time, is the unique record of Harry Smith of Los Angeles, who recently arrived in Detroit none the worse for his grueling grind of 2735 miles.

The entire trip was accomplished without a mishap, and is claimed as a record between the two cities for cars in the Plymouth's class. The average speed was better than 32 miles an hour. Exceptional gasoline economy was recorded, only 131 gallons being used, averaging nearly 21 miles to the gallon. Just six quarts of oil were required.

Bedridden Woman Selects Pontiac On Doctor's Order

An invalid woman, bedridden for six years by a spinal ailment which renders the nervous system sensitive to the slightest shock, now is seeking relaxation and health through daily rides in a Pontiac big six.

She is Mrs. Elmer W. Loos of 501 North Twenty-second street, Murphysboro, Ill., whose physician declared that her health might be improved by the mental stimulus of automobile riding. His recommendation was qualified, however, with the provision that his patient must ride in complete comfort. He warned that serious results would follow if Mrs. Loos were subjected to the jar of road irregularities or even the vibration of an unbalanced engine.

Mrs. Loos and her husband then let it be known that they were in the market for a low-priced automobile embodying the physician's specifications. They proved probably the most difficult 'prospects' in the automotive history of Murphysboro. Many salesmen representing many automobiles called at the Loos home. But among al the the demonstrators the P with its long springs and L hydraulic shock absorbers, its deep-cushioned its harmonically balanced proved best suited to Mrs. Loo usual needs.

CONSIDER THE DELIVERED PRICE
Consider the delivered price as well as the list price when comparing automobile values . . . Viking delivered prices include only reasonable charges for delivery and financing.

In addition to the outstanding advantages of ninety-degree V-type eight-cylinder performance, the new Viking offers distinguished style and luxurious riding qualities.

Its distinctive smartness has been achieved through tailored lines and beautiful proportions. Low-swung and graceful, with sweeping full-crown fenders, attractive hood, and handsome body contours, the Viking is at once fleet in appearance and dignified in character.

Then there is the matter of environment. The niceties of Viking interior decoration make you feel as much at home as you would in your own living room. The upholstery materials are rich in quality and pleasing in shade and pattern. Hardware and all interior appointments have been selected with the utmost care.

The balanced weight, long wheelbase, and low center of gravity of the Viking chassis result in marvelous roadability. Four Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers smooth out all road irregularities.

Contributing still further to this restful riding comfort are the smoothness, quietness, and perfection of performance of the ninety-degree V-type eight-cylinder engine. It develops 81 horsepower in an even, effortless flow. It delivers greater speed than the average motorist requires. And its response to the throttle is remarkable, both in getaway from a standing start and in acceleration at the higher speeds.

The Viking engine is exceptionally simple, rigid, compact, and accessible. The horizontal valve mechanism is entirely new in design and is more accessible than in the conventional automobile engine. Fuel distribution through a down-draft manifolding system contributes materially to the brilliance of Viking performance. Thermostatically-controlled radiator shutters are standard equipment.

OLDSMOBILE SIX
—the Fine Car of Low Price—continues to win ever greater success throughout the nation. Companion car to the new Viking Eight, and, equally outstanding in engineering and value at its price, it offers a wide choice of body styles and equipment combinations, ranging from $875 up, f. o. b. factory, Lansing, Mich.

Don't fail to come and see and examine the new Viking soon. When you are familiar with all its details—when you have enjoyed its brilliant V-eight performance—when you have matched it against other cars in its field—you will pronounce it a great car, and the outstanding automobile value to be had at medium price.

Aviation May Seek Portion of Broadcast Band

Listeners Face Possibility of Curtailment of Program Service.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Commercial aviation has collided with an unforeseen obstacle in its ambitious plan to establish plane to ground telephone service by radio on a national basis.

Preliminary experiments with the short wave channels reserved for the use of air transportation have disclosed that these frequencies will not carry an appreciable distance over mountainous areas and in some regions are useless. Already there is discussion about trading these channels for others better adapted for plane to ground telephone service. There is a possibility of aviation trying to get part of the band of channels reserved for broadcasting.

Federal Radio Commissioner William D. L. Starbuck recently called a formal conference of representatives of the governmental agencies aligned with radio in aviation and of the commercial air transport companies. The conference was to establish definite policies for aeronautical radio facilities and provide a plan to meet present conditions and be sufficiently flexible to expand with the development of air transportation. But when air transportation representatives reported their difficulties in employing the present facilities, the conference ignored its original objective and began considering the primary matter of wavelengths.

Dependent on Radio.

Since then radio-aviation experts have been conferring about the situation. On Aug. 7 a second conference will be held, but not to allocate permanently the channels set aside for aviation. A plan for further experiments with present facilities will be evolved, to determine whether certain channels may be used satisfactorily for communication in particular areas. The transport companies will be made the judges and if they ascertain that many of the high frequency channels are of no value, the Federal authorities will try to do something about it.

It was emphasized that aeronautics, like maritime services, are dependent upon radio for their communications and, by international consent, must be given preference in assignments of wave lengths.

Would Use Broadcast Waves.

Consequently, it was agreed that if aviation cannot get along with the facilities reserved for it, then the channels that are adapted for plane to ground service, should be exchanged for them, regardless of what other classes of radio may be using latter channels.

It is conceded that the broadcast band is best suited for plane to ground telephonic communication. These channels carry signals for a goodly distance with minimum power. Hence they do not require particularly heavy transmitting equipment, a factor that is all important in aviation since a plane must carry as little excess weight as possible.

Maj. William R. Blair, radio expert for the Army, told the conference that if aviation needed some channels in the broadcast band, it should have them. This view was concurred in by William D. Terrell, chief of the radio division of the Commerce Department and "czar" of radio before the Federal Radio Commission came into being. It was said that perhaps a few channels at each end of the broadcast band might be transferred for use by aviation. There was no further consideration of this, however, in view of the agreement that further experiments should be conducted with the existing aviation set-up.

SIGNED BY NBC

Amos 'n Andy, who have been signed for a series of nightly broadcasts over an NBC chain, beginning Aug. 19. Starting with WGN, then shifting to WMAI and several Mid-West stations, they will soon be heard on a coast-to-coast network. Amos (Freeman F. Gosden) is pictured at the top, while below is Andy (Charles J. Correll).

Bonfire of Old Radio Receivers Saturday Night

Movies to Be Made of Ceremonies in Forest Park Evening of Aug. 3.

A large number of antiquated receivers have been collected by members of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association for the bonfire of old sets scheduled for 8:30 o'clock next Saturday night in Forest Park.

A feature of the ceremonies just before the bonfire will be a demonstration of an old type regenerative set and a modern receiver. The object will be to show the public just why and how the old receivers interfere with reception of programs for the operator's neighbors, often at a considerable distance.

There will be brief talks by men prominent in the local radio industry on the new sets and the great advancement in the art of building receivers to receive and reproduce satisfactorily the splendid programs now being broadcast all over the country.

The bonfire is to be started by Will Lindhorst, a former aid of Thurston the magician, with a trick of magic without using a match. Moving pictures are to be taken of the bonfire and scenes preceding it.

The squealing or oscillating set of the earlier days of broadcast reception continues on the job.

A clip across the dial in almost any thickly populated listening area, and some with the fans not so numerous, will bring to the ear the "twet-tweet" or the "g-r-r-r" of a set, either regenerative or one with an improperly balanced tuned radio frequency amplifier.

Such receivers act as small transmitters, and the energy they put into the air mixes with that of the broadcast station and produces a heterodyne that records itself as a whistle of varying pitch, in nearby receivers, tuned to the particular station.

There is no question that the latest broadcast receivers have overcome this evil which was so widespread only a few years ago. Practically all sets within the last three years or so have been designed to prevent oscillation, if any is generated in the receiver, from reaching the antenna. It is only the older sets, that include also some models of home constructed superheterodynes, that create these disturbances.

The earlier outfits gradually are passing to the receiver graveyard and each year sees fewer of them in use. Then, too, many are operated on local stations nowadays, as they have passed their time as distance getters, due largely to the multiplicity of stations.

But those that remain can create a lot of havoc in an evening's entertainment.

Program From Sky on KSTP.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 27.—A comprehensive series of programs from the sky is planned by KSTP this fall, following successful use of its short wave transmitter in several broadcasts of aviation events.

Program to Test Preference of Public Planned

Still another radio manufacturer is to assist in erecting the broadcasting structure. On Aug. 23 a new Friday night program, sponsored by the Bremer-Tully Manufacturing Co. of Chicago, is to go on the air weekly over the Columbia chain.

The program is to be designed to test the preferences of the listening public. It will be supervised by the Institute of Radio Research, which is a non-profit organization under auspices of the sponsoring radio manufacturer.

In an address delivered in Chicago, Richard E. Smiley, vice president of the Bremer-Tully Co. and director of the institute, said that "the radio public is to be asked to vote on the type of broadcast that pleases and serves it most. It is our purpose to put on the air a composite program mirroring everything that has been done in radio entertainment to date. Upon the public's choice depends the action of the institute's board of governors in recommending changes in broadcasting.

"The radio industry is morally obligated to give the public what it wants. Our survey will determine what Farmer Jones' wife likes as well as what Mrs. Vere de Vere wants, whether opera rates higher than dance music or jazz and whether the typical American brand of humor is 'custard pie' as reported."

Around the Samovar, at 8:30 p. m.: Zinaida Nicolina, the Russian soprano, will sing two romantic melodies. The first is "When Roses Bloom." It is a warning to all young people to grasp life and to pick the roses before they fade. Mme. Nicolina's second solo is "Under the Charm of Your Caresses," a love poem of great beauty.

Two dances will be played by Peter Biljo and his Balalaika orchestra, "In the Field," and "Mosquito." A violin solo will be "Time Will Change" and a baritone solo, "Give Me Your Hand, My Friend."

KMOX Notes

The Bohemian Concert Orchestra will give a concert as the fifth of a series of Saturday night international programs being given over KMOX. They will be on the air from 7 to 7:30 next Saturday evening.

Bertha Black Bassford, soprano of the Kingshighway Presbyterian Church, will sing over KMOX at 11:15 next Saturday morning. Miss Bassford has sung as principal soprano in the choirs of St. James Episcopal Church and Highland Park Church in Chicago and United Hebrew Temple and Second Baptist Church in St. Louis.

Mervin P. Bickley, in another of his weekly talks on aviation over KMOX, will explain, at 5:20 p. m. Tuesday the operation of safety devices, including radio, radio beacons and the televox, a siren, which, when sounded above a landing field automatically turns on the flood lights.

Edgar Shelton, a St. Louis pianist, who recently returned from an European tour, in which he gave a recital in London, one in Paris and two in Berlin, will play over KMOX from 10:30 to 11 o'clock Wednesday night. Shelton has been soloist with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra.

Miss Bobbie Rolling "blues singer", who has sung over WDSU and WSMB, New Orleans; KPRC, Houston, and KFUL, Galveston, has joined the staff of KMOX, and will sing at intervals daily, beginning Monday.

Miss Georgia Erwin of Granite City, a "blues singer" on the East Side, will sing over KMOX next Friday morning at 11:45.

David Caughlan of East St. Louis, tenor soloist with the St. Louis Men Singers, who has appeared before the Wednesday and Schubert clubs, will sing over KMOX every Tuesday morning at 9:45 and Friday evening at 5:30 o'clock. His first broadcast will be next Tuesday morning.

Another Winner Of Audition in Concert on KSD

continued to sing and to study. She read of the 1927 National Radio Audition of the Atwater Kent Foundation in an Italian newspaper, and entered as a local contestant in San Francisco. She won the local, state and district competitions easily. In Washington she attracted the attention of Mrs. Coolidge when on a visit to the White House with the other Audition finalists, and Mrs. Coolidge wrote to a New York friend about her. In the 1927 National Finals, the judges had difficulty deciding the first, second and third places in the competition and Miss da Prato was awarded second place.

Since then she has studied in New York. Reinald Werrenrath, the baritone, says she not only has an exceptionally fine lyric soprano voice, but also possesses the singing mind.

Hear this Champion perform

Distance-getting ability in a radio is like speed in a car. You may not always want it, but you want to know it's there when you do.

And you certainly have it in the new Stewart-Warner—"The Set with the Punch." This new champion has more go-getting power than you ever dreamed possible. Not only to bring in distant stations, but to develop the big, rich, satisfying volume of local reception.

Wherever you go, dealers and public alike call this new Stewart-Warner "The Set with the Punch."—the punch that has knocked out all previous standards of radio performance—the punch that gives distance, selectivity, volume and life-like tone never before available in a radio set.

All of this is made possible by the famous Stewart-Warner balanced bridge circuit, the last word in tube assembly, the wonderful new electro-dynamic reproducer and other super refinements—even to 22-carat gold plated connections throughout.

Go to the Stewart-Warner dealer and ask him to demonstrate this beautiful all-round champion radio. A small initial payment puts it in your home.

Wave Length Fight in Indiana Begun by WFBM

Another wave length fight impends as a result of WFBM, Indianapolis, Ind., applying for a 50,000 watt construction permit. This station, which is owned and operated by the Indianapolis Light & Power Co., now operates with 1000 watts power. It also seeks a change in wave length from 1230 kc., which it now shares with WSBT, South Bend, Ind., and stations in San Francisco and Boston, to 1160 kc., which is a cleared channel now shared by WWVA, Wheeling, W. Va., and WOWO, Fort Wayne, Ind.

While KDKA is licensed to use only 50,000 watts when it moves its transmitter from East Pittsburg, Pa., to a point 22 miles northeast of Pittsburg, a 100,000 watt tube, 7 feet high, is to be installed.

Radio Trade Notes

Some 75 Atwater Kent dealers from St. Louis and vicinity were scheduled to depart last night for a trip to Philadelphia, Pa., to inspect the new 16-acre addition to the Atwater Kent plant which gives the factory a total floor space of more than 32 acres. They made the trip as guests of the Brown & Hall Supply Co., distributer, and the party was led by Norman S. Brown, president, and Fred A. Wiebe, vice-president and general manager, of that firm. They were to visit Washington enroute and go to Atlantic City after the inspection at Philadelphia. The dealers making the tour were winners in a sales contest.

The Atwater Kent factory is the largest devoted to making receivers in the world. It is in high production of the new Atwater AC screen grid sets. So large is this factory, and so completely is it equipped for speed in manufacturing and assembling, that it can turn out more than 12,000 receivers a day.

In addition to the Sunday night Atwater Kent concerts and the mid-week popular broadcasts, the local dealers are beginning a daily 15-minute broadcast over a St. Louis station.

A new Bosch receiver that is arousing interest in the industry is a walnut cabinet style type with swell front side panels and sliding doors. The chassis has three AC screen grid R. F. stages with power detector and push pull amplification.

A "Department of Education" is something new to radio that has been established by the Grigsby-Grunow Co., Chicago. Its object is to acquaint educators with the many possible applications of radio to education and to provide a wide variety of installations. Its director is Ray S. Erlandson, for several years assistant secretary of the National Education Association and recently president of the Associated Exhibitors of N. E. A.

"We recognize that it is just as important to educate the children to recognize quality in radio, so that the music that comes to them shall be a faithful reproduction of the original, as it is to educate them in the value of good food or in the care of their teeth," Erlandson says. "The possibilities of radio have not been fully realized, either for entertainment or as an education instrument."

The new Colin B. Kennedy receivers are being made in both AC screen grid and heater tube chassis. Both chassis use the Mershon filter condenser in the power units. Tubes especially designed to work at highest efficiency in Kennedy sets are now available.

Kennedy himself was in St. Louis the past week on his return from the Pacific Coast to the Studebaker plant at South Bend, Ind., where Kennedy sets are made. He was accompanied by Jim de Pree, the old Michigan U. fullback, who now is general sales manager of the Bush & Lane Piano Co., which is marketing receivers as well as radio cabinets.

Production is now under way in the Steinite Radio Co.'s new 10-acre plant at Fort Wayne, Ind. The formal opening of the factory will take place in August.

"Two thousand sets per day as a minimum is the goal we have set when in full production," says J. Abelson, president of the Steinite Co. "The administrative and executive offices of the company have been moved to Fort Wayne, where all the cabinets and parts for Steinite sets will be made and assembled. A branch executive office will be maintained in Chicago.

"The Auburn factory is to be kept in operation making cabinets, and the Atchison plant will make DC sets only."

Ninety Crosley dealers enrolled in a two-day radio school held recently by the Geller, Ward & Hasner Hardware Co., distributer, and attended classes. General radio principles were taught as well as repairing and servicing of sets. The firm furnished equipment, text books and the courses were free. T. J. Brown of the Geller, Ward & Hasner Co., was instructor in charge. He also wrote the service manuel that was used in the school. This manuel will be ready for Crosley dealers soon.

War Poem Set to Music for Radio

Dana Merriman, of the NBC musical staff, is completing a musical setting for the war poem, "In Flanders Field," which will be presented during the broadcast, "Face to Face with President Wilson," over KSD, Aug. 18.

"In Flanders Fields" was written by Lieutenant-Colonel John MacRae of the Canadian Expeditionary Force in the World War.

New Columbia Chain Series.

Music of Southern Italy will be heard over stations of the Columbia System when the Sorrento Serenaders make their debut on Saturday night, Aug. 3.

ASK the radio expert—the custom builder—the service men, and old-time radio fans—WHICH screen-grid set to buy.

—unanimously they'll tell you only one manufacturer has built many thousands of screen-grid sets in the past two years—

—only one screen-grid radio requires no aerial or loop, even for distance reception—you just plug it in like a floor lamp—

—only one has features like the Overtone Switch, 4 screen-grid tubes in its 8-tube chassis—Matched-Impedance dynamic speaker—

—and only one is to be had in such chastely beautiful Sheraton cabinets—which harmonize perfectly with any type of home furnishings—and at such moderate prices—

Let any SILVER RADIO dealer "plug in" a SILVER RADIO in your home for free demonstration. Take our word for it—"the greatest thrill in Radio" awaits you!

Lowboy Console of Sheraton design, built of antique finished, hand rubbed and polished American Walnut, and exemplifying the Colonial style in furniture design—one of the most beautiful periods known. 8-tube, all-electric chassis, including four screen-grid and two 245 power tubes. Matched-impedance dynamic speaker. Overtone switch controls static. Requires no aerial or loop for local or distance reception. Complete, less tubes—

The Radio that is Tested and Proved To Meet Your Local Conditions

HERE is a radio that will meet your particular local conditions as exactly as though it had been built in your own living room. To do this it must have a Selectivity such as no radio has ever before possessed.

We have tested a number of these super-selective receivers here, there and everywhere—in the best reception areas and the worst. Speaking with a confidence based on the results of this nation-wide experiment, this is what we promise you:

Suppose you want to hear a prize fight at Madison Square Garden, or the Chicago Stadium. You dial the proper station on your C. A. Earl, and you are at the ringside. The most powerful station in America may be coming in only a few dial-degrees to the left. A few dial-degrees to the right there may be a local station. But so far as you are concerned, the station broadcasting the bout is the only station on the air.

That is what we mean by the C. A. Earl's "Hair-Line" Super-Selectivity.

Let your local C. A. Earl dealer demonstrate what "Hair-Line" Super-Selectivity means in the matter of tone, clarity and distance. Let him demonstrate the set, tested and proved to meet your local conditions.

Drop us a line for the name of the nearest C. A. Earl dealer and illustrated catalog.

THIRD BAPTIST CHURCH PLANS OFFICE BUILDIN

Structure Under Discussion Would Have Stores o Grand, and Religious Portion on Washington.

COST IS FIGURED AT HALF - MILLION

Sentiment of Members I Said to Be Strongly Against Moving Away From $1,000,000 Site.

Plans for construction of a five-story building which would hav stores and offices on its Granc boulevard side, combined with a church fronting on Washington boulevard, are being discussed by a committee of the Third Baptist Church, it was learned yesterday. The proposed structure would cos about $500,000.

The church, on the northeas corner of the intersection, was damaged by fire a year ago and has been only partly rebuilt. A committee was appointed to determine its future. It is understood that sentiment among church members favors retaining the present site, which was acquired 4 years ago at a cost of $10,000 and now is valued by officers of the church at $1,000,000.

The property, in the heart of the midtown theater district, has long been looked upon as a desirable site for a large office structure, but members of the church, unable to obtain a prominent location near by on which they might rebuild, have not been interested in selling.

It is understood that serious consideration is being given to an offer made by owners of a nearby office building to lease for a long term the commercial portion of the proposed new building. Such arrangement would enable the church to pay off the indebtedness incurred in building the structure through revenues from from the lease.

ACCEPTS INSURANCE RATE CUT

Seattle Company First to Agree to State Order.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 27.—With one insurance company accepting the 10 per cent reduction in fire insurance rates, Joseph B. Thompson, State Superintendent of Insurance, today said that he expected other companies to accept the ruling of the courts that the State Insurance Department has the right to regulate rates.

The First National Insurance Co. of America, Seattle, Wash., advised Thompson yesterday that it was prepared to accept the reduction order and offered to pay excess premium collections. This is the first company to accept the ruling in the seven-year court proceedings in which 155 insurance companies have attempted to fight the order of the State Department for a 10 per cent reduction. The companies fighting the reduction order have lost in the State and Federal Supreme Courts and the Federal Court in Kansas City. The companies have offered to place $4,000,000 in the hands of the State for policy holders as a compromise settlement.

30-Foot Lead Vein Struck in Mine.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MOUNT VERNON, Mo., July 27.—A 30-foot face of lead and zinc was struck at the 150-foot level by Magnetic Mining Co. on Tri-State exploration lease in the old Stotts City field Thursday. It is estimated the assay will run 20 to 25 per cent. This is a fissure vein parallel with and of the same high grade as former strike in this field years ago, which produced ore to the value of more than $6,000,000.

Mueller Out of Danger.

By the Associated Press.

HEIDELBERG, July 27.—Chancellor Hermann Mueller, head of the German Cabinet, operated on last week for gall bladder trouble, was pronounced out of danger today. Mrs. Mueller spent a half hour at the beside of her husband and Otto Wels, social Democratic leader from Berlin, held a 10-minute conference with the Cabinet Chief.

EUGENE O'NEILL TAKES 13-YEAR LEASE ON FRENCH CHATEAU

Pre-Nuptial Agreement With His Bride Required Him to Do This.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 26. — Eugene O'Neill, who recently was married to Carlotta Monterey, the actress, is book for 13 years' residence in France. He made a short prenuptial contract with his bride and executed it before they were married, and then signed a lease for the chateau De Plessis at Saint Antoine Du Rocher, 25 miles from Tours. There he and his bride can live like grand seigniors and the dramatist can hunt a 600-acre game preserve, one of the best in France.

Friends say that Miss Monterey was rather insistent even as to details and O'Neil finally capitulated. She wanted a 13-year lease and although the owner of the estate, Countess De Bonville, did not want to give it, she finally consented.

Miss Monterey also wanted some modern improvements and the Countess agreed to the installation of a swimming pool, a roof garden and a gymnasium, although she herself was not in favor of such modern things.

AGAINST LAW TO TAKE A BATH

Brussels Enforces Regulation During Water Shortage.

By the Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, July 27.—Until further notice it is against the law for any citizen of Brussels to take a bath. City officials today strictly prohibited use of water for bathing by householders in Brussels and its suburbs when a persistent drought brought the city's water supply dangerously low.

Foreigners and wealthy Belgians were still able to manage a bath for the big hotels were temporarily exempted from the no baths regulation.

$100,000 TEXAS CO. BUILDING UNDER WAY

Garage and Warehouse to Be Completed in About Four Months.

McKelvey-Carter Co. have begun construction of a garage and warehouse for the Texas Co. in its plant on Brown avenue west of Kingshighway. The two buildings each of one story, will cost about $100,000.

The warehouse, of reinforced concrete and brick, is to be 150 feet long and 50 feet wide. The garage, of fireproof concrete construction, will be the same length and 10 feet wider. It will contain space for 24 trucks and below grade will be a boiler room to serve the whole plant. Offices of the plant will be located in the warehouse.

The new additions will be completed within about four months.

THREE-STORY APARTMENT BUILDING, 6301 DELMAR, SOLD

Bought by Margaret B. Tracy; Her Fifth Acquisition in That Vicinity.

A three-story apartment building at 6301 Delmar boulevard, University City, has been bought by Margaret B. Tracy for a consideration reported to be approximately $57,000. The property was sold by Henry R. Weisels, Inc., for the Hal-John Realty and Investment Co.

The building is opposite the Tivoli Theater and contains six five-room apartments. There is a four-car brick garage.

The new owner recently bought four other pieces of property on Delmar boulevard in University City, including the two apartment buildings immediately east of the most recent acquisition. Contracts have been awarded for the installation of seven stores on the first floors of these buildings.

LEASES BY THREE FIRMS IN DOWNTOWN SECTION

Space in the northeast section of the mezzanine floor of the Arcade Building has been leased by Isaac T. Cook Co. to Hills, Inc., a men's clothing establishment new to St. Louis. Fixtures and equipment of special design are being installed and the shop will be opened about Aug. 15 in charge of Leo Kapp.

Alterations are being made in one of the stores in the Robert E. Lee Hotel, 209 North Eighteenth street, which will be occupied early next month by the jewelry store of W. W. Peters, recently of Davenport, Ia.

The building at 1327 Washington avenue, formerly occupied by the Southwestern Shoe Co., has been rented to the Martini Mercantile Co., to supplement their present quarters in the same block.

LOAN COST ANALYSIS BY MORTGAGE BANKERS

Survey to Be Presented at Their Convention in New Orleans Oct. 29.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 27.—Bankers who deal in figures for other folks are now taking time to do some computing on their own account that may revolutionize the mortgage loan business, according to E. E. Murrey, president of the Mortgage Bankers' Association of America. Men who can split pennies in making accurate appraisals of properties up for loan, often cheat themselves in the way they figure their profits, he says.

Five hundred members of the bankers' association in all parts of the country are making elaborate surveys of what is costs to handle all types of loans and the results of this survey will be made public as a feature of the coming convention of the association to be held in New Orleans, Oct. 29 to 31.

A uniform method of cost analysis, drawn up by A. A. Zinn of Kansas City, Mo., chairman of the Association Cost Accounting Committee, makes the income tax blanks look like child's play; but the conclusions that will be brought to light through this survey, in which Zinn's method will be used as a guide, will be of immense value to this business, Murrey says.

"To make safe and refundable loans requires ability to be sure," he explains. "But to make such loans on a basis so that each loan will stand on its own feet, pay its own cost, and yield a profit, constitute a test.

"Assuming that the average cost of doing business is $100 per unit, is it good business to handle Mr. A's loan for $50 yet charge Mr. B. $200 to make up the loss on Mr. A's transaction and afford a margin of profit?

"It is the cost per unit to which we must give more consideration and when we have determined that, then will it be possible to know which operation produced the income, and which one occasioned the expenditure. And these are the things that we do not know at present but which this survey will reveal."

SHOE FIRM LEASES FLOOR

Berland, Inc., Takes Quarters at Twelfth and Washington.

The sixth floor of a building on the northwest corner of Twelfth and Washington boulevards has been leased to Barland Shoe Stores, Inc., for its office and distribution center. The floor contains 13,500 square feet.

Martin & Breitt Real Estate Co. represented both parties in the lease, which was made for the account of the Lesser-Goldman Co. The Berland Co. was started five years ago by J. B. Berland, and now operates 50 stores.

DETROIT GANGSTER SHOT TO DEATH IN STREET

Irving Shapiro Wounded Four Times; Identified by Finger Prints.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., July 27.—Irving Shapiro, 25 years old, known to police as a member of the Purple gang, was found shot to death in the street early today, apparently the victim of gangster vengeance. Residents in the vicinity told police an automobile hurried away from the spot where the man's body was found. Shapiro had been shot four times and all marks of identification stripped from him. He was identified by finger prints. His record at Police Headquarters showed 24 arrests and one conviction, the latter on charge of possessing stenchbombs.

Two possible motives were advanced by police for the slaying—Shapiro may have "squealed" in connection with the recent arrest of 12 of his fellow gangsters and conviction of four of them on charges of conspiring to violate the Federal prohibition law, or was involved in extortion and kidnaping activities and encountered some "tough customers."

WRITES 7 PAGES ON DOMESTIC WOES, THEN KILLS HIMSELF

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 27.—James Wallace Pondelicek, prominent art photographer, detailed his matrimonial unhappiness in a seven-page letter, drank a quantity of poison and shot himself in the right temple in his studio today.

In his letter, he bitterly excoriated his first wife and lamented the failure of his second marriage. He said he was unable to forget his love for his second wife. Both women had been his model.

His first wife, Mrs. Bessie Bozena Pondelicek, whose figure portrayed in photographic art studies, brought her husband fame, obtained a divorce in August, 1925.

On the day the decree was granted Pondelicek married Miss Mabel Ellis Davy, who had been named as co-respondent. The second Mrs. Pondelicek was granted a divorce on a charge of cruelty, April 24, 1929.

U. S. SEIZES BRITISH LIQUOR BOAT OFF FLORIDA COAST

By the Associated Press.

FERNANDINA, Fla., July 27.—Coast Guard officials tonight announced the capture of the 76-foot British boat Betty and Billy, laden with approximately 2500 cases of liquor, within the treaty limits of the United States about 80 miles south of Fernandina Bar. The British craft was brought here and is being held under guard, the officials said, pending decision of special agents of the Treasury Department as to its disposition.

The liquor was not molested, the officials said, and none of the three men aboard was arrested. The boat, whose home port was given as Nassau, Bahamas, was captured inside Hetzell buoy, situated just at 12-mile limite, late yesterday by a Coast Guard boat in charge of Chief Boatswain's Mate M. Anderson, it was stated.

STOCKHOLDERS SUE FOR RECEIVER FOR HOTEL FIRM

Herbert F. Hahn Alleges Owners of Hotels at Cape Girardeau and St. Charles Are Insolvent.

A stockholder's suit for a receiver for the Interstate Hotels, Inc., was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Herbert F. Hahn, an attorney, who alleges that the company is insolvent. It owns the St. Charles Hotel at St. Charles, Mo., and the Marquette Hotel at Cape Girardeau, Mo. Hahn also asks for the removal of the company's president, George T. Thompson, and its board of directors, comprising Thompson, Peter Anderson Jr., William Wurdack Jr., Philip Ziegenfus, C. L. Harrison, Claude C. Finley and William Berberich.

The petition sets forth that April 25 last Thompson and Berberich contracted to buy control of a majority of the stock of the hotel company at $60,000 and to pay for it at the rate of $5000 a month, but it is alleged they failed to meet certain payments on time and have not complied with other conditions of the contract. The board of directors, it is charged, has been diligent in forcing payment and has permitted Thompson to dominate the company to the detriment of other stockholders.

The suit mentions an indebtedness of $20,000 to a St. Louis bank, which loan was guaranteed by C. L. Harrison of Cape Girardeau. Harrison, it is alleged, has threatened to foreclose to protect his guarantee, which action would further endanger the assets of the corporation, the plaintiff avers. Hahn's attorney, Ernest A. Green, said he would ask for a preliminary order early this week. None of the defendants could be reached. All except Harrison live here.

TWO HELD AT KANKAKEE, ILL., IN LAMAR, COLO., BANK HOLDUP

Postal Authorities Question Pair After Intercepted Letter Gives Clew.

KANKAKEE, Ill., July 27.—Postal inspectors tonight were aiding Sheriff Alderman of Lamar, Colo., in quizzing two men under arrest here in connection with the robbery of the Lamar Savings Bank and the slaying of four men. The bank was robbed May 9, 1928.

The men in custody here are George de Moss, arrested at Peoria, Ill., and R. E. Fleagle, whose father and brothers have been arrested in Garden City, Kan., in connection with the robbery investigation.

They are being questioned concerning large sums of money alleged to have been deposited by the elder Fleagle and the sons at various Kansas banks.

The connection between Fleagle and De Moss which led to their arrests was a letter which postal inspectors intercepted.

LAMAR, Colo., July 27.—Capture of two suspects in Illinois in connection with robbery of the Lamar State Bank and the killing of four men last year follows the recent arrest of J. B. Fleagle, prosperous rancher of Finney County, Kansas, and two sons, whose records are being investigated.

J. B. Fleagle is in jail at Garden City. His sons, Fred and Walter, have been brought here.

TAKEOFF PLANNED TODAY IN TACOMA-TOKIO FLIGHT

Lieut. Harold Bromley Has Ship Moved to Runway; Double Guard Over Tent.

By the Associated Press.

TACOMA, Wash., July 27.—Lieut. Harold Bromley returned to Tacoma Field, from where he will start on an attempted flight to Tokio, Japan and after ordering that his ship be moved to the southwest end of the runway for fueling, went to bed tonight in a National Guard tent that had been especially prepared for him. A double armed guard was placed over the tent.

C. W. Paxson, motor expert who has pronounced Bromley's plane, The City of Tacoma, in perfect shape, declared that "Bromley will take off in the morning, if he hasn't a cross wind."

Bromley was so heavily guarded he could not be reached but the flyer let it be known through his guard that he was ready to go at a moment's notice. He previously had announced his takeoff officially for dawn Monday.

POLICE SEARCH FOR SON ASKED

Parents of Charles Burlew Jr., 29 years old, of 4848 St. Louis avenue, have asked police to search for him. He disappeared the night of July 11, shortly after coming home from Deer Street Police Station, where he had been held 20 hours.

Murgen Livesay, 33 years old, overseas war veteran, is missing from his home at 5026 Deville avenue, Webster Groves. Police were told that his left hand is crippled as the result of a grenade explosion.

CAPITALIST'S YACHT BOARDED

Detroit Customs Officers Make no Explanation of Action.

DETROIT, Mich., July 27.—The yacht Margo chartered by Louis Mendelssohn, Detroit capitalist, from Bert Masse, of Chicago, was boarded today by customs border patrol agents shortly before it was ready to put out on a cruise to Chicago from its moorings off the Detroit Yacht Club. Soon afterward several members of the yachting party left the boat with their baggage.

No explanation of the boarding was given by customs officers and members of the party aboard the yacht could not be reached. At a late hour the yacht had not cleared and customs agents were said to be still aboard. It was rumored here that members of the crew who had been discharged had reported to prohibition officers that there was liquor aboard.

IN MEMORIAM

BONUS—In loving memory of our dear mother, Martha Bonus, who departed this life three years ago July 29, 1926.
Deep in our heart lies a picture
Of a mother we laid to rest,
And in memory's frame we shall keep her,
Because she was one of the best.
Sadly missed by her
CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

BUXELL—In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Anthony H. Buxell, who died two years ago, July 27, 1927.
Sadly missed.
MRS. IDA BUXELL AND CHILDREN.

CRONIN, EDWARD J. AND DELLA B. CRONIN—In loving memory of our darling parents, departed this life 13 years ago and six years ago:
God's golden sun is shining upon our parents' graves;
The ones we loved so dearly and tried so hard to save;
And when he lost our parents
We lost our dearest friends.
We loved you both and miss you
And will until the end.
Sadly missed by DAUGHTERS, SON, SON-IN-LAW AND GRANDCHILDREN. (c)

EISMANN—In loving memory of my dear husband and our dearly devoted father, Frederick Eismann, who departed Aug. 1, 1928.
We are thinking of you today, dear father, thinking of the past.
Picturing you in memory, just as we saw you last.
You left behind some broken hearts that loved you so sincere.
That never did nor never will forget you, father dear.
WIFE, CHILDREN and all who loved him.

FLECKENSTEIN—In loving memory of my dear wife, Carrie Fleckenstein, who departed this life one year ago, July 24, 1928.
One year has passed since that sad day,
The one I loved was called away
God took her home: it was His will.
But in my heart she liveth still.
Sadly missed by
HER HUSBAND, THEO. FLECKENSTEIN.

FLYNN—In loving memory of George G. Flynn, who departed this life at 8 a. m., July 29, 1926.
Gone but not forgotten.
Sadly missed by his mother, sisters and brothers.
MRS. EMMA FLYNN AND FAMILY, 1837 O'Fallon st.

GEERS—In memory of Chris. Geers, who died one year ago, July 30.
One year has passed since that sad day
When you, dear one, was called away.
The blow was hard, the shock severe;
We never thought your death so near.
Sadly missed by his MOTHER, SISTERS, BROTHERS.

KAMMER—In sad but loving remembrance of our beloved husband and father, Fred L. Kammer, who died July 25, 1928.
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

IN MEMORIAM

HORSTMAN—In loving remembrance of Francis W. Horstman, who died July 23, 1928.
One year has passed since that sad day,
When one we loved was called away;
God took him home: it was His will:
Within our hearts he liveth still.
FAMILY.

KLUENDER—In loving memory of our dear son and brother Russell A. Kluender, who departed this life on July 30, 1928.
Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER AND SISTER.

KRILL—In loving remembrance of our darling daughter and sister, Marie Krill, who died July 29, 1928.
No stain was on her little heart,
Sin had not entered there;
And innocence slept sweetly on
That pale white brow so fair.
She was too pure for this cold earth,
Too beautiful to stay,
And so God's holy angel bore
Our darling one away.
Sadly missed by MOTHER, FATHER, SISTERS and all who loved her.

LOEWENTHAL, ARTHUR B.—In loving memory, who departed this life July 25, 1927.
Tho his life is over
In our memory he'll last forevermore.
MOTHER, FATHER AND SISTER. (c)

MUHLKE, CAROLINE—In memory of our dear mother, Caroline Muhlke who departed this life 3 years ago July 31, 1926.
Sadly missed by her DAUGHTERS, SONS AND GRANDCHILDREN.

PILLMAN—In remembrance of my dearly beloved husband, Charles E. Pillmann, who departed this life three years ago, July 31, 1926.
The rolling stream of life flows on,
But still the vacant chair
Recalls the love, the voice, the smile
Of one who has gone to rest.
Sadly missed by his wife,
MRS. FLORA R. PILLMANN.

RILEY-THERESA—In memory: who died July 25, 1927.
Peaceful be thy rest, dear mother;
It is sweet to breathe thy name;
In life we loved you dearly;
In death we do the same.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND CHILDREN. (c)

STACHEL—In loving remembrance of William Stachel, who died July 28, 1928.
One year has passed, oh, how we miss him;
Friends may think the wound is healed,
Little do they know the sorrow
That lies within our hearts concealed.
MOTHER, SISTERS AND BROTHERS. (c)

is from 25 to 35 years old, possibly older, preferably married. He has had a few years' experience, but has not yet found the line of business he is willing to make his life's work. He is, perhaps, a college graduate, but above all a man of character and stability, ambition and the energy to carry through. Such a man will make a favorable impression at the first interview and to such a man the proposition in a nationally advertised company will offer such attractions as to make him put forth his best efforts to get it. The applicant must give complete information about himself in a letter asking for an interview. Applications will be held in confidence. Box H-396, Post-Dispatch.

SALES MANAGER

A national corporation, which has been in business for a number of years, desires the services of a young, high-class, live-wire salesman. He must be between 28 and 40 years of age and have unquestionable references.

We are interested in a man of executive ability, because if he proves within a short time that he is a real go-getter, we will give him an opportunity by making him manager of one of our branch offices. That position pays upward from $6000. We will teach you our line and will give you an opportunity to prove your ability in the sales field; we do that because we cannot ask any man to teach a sales force something he hasn't done himself. If you can prove to our satisfaction that you are the man we want, you will be given a sales force of 10 or more men, a fully equipped office and working crew and a business to operate established well enough to write a hundred thousand annually without investing any of your money.

You will be required to keep your sales force up to standard at all times, and will be given such help as may be necessary from the main office. We employ a large sales force and continually promote men of proven ability. Our company is the leader in its line, in a field only 10 per cent covered.

Our product is the best that science can produce; our business is very pleasant and staple in every-day use, and it has a market all the year around.

We sell ready roofing applied to home owners on time payments. It's an easy business to learn. If you qualify you will be taken to our main office and factory in Chicago at our expense for educational purposes. We are not interested in has-beens or advance artists, but want clear-cut business men.

Read this ad again. If you measure up to our standard, then come in Monday, 9 a. m. to 2 p. m., and sell yourself to us. See Mr. Trexel at 4545 De Tonty st.

Manufacturers' Salesmen and Promoters

Every specialty salesman knows the Mills Novelty Co. Our trade mark is known throughout the world, with a Dun and Bradstreet classification similar to that of Ford Motors and the U. S. Steel Corporation. Over 40 years of business success behind us. This country is in a coin vending age which is the salesman's biggest money-making field, bar none. Our tremendous advertising and sales promotion campaign will give you an enormous volume of business in the next 18 months on our brand-new coin-operated instrument. This is a $1000 per month and up proposition. Men who have sold advertising, insurance, mechanical refrigeration, cash registers, phonographs, radios, vending machines, fountains, securities and kindred lines are attracted by my proposition. Also livewire promoters are making a killing exploiting our product under a sure-hit sales policy. Cash in on our distribution program as set for the next 18 months. I need six high-class men for this high-class connection that is permanent. Call Monte Rose, Hotel Melbourne, Monday, for interview. Interviews courteously arranged but by phone only. Out-of-town applicants, write. (c)

The Greatest of all War Stories

All Quiet on the Western Front

by

ERICH MARIA REMARQUE

At last it has been told—the true story of the war!

Not a novelist's version of war, filled with heroics, false glory and artificial glamour.

But the story of war as it really is—a simple, powerful and truthful revelation of its misery, agony and soul-shattering horror, told by a common soldier who knows all too intimately the searing facts he relates.

"All Quiet on the Western Front", was written by a German private. But it is more than the record of his tortured memories. It is the story of every soldier who was under fire, no matter what uniform he wore.

Critics and readers alike, all over Europe and America, have acclaimed this book the greatest war story ever written. You will understand why when you read it, for its power, beauty and gripping thrills make it a narrative you can never forget.

"All Quiet on the Western Front" will be published in daily installments, while it is at the peak of its popularity, exclusively in St. Louis in the Daily Magazine of the

What the Critics Have Said About ALL QUIET on the WESTERN FRONT

HARRY HANSEN in Harper's Magazine—

> "I believe it is one of the great human records of the war; the author, although describing only the German front, has risen above flags and uniforms and pictured the universal man in torment."

HERSCHEL BRICKELL in The North American Review—

> "It is by all odds the biggest and most important story of the war that has been written by anyone."

ST. JOHN ERVINE in the London Daily Express—

> "It is an immense book because of its quality. There are passages which are terribly moving."

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE—

> "A distinctive, important story. It was worth waiting ten years after the war to get the war written in perspective, truthfully, powerfully, beautifully."

Two Popular Revivals Here

"The Enchantress" Comes to the Municipal Opera Tomorrow Night, and Garden Starts Sixth Week With "Oh, Kay" This Evening—Latter Theater to Bring Roger Gray, Old-Time Local Favorite, Back—The Deflection of Miss Alice MacKenzie and Mr. Verse.

NEITHER the Municipal Opera nor the Garden Theater will present musical plays new to St. Louis this week both turning to pieces which have been seen here in the indoor theaters where they played most successfully. The Municipal goes back some distance with "The Enchantress" which opens on the Forest Park stage tomorrow night, while the Garden, starting this evening, will have a later play in "Oh, Kay." Both Charles Ruggles and Louise Brown will be in the cast of the latter offering, making their final appearances here this summer.

"The Enchantress," a Victor Herbert composition, which St. Louis saw first in 1913, will be produced for the first time on the Municipal Theater stage as the ninth offering of the current Municipal Opera season. "The Prince of Pilsen," also a classic of the bygone days, but still popular, is tonight's attraction in the park.

The resignation of Alice MacKenzie from the Municipal company, as told in the News Section of today's Post-Dispatch, will have no effect upon the casting of the roles in this or next week's offerings. Under the terms of her contract Miss MacKenzie was required to give the customary two weeks notice of leaving. Tonight, however, will mark the last time of Vittoro Verse in the conductor's stand. Tomorrow night his place will be taken by Ben Jerome, a composer of light music who is also well known as a conductor of musical shows.

Herbert wrote some of his best music for "The Enchantress." There are twenty numbers in the score and all are tuneful. Included are "When the Right Man Sings Tra La," "They All Look Good When They're Far Away," "If You Can't Be as Happy as You Would Like to Be," "Be Just as Happy as You Can," "And That Little Girl Is You," "To the Land of My Own Romance," "I have Been Looking for a Perfect Man," "Rose, Lucky Rose," "I Want to Be a Prima Donna," "Come to Sunny Spain," "One Word From You," "The Dreaming Princess" and "All Your Own Am I."

"OH, KAY," which begins the Garden Theater's sixth week tonight, has been one of the outstanding musical comedy attractions of recent years. It made a hit when presented at the Imperial Theater in New York, where it ran for a solid year and then duplicated this run in Chicago, before taking to the road.

The book was written by Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse, the English novelist and humorist. George Gershwin wrote the music for the lyrics that were turned out by his brother, Ira Gershwin.

The cast, in addition to Charles Ruggles and Louise Brown, includes Estelle Jayne, Virginia Smith, Edward Garr, Sam Critcherson, Ned McGurn, Rosemary Farmer, Wayne Nunn, Victor Casmore, Georgette Caryll, Ethlynne Bradford and others.

THE book of "The Enchantress" is by Harry B. Smith and Fred de Gresac. The libretto is of the "Graustark" type, the first act taking place at the Royal palace of the mythical kingdom of Zergovia and the second at a villa on the banks of the Danube. As the opera opens, festivities celebrating the forthcoming coronation of Prince Ivan as the new King are in progress. The Prince has been away on a five-year tour of Europe and the affairs of state have been looked after by Milock, the Regent, and Ozir, Minister of War. Being plotters of the worst type, they conspire to force Ivan into a morganatic marriage which would cause him to abdicate the throne. Ivan comes of an ancestral line that has been short on ruling ability but long on affectionate regard for the fairer sex.

Naturally, everything ends happily, with Ivan marrying the lady of his choice and at the same time holding on to the crown.

An augmented cast is necessary for the presentation of "The Enchantress" and to fill a number of small but important parts the Municipal Theater Association is calling upon three graduates of the opera chorus of previous years, Clara Schlief, Jeanne Gustavison and Luise Heimueller. The leading woman's role will be portrayed by Miss Carolyn Thomson, with Roy Cropper as Prince Ivan.

THE story of "Oh Kay" at the Garden Theater takes place in two acts and five scenes laid in the summer home of Jimmy Winters, a rich young Long Islander whose house has been used during his absence as a storage place for liquor brought ashore by a gang of rum-runners. Jimmy arrives unexpectedly with his bride of a few hours to learn that a former wife has refused to sign the papers annulling a previous marriage that was the result of a college prank. Before he can remarry his latest bride when the former wife does not sign the papers, he has fallen in love with Kay, a beautiful girl who is mixed up with the rum-runners. Caught on the premises by the sudden return of Jimmy, the bootleggers pretend they are servants sent from an employment agency. After a

THE SINGING FOOLS -:- -:-

By Grace Yeager
Municipal Opera Singer

WHEN Al Jolson's second talkie was advertised as "The Singin' Fool" I couldn't help thinking someone had lost a wonderful title for a book of advice to young singers—to boys and girls who are on the verge of a vocal career. For I had been one of them—I am still, I hope. And it's probably because I am what in one sense one might call a singing fool that I don't know, even today, whether that career should be in operetta, in grand opera—or in the singing pictures. Despite my experience in all three, I am still on the verge.

What happened to me was what befalls innumerable hundreds of such young folks—except that I was luckier than most. Ultimately I landed on my feet.

From the first it had been determined that I should have a musical career. My mother once had heard Bloomfield-Zeisler at Bloomington, Ill., in recital; so I was scheduled for a pianistic career. I studied with the teachers at our home town of Lincoln, Ill., and grew up, as it were, amid two traditions. One was that Lincoln had once practiced law in our town. The other that Bloomfield-Zeisler was as much a guiding star for young girls who dreamed of fame, as Lincoln for young boys. But when it was discovered that I had a voice, and when I grew old enough to take part in such things, it became impossible to keep me out of the local concerts, and operettas and musical shows, things every small town has.

About this time, a musical manager gave me some advice. "You have a talent for the piano," he said, "but only a talent. On the other hand, unless I am mistaken, you have a real voice. It seems to me your real career is as a singer."

Imagine how delighted I was. And imagine, too, how quickly the picture of Geraldine Farrar became enshrined in the place that Bloomfield-Zeisler had occupied.

So, I went to Chicago to study; all eagerness and all excitement, without knowing who to go to, and absolutely unable to find out. I mean I was just one of those "Singing Fools" I have referred to. And I fell into the hands of exactly the wrong teacher.

THERE are hundreds of them. Don't forget that. Hundreds of those wrong teachers, and the young aspirant for a singing career who starts study without knowing how to find a good one, or how to avoid the bad, is the true Singing Fool.

My voice is a mezzo-soprano. No mistaking that. But because it had naturally some fine clear high notes he attempted to make of me a lyric soprano. It wasn't long until I could sing an F in fourteen different ways, and every one of them grated. I couldn't even hear myself sing. I mean that after I had studied with that man I not only didn't know how to produce the tone I wanted, but I didn't even know how to listen to my voice to tell whether I had produced that tone.

It was not only wasted time and wasted money. It was wasted voice—and that was worse. Ultimately I left Chicago for New York. I was lucky enough to find a good teacher and he put me on the right track.

Then I made another mistake that is common to the Singing Fools. I got too ambitious. I wanted to be doing something. I couldn't wait to finish my studies. I wanted a job. I went to a manager of musical shows and got an audition. He gave me a script to read but I must have read it terribly for there was no job.

So I tried again. This time I visited John Cort's office, and he engaged me as prima donna for "Listen Lester" with Ada Mae, then Ada Mae Week, and I was launched upon a stage career. In the course of our tour I visited St. Louis—for the first time, although Lincoln, Ill., is only 120 miles from here.

After that tour more study for I had decided I wanted to enter grand opera. After coaching in ten roles I got a contract with the DeFeo Opera Co., and opened in Toronto.

I was to sing Azucena in "Il Trovatore" on Saturday night. And suddenly I found that I was billed to sing the Witch in "Hansel and Gretel" on Saturday afternoon. That, of course, was impossible. Well, I didn't sing the Witch, and I did sing Azucena. But that ended my experience with DeFeo.

BACK in New York, I joined the San Carlo Opera Company. I had had some experience with one grand opera management, so I saw that certain things were in my contract. One was a complete rest after a role like Azucena. On that tour I learned how truly indeed I was "a singing fool" in my ignorance of the ways of grand opera. There were many unpleasantnesses. Jealousies, bickerings. It would have been a terrible year had it not been for your Elda Vettori of St. Louis, now in the Metropolitan. Silent, sympathetic, considerate, unaffected—she was a real joy in that company. And she is a splendid artist, too.

But it seemed to me I could tour for years and never get a chance in a bigger field. So when I went back to New York and the Shuberts offered me a contract in "Blossom Time." I entered operetta again. And after that there were some appearances in vaudeville in the Stanley and Fox circuits and last spring I signed my contract to come to St. Louis for Municipal Opera.

And meantime another field seemed to open up to the singer. So that when a manager offered me a chance in the films, making some musical shorts for pictures I accepted. The one picture released was called "A Hawaiian Romance." All the company but myself were Hawaiians. I had been chosen because the natives do not approve of the way Americans sing their songs. You see a page of the written music. It is entirely different from the way the music sounds as they sing it. You have to have a feeling for it. Perhaps I do. At any rate I was chosen.

HOW we worked. We rehearsed two days from 8:30 a. m. until 10.30 p. m. before we started making the picture. At one place I had to walk down a jungle path— made of cork, mixed with sand. Of course, I was barefooted—we wore the native garments—and how that sand cut. But it was a delight. My voice, they say, recorded well. But it wasn't the microphone which worried me. It was the camera. It seemed to read your secret thoughts. I remember, the first "playback." I was coming to a difficult place in my song, and I saw a look of fear come over my face there on the screen, and then a fixed smile, as though I had said "I mustn't let anyone see I'm afraid." and that changed to a genuine smile as I called forth the tone I wanted.

To me there are unguessed possibilities in the talkies, though, as I say, the camera makes me tremble. Grand Opera has its lures. But there is always the stilted tradition, the stilted acting, the impossibility of achieving a personal interpretation of a role you feel, for no better reason than that some one else fixed the tradition when she sang the role half a century ago. Operetta is more attractive because of the flexibility of its opportunity for genuine dramatic expression and because of the more human, more liveable, more sincere atmosphere existing in the relations of the singers in that field. And now—the talkies.

All three beckon. I am still on the threshold. It's the price one pays for having been a Singing Fool who years ago chose a teacher without even knowing how to get a real one.

Edgar Shelton Back From European Tour

Edgar Shelton, the young St. Louis pianist whose home is at 4111 Cleveland avenue, has just returned to St. Louis after a successful concert tour in Europe. He gave recitals in Paris, Berlin and London which received favorable comment and he is now preparing for his New York debut which will take place at Town Hall in October.

Mr. Shelton studied in St. Louis under Ernest Kroeger, later he worked in the Juilliard Foundation in New York under Ernest Hutcheson and more recently he received instruction from Arthur Schnabel in Europe. He played concertos with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra in 1925 and 1927, both appearances being with Rudolph Ganz who was then conductor of the orchestra.

Baclanova in Person On Stage at St. Louis

Olga Baclanova, screen siren and for 10 years a dramatic star in the Moscow Art Theater, comes in person to headline one bill at the St. Louis Theater this week. The Russian movie star recently appeared at the Palace Theater in New York, and later was engaged for a limited tour of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Theaters.

Baclanova, whose screen career includes "Wolf of Wall Street," "Streets of Sin" and "Dangerous Woman," will offer a program of songs during her vaudeville tour. She is an accomplished vocalist and scored her greatest success in Europe in "Carmencita and the Soldier," a Russian version of "Carmen."

Where Are the Movie Fans?

The Cinemas Must Look for a New Set of Customers Now That the Talkies Have Brought Strange Faces to the Screens and Are Preventing the Audiences From Playing All the Parts Themselves.

By NIE.

THE picture theaters are facing a difficult problem. Having thrown overboard the hand picked, money supplying customers the show house operators are now wondering how they are going to get back into their cinema palaces the people who can understand and appreciate the better class of talking pictures which are now the vogue—films such as "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," "Charming Sinners" and the like. The movie producers out on the coast are rushing to turn out film talking versions of successful stage dramas and most of these plays are smart, sometimes brilliant, offerings for sophisticated audiences. Those audiences, a long time ago, left the picture theaters flat and the way in which the other, and later, customers are staying away from the box offices now amounts almost to antipathy. The situation here in St. Louis is aggravated by the fact that there are double the number of theater seats necessary to take care of the business but throughout the entire country patronage has fallen off to an alarming extent.

IT is hardly likely that the theaters will ever go back to the silent films although the enormous success of the business—a success which brought many a Hollywood magnate from Hungary to Gout in 10 years—is founded upon lack of conversation. After the better class audiences had been driven from the theaters by the drivel which flooded the screens, another class came along to fill up the houses. These spectators reveled in seeing the same screen stars, in different poses, day in and day out. They saw them, always looking the same, got a suggestion of what the story was about from the sub titles and then, unconsciously perhaps, the customers went ahead and played the show themselves—they imagined themselves in the parts and they imagined what the screen dummies were saying and what their voices sounded like.

Now that amusement has been taken away. The audiences have to sit and listen to a new bunch of screen stars, recruits from the "legit" stage, who do not speak a language which they can understand. They care nothing about the craftmanship of the play nor the brilliance of the lines. What they want to see is Clara Bow in her pajamas. They still want to act the picture themselves, to get an inkling of what it's about from the flowery printed words and then dream of how their favorites' voices should sound. Well, they've heard some of those voices now through the reproducing machines. So have the picture magnates, which accounts for the rush to drag trained speaking voices from Broadway.

IF the powers that be in the movie world stick to making talkies they can look forward to a long cold winter ahead. After a while they will build up a new set of cash providers who will go to the theater but it is reasonably safe to assert that the talkies will never be as popular, with the masses, as the silent pictures were.

Without question a poor silent picture was easier to sit through than a poor talkie. Only the eye was offended by the first while, in the latter case, the eye and the ear both suffered. Mechanically the talkies are coming along. When the machines get good voices to reproduce they reproduce them well and there will soon be little trouble on that score. In a short time, too, the screens will be enlarged. Instead of the present white sheet, some 15 or 16 feet square there will be one which will cover the entire proscenium opening. This will give more reality to the picture and enable the people sitting out in front to better imagine that they are actually seeing and hearing live persons act and talk. With the wide screen will come a wider film which will give more scope to the camera and permit the showing of many actors taking part in the action photographed without huddling them together so that they will be in range of the lens.

Experiments along these lines are already being made and certainly great improvements are coming in the motion picture business but the makers of the films should bear in mind that, after all, no one has ever very seriously attempted to prove that the late lamented Mr. Shakspeare was wrong when he said "The play's the thing"—or words to that effect.

THERE are many queer quirks and twists to the new talking picture game. If you don't believe it ask the booth operators at the Grand Central. The boys upstairs at the Grand avenue house are working overtime on "The Cocoanuts," raising and lowering the sound volumes in a way to give the audience a chance to get the constant laughs. All of which brings out a new angle in the new sound era.

In transcribing comedies of the type that promote uproarious laughter, the talkie producers added another brow-wrinkling problem to their already big list of worries. When Paramount decided

Theater Salvation By Way of Resident Companies

By CHARLES RUGGLES

THE salvation of the theater depends upon the resident company, according to Charles Ruggles, stage and screen actor appearing at the Garden Theater.

"There are many opinions as to the decline of the legitimate theater, but most authorities agree that the establishment of organizations similar to the Theater Society of St. Louis is the only way to revive the drama," he says.

"In the first place, the theater will die a natural death if there are no regular seasons of entertainment made available to the people. If there is no supply the demand will cease in time as seekers of amusement turn to other diversions.

"About a decade ago there was evidence that the touring company method of furnishing theatrical fare was laboring under difficulties. The condition was brought about largely by reason of increased costs of production in all departments of the theaters. Touring companies were obliged to shorten their routes, visiting only the large cities where an attendance sufficiently great to cover the expense was assured. It made necessary, too, the application of business methods, and art suffers when put on a business basis. Inferior productions was the answer. Producers could not afford to send on the road the original productions that made the show a success in New York. The public refused to pay for an inferior product—and today we see many fine theaters in large cities that are fortunate to have a winter season lasting more than 10 weeks. They used to be booked solidly from September until May.

"THE resident company idea, as exemplified by the Theater Society of St. Louis, and the Municipal Opera apparently offers a solution of the problem. The resident company has none of the tremendous traveling expense faced by the touring attraction. This means popular prices can prevail and the productions can be first-class in every detail."

Ruggles declared that the name "stock" should not be applied to this brand of entertainment. "The better term would be repertory," he said. "The shows being staged here rival in setting and cast the original New York productions. The original stars are brought on in many instances, and the plays are not sadly deleted affairs to conform with stock company limitations, but the real unchanged article.

"This helps to keep alive public interest in the legitimate theater by presenting a full season of the best entertainment. There are no dark weeks, or public uncertainty as to whether there will be a show every week of the announced season. Prices prevail that are within reach of all.

"THE resident organization is also vitally important for a reason not recognized by many producers. The decline of the theater is really fundamentally due to the dearth of new actors and new playwrights. Modern business methods call for getting all the money possible from the theater as the business moguls found it, without any provision for renewing the art supply. We find the same situation as existed in the natural resources of our country before the Government took steps to preserve and replenish our forests, fish and game.

"The resident company is in a position to seek out, develop and then send to New York new actors and playwrights. It is a function that is being undertaken today only by a few of the producers, and they are the directors of resident companies. One of them is Stuart Walker, whose organization in Cincinnati has developed many outstanding actors and playwrights.

"There are many youngsters appearing on the summer stages here who show signs of developing into splendid actors. Watch them—they will be discovered by New York."

Art League Will Hold Contest for Little Theaters

A LITTLE theater tournament, to select the best one-act plays and the best non-professional playing group in St. Louis, is planned for the early part of 1930 by the drama committee of the St. Louis Art League.

The group winning the tournament, it is planned, will compete in the eighth annual Little Theater Tournament to be held in New York next May. In this competition, the Belasco Cup is awarded annually.

Only original plays will be admitted to the local tournament. This will make it possible to contest not only for the Belasco Cup, but for two prizes awarded by a publishing firm for the best presentation of an original play.

Mrs. William Flewellyn Saunders, chairman of the drama committee of the Art League, has been in correspondence with Walter Hartwig, manager of the nation' tournament, and he has approved the plans set forth by her. Announcement of the conditions for the local contest will be made within a few weeks. The headquarters of the Art League and its drama committee are at 525 Locust street.

A Texas group, the Dallas Little Treater company, has won the Belasco Cup three times. An English company has won it once, and a Scotch company once.

How Mary Duncan Made The Plunge From Stage to Screen

BEHIND THE SCREENS

By Helen Hurd

At Last a Native Son Is Found In California Studio

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 27.

THE first time I heard of Mary Duncan, she had cracked her frontal skull bone in an automobile accident. It was frontal, because the director of publicity who hands out all the information about contracts and other accidents, couldn't spell "occipital" over the phone to the papers. Anyway, there was a lot of weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth, and the police departments of three towns, including Santa Monica, where Miss Duncan lives, were on the trail of the sock 'em and beat it motorist who left her in a daze and thinking she smelled chloroform. Incidentally, the police kidnaped her maid and held her two days in court, and the joke of it all was, it wasn't the regular maid at all, but a substitute, who knew nothing and said so, which made it all the more suspicious. By introducing all this into the story, far be it from one who enjoyed such a delightful afternoon at home with Miss Duncan and a plate of freshly baked cookies, to leave the impression that automobile accidents were her daily dozen. The point of it all is, what a motherly interest the police take in a newcomer to Hollywood, seeing that they have all the protection the law affords; how hot and bothered the publicity departments can get over nothing and how nonchalantly the victims themselves speak of the accident in after life.

MARY DUNCAN.

When Miss Duncan next hove into view, she was the only bright spot in an otherwise terrible picture, which was her first important role in the films. What a vamp she did make, luring one of four air devils into her wiles apparently without any effort. But you can't tell about these pictures. What doesn't look like a lot of trouble is, and what does isn't. Mary Duncan has black hair which she wears a la Garbo, half bob effect; the bluest of blue eyes, and her features are fine. Off screen, she doesn't look like a vamp—more like the Mary Duncan who went to Cornell and held all the sororities off until she prolonged her period of what is known among the collegians as "rushing," 'way into the new year, "because it was so much fun going around to teas and things." She is a Southern girl, Luttrellville, Va., being accountable for the accent which she has now lost or covered up by what she calls "a jargon of her own" being a dash of the old South, a bit of broad-a English, some French dressing and heart of lettuce. And now, her studio, having searched all over Hollywood to find a Spanish type of play in "Don Conquistador" and finally deciding on her as the type despite her blue eyes and Scotch name, she is learning to get a Spanish flair to her "jargon." More than that, the Fox company has hired a Spanish companion to pal around with her, a most meretricious young lady—to help her get Spanish. Now if that isn't for the sake of art, I ask you. Just one of the trials of Mary Duncan.

NOW another outstanding event in her career was the time Al Woods, the producer, threw a bronze statue at her, which luckily for art, she dodged by a skillful maneuver. The beginning of that story goes back to when she left Cornell, inspired by the desire to go on the stage. She studied under the famous Yvette Guilbert, from whom she won a scholarship which carried with it a two-year course with Lily Lehmann, operatic soloist and teacher, the intent being a training for light opera. But Mary Duncan had aims in another direction, and did not take advantage of the prize she had won. She was bent on the drama and succeeded in enlisting the interest of Leo Detrichstein, who engaged her for the feature role in "Toto." Following this was the leading role in Ben Hecht's play, "The Egoist." Other engagements took her to London where she played in "The Nervous Wreck" in an extended run at the St. James' Theater. Returning to America, Willard Mack wanted her for the leading role in "Honor Be Damned." The matter of a contract and salary necessitated an interview with Al Woods who was to produce the play, and who, at the moment, was busily engaged in launching "The Shanghai Gesture." This wasn't the time he threw the statue. Instead, he decided she was the ideal person to play the role of "Poppy" in the Gesture, and sent her to see Mrs. Leslie Carter and John Colton, the authors.

MRS. CARTER and Mr. Colton were similarly impressed and she was engaged for the role. The play ran 14 months in New York and then played Chicago, Denver and Los Angeles, totaling 18 months of suspense for Mary Duncan. For on the opening night in New York, after her first performance, she was approached by Fox officials who wanted her to take a screen test. She did, and went to Al Woods with a long story about a throat condition which would necessitate her leaving the show. He promptly sent her to a doctor, and held her to her contract the whole time. And threw a bronze statue at her.

The show ended in Los Angeles, whch was fortunate in that it saved train fare, which, however, didn't mean anything to Mary Duncan. So she launched forth in the movies, which by that time had become loquacious, and there are many favorable predictions as to her success. In the first place she talks well, secondly, she looks good on the screen, and finally, which doesn't seem to be important in actors, but sometimes is a great help, she can act.

FINALLY, and at last, we have found a native son of California in the movies. When you stop to consider that 43 states and 23 foreign countries have given the American screen its popular players, it seems like a real discovery to find one who was born under cinema skies, and grew up to caper across the celluloid like an outsider. San Jose, Cal., sent Edmund Lowe to the hearts of movie fans. We talked it over at lunch at the Hollywood Athletic Club, where all the boys call him "Ed," and he drives a Ford sedan that needs polishing. But I couldn't get what is technically known as an interview out of that boy to save my life. He would talk—and how, and it was sufficiently soul-satisfying, but not exactly what a lady interviewer would want. What I really mean is, he did not tell me all these things which I shall relate to you about his life and such, because he simply would not talk about himself or his life history. In an unguarded moment the fact that he did teach school at one time slipped out in the conversation. He got a master's degree in pedagogy, and became a member of the Santa Clara University faculty at the ripe old age of 19, but ended up by taking a championship baseball team to Honolulu, where it won 20 out of 21 games. So I asked him what the Cardinals were doing now, and he told me, which as far as I was concerned was correct.

EDMUND LOWE.

He had a wild desire to go on the stage, and started with a Los Angeles stock company, thanks to the information in his biography. But he did tell me that he soon got Shakspeare out of his system. So he went into the movies. His first starring vehicle was "The Silent Command," in 1923. More significant steps in his ladder to fame were "The Fool" and "East Lynne." What the fans really remember is the sergenat in "What Price Glory," the same in "Old Arizona" and when it comes out you will see him still the sergeant in "The Cock-Eyed World." in which he will share honors with Victor McLaglen and Lily Damita. He's a hard-boiled baby on the screen, but off, he's good for a most entertaining lunch if you're hungry, and a lot of interesting persiflage if you're not.

THERE is such a thing as being too good at your job in Hollywood—especially if your job is that of double for a leading movie star. That's why a certain extra girl isn't Greta Garbo's double any more; she was more Greta than Greta herself. One of the most incredible true stories this fountainhead of incredible stories has ever produced is that of Greta and her double, which has come to an end with the girl back in the ranks of the extra girls. The details have just been revealed in the current Photoplay Magazine, a sort of Bible among the picture folks.

GRETA GARBO.

They are alike, inch for inch and pound for pound, features, color, hair, eyes and all. They are so much alike that the girl has not only doubled for Greta on the screen, but out of the studio as well. Tourists have seen her dining with gay animation in Hollywood's brightest cafes and have come away scoffing at the story that Greta Garbo was shy and reserved off the screen. Even news paper reporters have made the mistake. When Greta was in Europe it was reported that she had returned and was appearing at divers interesting places incognito.

All of that was O K with Greta. The Swedish star really does like to keep her private life to herself. She likes to drive a rattling flivver and wear tweeds that are the despair of the modistes. She likes to be alone. She is moodily temperamental, perhaps, but she is not high-hat. She hasn't the flair off-screen that the public expects of a movie queen. So it was quite fine with Greta that she had a double do her public posing and be gazed at.

It was fine with Greta's producers, too. They couldn't make Garbo do the grandiose things that were expected of a movie queen. She wouldn't make the public gestures, popularity or no popularity. But the double could and did. She loved it.

The double, so far as life off the set was concerned, actually became Garbo. She carried herself with the regal air of a great star. She even wore the Garbo clothes and wore them with a flair that Greta has never acquired. She was, in fact, Greta Garbo's "private life" where the public was concerned, until——

It seems, according to the Photoplay article, that the girl actually convinced herself she was the better half of Garbo. She began treating the studio folk as a prima donna might, but as Garbo does not. She began arriving and departing at her own leisure, as a great actress might, but as a double cannot.

In a particularly lucid moment they cut off her contract—before she demanded Garbo's salary.

ANN HARDING met Harry Bannister in Detroit when he was engaged to play opposite her in a stock company. They fell in love and were married in New York, but never since their marriage until now have they given cues to each other on the stage. Her second starring picture and his first is being filmed at Pathe, "Her Private Affairs." She made her debut in talking pictures via "Paris Bound." . . . . Sue Carol broke out yesterday in a new square-cut diamond. She says she has had the ring for several months. Her Nicky Stuart gave it to her, of course. And Cupid has been terribly busy here of late. He's probably laughing up his sleeves, if he has sleeves, at the fast one he pulled in the Richmann-Bow affair. Marion Nixon has announced her engagement, and Anita Stewart has recently married again. This same Cupid is feeling pretty satisfied with his apparent success with John Gilbert and Ina Claire. Everyone said that there was one time when he had gone too far in his matchmaking, it wouldn't last and all that. But Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert let 'em talk, going about quietly finishing their current pictures, then slipped out of Hollywood on a Transcontinental Air Transport plane on the first leg of a honeymoon trip to Europe. Credited with playing more European roles than any other star, the trip abroad will nevertheless be Jack's first dash outside the boundaries of the United States—Mexico excepted.

SUE CAROL.

TWO REVIVALS OFFERED IN OUTDOOR THEATERS HERE FOR THE WEEK

series of uproarious situations matters are adjusted to the satisfaction of everybody.

Next week, at the Garden Theater, Peter Greig is to present "Hit the Deck" and with Charles Ruggles and Louise Brown gone, will bring on Roger Gray, one-time star and great favorite of the old Park Opera Company here in the golden days of the Pershing Theater. Also he will have Stella Mayhew as a co-star. Both Gray and Miss Mayhew played in the original production of "Hit the Deck" in New York and the latter scored the greatest hit of her career by singing the popular Halleujah number.

FOR the tenth week of the opera season, starting a week from tomorrow night, the attraction at the Municipal Theater will be "The Vagabond King," Rudolph Friml's highly successful light opera based on Justin McCarthy's famous play, "If I Were King." Miss Thomson, the prima donna of the Forest Park Company, created the role of Lady Katherine in the New York production of the Friml opus and played it for more than two years. She will be seen in the part here next week. Roy Cropper is to have the role of Francois Villon, who braved his head to be king for a day.

The light opera was given its first repertory production at the Municipal Theater last summer and is ideally suited to outdoor production. Likewise, it seems made to order for this year's cast.

MOVIE THEATERS MUST LOOK FOR NEW FANS FOR THE BOX OFFICE

to give the patrons "The Cocoanuts" with the Four Marx Brothers, a few checks were signed, the talkie was made and the customary trade ballyhoo commenced.

Now with the finished product showing around the country, the monarchs of the movies discover they paid for a lot of funny business that's going by unnoticed—the unrestrained laughter of the box-office visitors at one wise-crack drowns out as many as two or three following witticisms.

ON the stage the performers can either pause or repeat their lines if they appear not to have registered. In the talkies, however, if a pause is made following a humorous situation and the weeze doesn't click, the continuity of the picture is apt to be impaired by the dead spots. If repetition is employed for such a scene which doesn't mature many are apt to complain to the management on the way out that the picture machine is out of whack.

"The Cocoanuts" is the first production with such a wrinkle. A rather complicated remedy, requiring the operators to increase and decrease the sound volume according to the mood of the audience, has been concocted to adjust affairs.

Oahu Adopts Busses.

The old Murray Hill is one of New York's hotels refusing to bow to the modern hurry and stands a serene monument to days agone. It has barny rooms and the only concession to modernity is up to date plumbing. Otherwise it is the same as when it opened many years ago. It has a select clientele and is always filled. The proprietor spurned millions to turn the place over to the wreckers for it occupies a valuable mid-town site. His reason is sentiment. He is rich and for 10 years was confined to one room with an illness. When he recovered he vowed the hotel would never come down while he lived.

That sudden gush of popularity which the young orchestra leader, Rudy Vallee, enjoyed is reported waning. Astute showmen say that had he continued to sing over the radio and never been seen by his idolizing public he could have commanded the highest salary in amusement history. The appeal was solely in his voice. When ladies saw him, they were disillusioned and their enthusiasm went flooey. He still has a certain vogue but the high pressure admiration that turned feminine New York ga-ga has spent itself. Rudy was a brief fad. He went from jazz to razz.

ERMAN BARON TOILS ON MISSOURI FARM

ds Five Weeks' Work Near Gray Summit—To Manage Family Estate.

TITLED FARMER

WALTER, BARON PUTLITZ.

Walter, Baron Putlitz, whose mplete name is Walter Gans ller Herr zu Putlitz, and who is king a long course of agricultural aining in preparation for managing his family estate of 8000 res in Germany, has just completed five weeks as a hired man overalls at the experimental m of the Ralston Purina Co., ar Gray Summit, Franklin County.

He is a brother of Wolfgang, aron Putlitz, secretary of the erman embassy at Washington. ough he traces his lineage in German nobility back for 1000 years, he is an unassuming, prepossessing, ruddy-faced youth of 23, keen for travel and the information and friendliness America has to offer him.

The Putlitz estate is in fine farming country at Wittenberge, Brandenburg, midway between Berlin and Hamburg. The region specializes in dairy cattle, hogs and potatoes and also grows wheat, rye and oats. For seven years young Putlitz has attended a special school near Berlin, somewhat akin to a university of agriculture. Next he will go to a Government agricultural school at Potsdam, which requires that its students first must have four years of practical experience. Putlitz has had two and a half years of varied work on a farm not far from Berlin and came to the United States on May 16 to add to his knowledge.

Two Weeks at Embassy.

After spending a fortnight at the embassy at Washington with his brother he came to St. Louis, where Dr. Georg Ahrens, the German Consul, had arranged with W. H. Danforth, president of the Ralston Purina Co., for Putlitz to have experience with all the jobs on the experimental farm.

Putlitz—he's the last one to think of using his title here—landed in America entirely unacquainted with the English language. He is not a linguist, claiming only a smattering of French along with his German, Greek and Latin, but in nine weeks he has taught himself to carry on long conversations in English, with a pleasant accent, and to read the American newspapers. "You had to talk English on the farm," he laughed. Pronouns nevertheless give him a bit of trouble, as he is apt to use "she" in a generic way instead of "he" or "it."

At Gray Summit Putlitz shared a farmhouse room with seven other young men of local nativity. "I liked it," he said. "People have been very, very nice to me." First he cared for the pigs, then for 10 days he arose regularly at 4 a. m. to milk the cows with an electrical machine—the first such device he had observed except in a Berlin dairy. Later he wroked in the steer barn and the chicken house.

Has Gathered Some Ideas.

The young Baron says that he has seen many things in American farm life which differ from practices in Germany and he has gathered some ideas to take back, but prudently he is not ready to discuss agriculture here as an expert observer. He says he does not miss his native beverages, but prefers water and iced coffee here.

Putlitz will depart Friday for Hardin, Mont., where his brother has arranged for him to spend two weeks on a large wheat ranch. What he will do thereafter is problematical, but he wants to visit San Francisco and see much more of the country. He may go home in October or he may spend the winter in the United States. At present he is at the Gatesworth Apartment Hotel.

"What I like about this country," he remarked, "is that everybody's equal; there's no fuss over rank."

THREE MEXICAN BAND LEADERS SHOT DEAD

Two by Firing Squads, One by Assassin—Accused of Killing 100 on Train.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, July 27.—The three alleged leaders of the brutal train attack near Guadalajara April 20, 1927, the worst of such attacks in Mexican history and which led to the redoubling of armed guards accompanying all trains, are dead.

All three men charged with responsibility for that affair, in which approximately 100 men, women and children were killed, were shot to death shortly after the second anniversary of the attack. Two were executed by firing squads, and the third assassinated by one of his own followers.

The three men were Vega and Aristeo Pedroza, and Victoriano Ramirez, known as "El Catorce," or "The Fourteen."

Vega and Pedroza were priests in Jalisco prior to the outbreak of the religious trouble in Mexico in 1926. They were said to have become leaders of bands of rebels. Representatives of the Roman Catholic church have always denied this leadership.

On the night of April 20 the passenger train between Guadalajara and Mexico City was attacked by more than 100 men. The guard of soldiery and many passengers were killed.

Then the bandits poured kerosene on the train, and fired it, burning the dead and wounded. Only a few persons escaped.

The survivors alleged that Vega, Pedroza and "El Catorce" were leaders of the attackers. The three men were often heard from in the next two years and were named almost weekly by the Government as leaders of attacks on towns and ranches in Jalisco. Vega and Pedroza were reported killed a dozen times, usually at the hands of a Federal firing squad, but later reports proved these to be inaccurate.

Then treachery made its first inroads into their ranks. Early in April this year Vega accused "El Catorce" of attempting to deliver Vega and other leaders into the hands of Federal pursuers. He was subjected to a midnight court-martial, convicted and executed at dawn at the Hacienda Guadalupe Arandas, Jalisco.

Within a week "El Catorce's" death was avenged, however, by a cousin who slipped up behind Vega at night and shot him in the back. The assassin fled on horseback, despite rifle shots from Vega's followers.

Pedroza continued to operate until early in July, when Federal troops suddenly came upon him and 35 followers near Arandas. Pedroza was captured and sentenced to death.

Placed before the firing squad, he made an effort to escape, but was caught by Lieut. Maurilio Varela. He clung to the officer who was unable to shake him loose. Finally the lieutenant drew his pistol and shot Pedroza in the chest. Pedroza fell and Varela fired the coup de grace.

JAMES M'CAFFERY ESTATE IS VALUED AT $250,000

James McCaffery, former Democratic leader and at one time justice of the peace and later a member of the board of election commissioners, left an estate with an estimated value of $250,000.

An inventory filed in Probate Court yesterday by Attorney Bruce Starke as executor lists real estate and personal property at a face value of $66,477.46 but it was stated that the actual value of the realty was considerably greater than its assessed value, while certain stocks and bonds listed at par are worth more on the market.

In addition the inventory shows 976 shares of North American Co. no-par value stock which were listed on the market yesterday at $177 a share, making the total value of this stock $172,752. Mr. McCaffery also owned 400 shares of Certainteed Products Co. stock and 100 shares of Marland Oil Co. stock the value of which was not stated. His realty is listed at its assessed value or $24,480.

In his will Mr. McCaffery, who was a widower, left the bulk of his property to relatives, naming Starke and two nephews, Dr. James Justin McCaffery and John Quirk, as co-executors and trustees. He died July 2.

U. S. Diplomat's Wife Killed.

DEPUTY SHERIFF WOUNDED IN STREET CAR HOLDUP

Shot in Arm, But Fires at Two Negroes Who Tried to Rob Conductor.

Deputy Sheriff Walter Maschmidt suffered a superficial wound of the right forearm Friday midnight when shot by a Negro who attempted to hold up the conductor of a Kirkwood-Ferguson street car.

Maschmidt had just boarded the car at the junction with the Florissant street car line and was sitting opposite the conductor, Harry Slater, when a tall Negro holding a handkerchief to his face demanded the conductor's money changer. Maschmidt reached for his revolver and was shot by the Negro.

The Negro leaped from the car and escaped with another Negro who had waited outside, Maschmidt firing five shots at the second Negro. Ater treatment, the Deputy proceeded to Clayton, where he acts as night jailer.

Alfred J. Pfrommer, 4417 South Kingshighway, was held up at Kingshighway and Arsenal street at 3:45 a. m. yesterday by two men who took his car, handed him $1 "taxi fare" and apologized, saying they required the car to leave town.

Recital by Mrs. Hirsch's Pupils.

The following music pupils of Mrs. Carrie Hirsch gave a recital yesterday afternoon at the Vandervoort music hall, which was attended by a large number of guests. JUDGE BUTLER DENIES WEEKE SOUGHT PAROLE

Says He Treated Father-in-Law's Lodger Same as Anyone Else.

Judge Edward E. Butler of Court of Criminal Correction, who returned yesterday from a 10-day vacation at Hollister, Mo., exhibiting photographs of 32 fish caught there, offered an explanation of the parole from the workhouse granted Joseph Oldani, a guest at a hotel at 2605 Olive street owned by Hank Weeke, Republican politician and father-in-law of Judge Butler.

"Mr. Weeke never spoke a word to me about that case," he said. "I handled it the same as any other case. If I had to do it all over again, I'd do the same.

"I sentenced Oldani to six months in the Workhouse and sent him to jail temporarily until I could make an investigation to determine if he was worthy of consideration. I found he had no previous record so I decided to parole him.

"Suppose he did live at Mr. Weeke's hotel? That's no reason to treat him any different from other men without a record."

The Judge was asked about the notation "Hank Weeke, friend," which appeared on Oldani's parole card, but was removed at the direction of Judge Butler's stenographer. Judge Butler said paroled persons are required to name a relative or friend for reference, in case the parole is violated, and Oldani had named Weeke.

Oldani, a bartender, was sentenced to the Workhouse for using 1928 automobile license plates which had been altered to counterfeit 1929 plates. He was arrested originally as the driver of a car which killed a pedestrian, but was freed for lack of identification.

WESTERN MARYLAND RAILROAD PURCHASE BY B. & O. OPPOSED

Briefs Filed With I. C. C. by Baltimore City Officials and Rival Line.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Briefs in opposition to the control of stock in the Western Maryland Railroad by the Baltimore & Ohio were filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission today by the Pittsburg & West Virginia Railway, and the Mayor, City Council and Port Development Commission of Baltimore.

They contended that acquisition of 42 per cent of stock in the Western Maryland by the Baltimore & Ohio, in February, 1927, would lessen competition between the two roads and that the Baltimore & Ohio should not be permitted to hold the stock.

The Commission has charged the Baltimore & Ohio with violating the Clayton Anti-Trust Act by obtaining the stock without the Commission's approval.

RAILWAY MAIL OFFICE REMAINS IN ST. LOUIS

Cochran Receives Assurance It Will Not Be Transferred to Kansas City.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Building.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—After a conference with Postoffice officials yesterday, Congressman John J. Cochran (Dem.) St. Louis, stated that he had received assurances that the Seventh Division Railway Mail Service headquarters, now in St. Louis, would not be transferred to Kansas City as had been requested by a large number of Kansas City civic organizations.

The St. Louis Chamber of Commerce has opposed the transfer.

Cochran told the officials that every division headquarters in the country was located in the largest city in the division. Such a transfer as the one proposed, he said, would seriously affect the moral of employes who had established permament homes in St. Louis and would result in no benefit either to the service or the employes. He reminded the officials that with every change of postoffice administration, Kansas City had tried to have the headquarters transferred.

SNAKE CLINGS TO BOY'S ARM WHEN HE WALKS IN WEEDS

A snake fastened its fangs in the right forearm of Omar Leresche, 13 years old, 2523 Coleman street, when he was passing through a patch of weeds near a quarry at Ashland and Euclid avenues where he had been swimming with a companion yesterday.

By swinging his arm above his head, the boy managed to loosen the snake's grip.

At City Hospital he was treated for four punctures made by the fangs. He said he thought the snake was a copperhead. His condition was good last night, only a small swelling resulting from the bites.

Sunday ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH Magazine
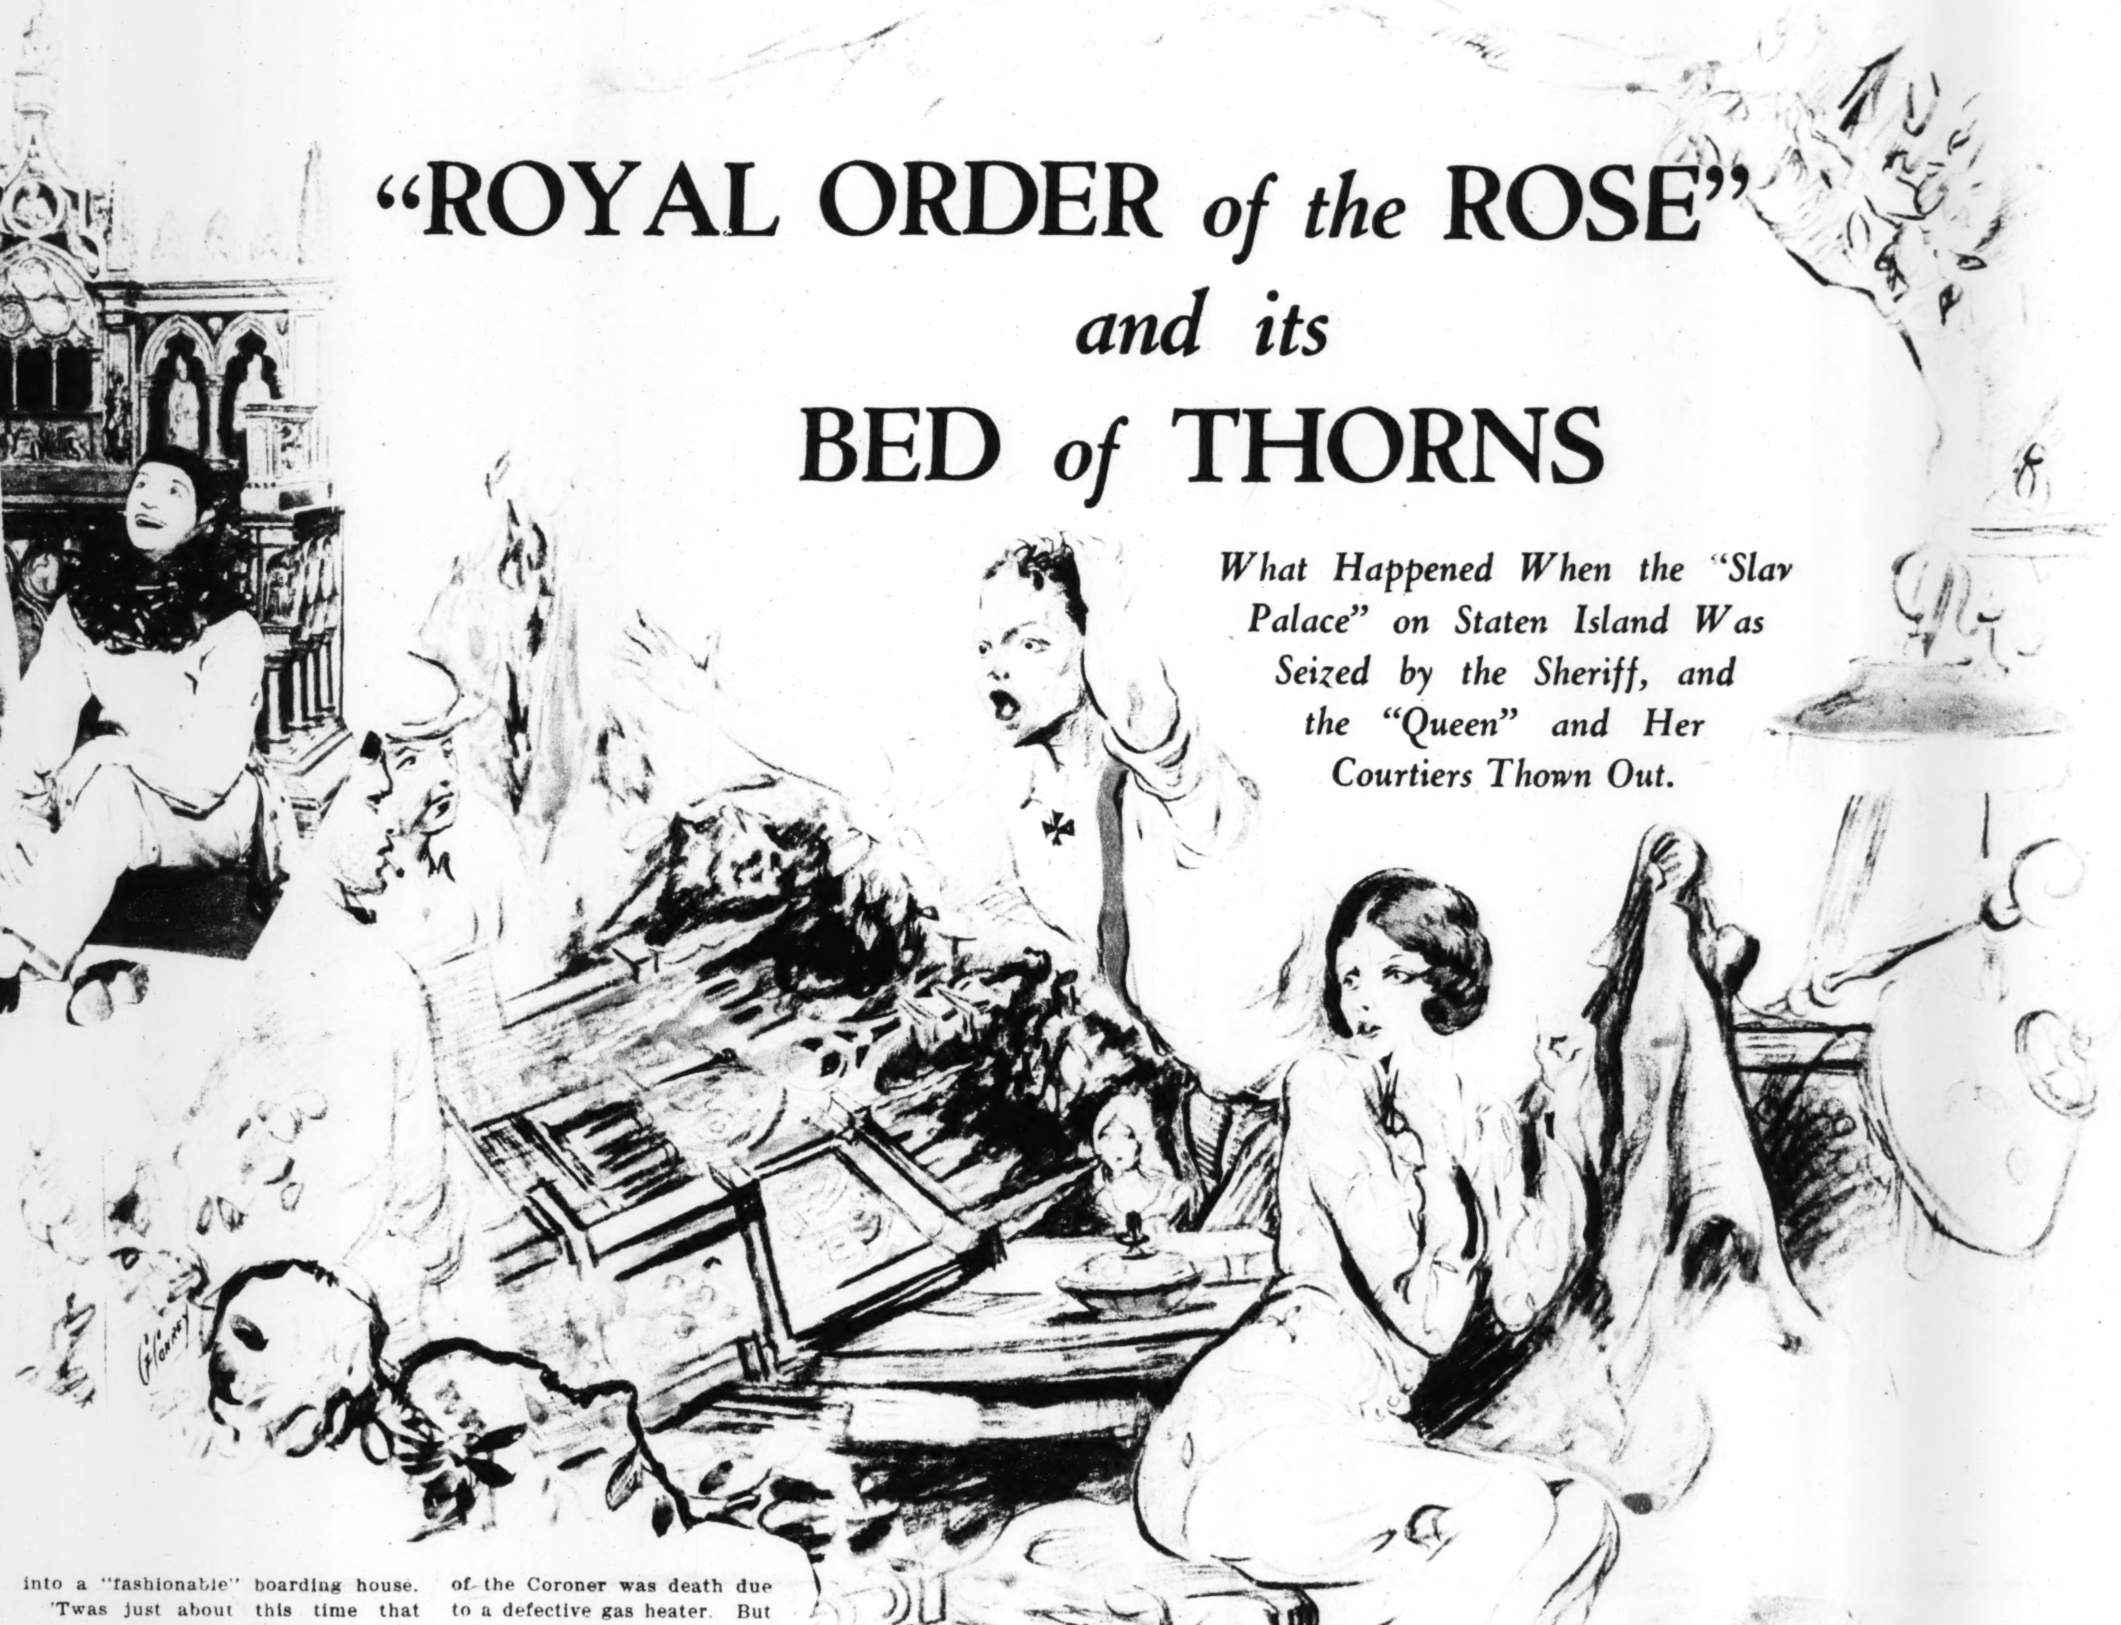
July 28, 1929—Supplement of the Count H. Victor von Broens-Trupp Tcherep Spiridovich, "King" of the "Royal Order," and his Court Jester.



"ROYAL ORDER of the ROSE" and its BED of THORNS

What Happened When the "Slav Palace" on Staten Island Was Seized by the Sheriff, and the "Queen" and Her Courtiers Thown Out.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

BANG! went the Sheriff's hammer, and the American palace of the "Royal Order of the Rose" went with it. So did the Great Slav Union. So did the Royal Hall of Count Tcherep Spiridovich II, formerly H. Victor von Broens-Trupp. And the Queen of the Royal Order of the Rose, Dame Harriet Beauley, moved out of their 62-room (count 'em) manor at Arrochar, Staten Island, out of the Palace of the Royal Order of the Rose (the walls of which were now festooned mostly with cobwebs)—out she went into the woods, depending on neighbors' coffee and cake for sustenance.

You've never heard of the Royal Order of the Rose? Shame on you! Tut, tut. How little we Americans keep up with great world movements. You've not heard how the magnificent Dame Beauley's home went up the spout via the mortgage route because the lady mortgaged her home for $40,000 to care for her newly-created royalty Americaine? Well, well. You didn't even know we were dispensing titles in the land of the free and the home of the brave, dispensing nobility, mind you, on Staten Island, right under the nose of the Statue of Liberty herself? Well, well, again, and a long line of tuts. We'll enlighten you.

This is the way it all happened:

ABOUT 15 years ago, back around 1914, William J. Beauley, nationally known artist, bought "The House With a Hundred Rooms" (as it was erroneously known), which raised its Colonial beauty on Staten Island and overlooked New York harbor. High on a hilltop it stood. Within was a great hall, the length of the house, rising three stories to the roof. This magnificent hall was floored with Spanish tiles, and surrounding it was a gallery, with balustrades of dark wood, all supported by pillars of heavily-carved capitals. On one side a great staircase flung out a massive approach. The rooms themselves offered rare beauty in fine antique furniture.

But all this splendor did not lead to a harmonious married life for the Beauleys. In 1918 they were divorced. Beauley next married Genevieve Mary Brockfinger. And three years later Mrs. Beauley, the first, had the divorce decree set aside on the ground that the evidence used against her had been "framed."

After some conferring, the first Mrs. Beauley was given the 62-room manor on Staten Island.

Now, ladies and gentlemen, the cost of keeping up such a place is considerable, as you no doubt have suspected by this time. It takes quite a staff to keep it up in the manner to which it is accustomed. You can't have somebody come in twice a week and make it look like anything. Coal, oh! And light, oh! And just about everything else, oh!!

Mrs. Beauley started an out-door dancing studio. But that didn't bring in money enough. So what did she do but turn her Staten Island chateau into a "fashionable" boarding house.

'Twas just about this time that great swarms of exiled Russian aristocrats decided they preferred the company of Uncle Samuel to that of Messieurs Lenin and Trotzky. Great shoals of these titled men and women came to America. For some reason or other they made their way, many of them, toward the home of Madame Beauley. And Madame, ever one to appreciate the exotic, greeted them with open arms.

Enter, then, Count Tcherep Spiridovich! Madame Beauley's Waterloo was on the horizon.

First and foremost, Count Spiridovich was a descendant of Rurik the Great, founder of the Russian Empire, and a Colonel in the army of the last of the Czars. He also was a pretty good dreamer. One of his most potent dreams was the Slav federation. He wanted to unite Russia with Poland, Czechoslovakia, Rumania, Bulgaria and Lithuania. Of course, all the peoples aren't Slavs, but the Count was pretty cosmopolitan. He didn't mind work, either, for he was going to head the whole business.

Even before the World War he was president of a Slav society in Moscow, and he visited America in 1907, presenting, while here, a jeweled cup to President Roosevelt for his offices toward making peace between Russia and Japan. It was rumored at that time that the Count was trying to enlist 225,000,000 American dollars in a project to link the Baltic and the Black Sea by canal.

So, as a lofty fellow the Count came to America in 1907, and as a lofty fellow he returned to Russia. But when he next trod upon these shores he was gray and poor.

Detained at Ellis Island, he finally was admitted. It wasn't long before he got to Beauley Manor.

Nothing much was heard from him until 1926, when he issued a proclamation for the first All-Slav convention, to be held in October of that year. On the morning of October 25, one week before the convention date, he was found dead in bed in his room at the Manor. The gas-heater cock was open. The official verdict of the Coroner was death due to a defective gas heater. But there were many who suspected that it was suicide, brought about by his realization that no one, or but a scant few, would attend his convention call. One man insists death was due to heart failure—heart failure from grief, for, says this man, the Count saw a world crisis approaching and realized that he could not prevent it.

Who was this man who gives this explanation? None other than Count Spiridovich II, sometime H. Victor von Broens-Trupp, he who was about to be His Majesty of the Royal Order of the Rose.

Now, H. Victor von Broens-Trupp had been Count Spiridovich's right-hand man. And H. Victor von Broens-Trupp had observed the master carefully and kept his counsel. No sooner had the real Count Spiridovich died that H. Victor hitched himself to the Count's name and title.

The real Count Tcherep Spiridovich.

Royal purple and Ta-Ra-Ta-Ra of trumpets, please. The new Spiridovich would DO things. First, the Royal Order of the Rose was founded, "to recognize and credit worth in all stations, from coal heaver to President of the United States." The Manor became the Slav Palace. The new Spiridovich, not being content with such a mouthful as Count H. Victor von Broens-Trupp Tcherep Spiridovich, conferred several other titles upon himself, among them the "Duke of Seba." He was the emperor of the order, why shouldn't he? Madame Beauley was now made Dame Beauley, the order's Queen. And the lodgers, who now numbered some 200 pretty much impoverished souls, became hungry Earls, Counts, Lords, Ladies, Knights, or what have you.

In the throneroom of the palace, Victor, in full regalia, bestowed honors and knighthood upon hundreds. Including Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh (in absentia). Life was royal, life was good. But danger, it seems, was in the offing. The menace was in the person of George J. Price, real estate dealer of the crass world outside the Royal Order of the Rose. George Price held a $40,000 mortgage which Dame Beauley had put upon her estate so she might support her courtiers. And the time had come for that mortgage to be paid.

Out went furniture and royalty into the woods surrounding the estate.

Dame Beauley decided she would like to raise $60,000 to pay off the mortgage and renovate the palace, which was fast falling into shabby ways. It had become but a shell of its former magnificence. The walls were stained with dampness. The carved woodwork was encrusted with dust. The vast rooms were empty save of the bare necessities.

Oh, to raise money! Dame Beauley and the Count decided to form the Beauley Manor Realty Corporation. She elected him president.

BENEFIT balls were given. Hundreds attended. But all forgot to pay. An opera, to be sung in English, looked as though it might make some money. But on that night the gas company turned off all the lights for nonpayment of bills. And not one of the audience would advance the money for the meter so the opera might be seen as well as heard—standing room only, because most of the chairs were chopped up for last winter's fuel.

And the disloyal courtiers (all but 15 of them), what with food becoming scarcer, deserted the palace, drifted away. Dame Beauley advertised "airy and comfortable rooms for harmonious people." No one answered.

The last festival was given in October, 1928. The Count was in purple velvet, playing the part of King in the palace overrun with cobwebs. The knighting had to be held up for a day because Dame Lorna Standish, claiming to be the eighth direct descendant of Miles Standish, failed to appear on time. When she arrived, the Count marched to the throne, a little girl scattering a few rose petals before him. A couple of pages, a few ex-chorus girls in his wake. A rented piano tinkled, and the ladies and gentlemen about to be raised to knighthood came into the throneroom with proper solemnity.

Banquets. And, believe it or not, many of those attending were asked to bring their own food. The festival lasted three days.

So time went on, and Dame Beauley and the Count and the 15 nervous lodgers sat in the great halls and awaited eviction.

The Count, who wore his rumpled evening suit every night, whether there were outside guests present or not, and sometimes wore it through the day, became careless of his attire. He was seen going around without a collar. And Dame Beauley, in the winter's cold, wore an assortment of sweaters; as spring and summer came, cheap light dresses.

Then Sheriff William S. Hart of Richmond County arrived with an order to dispossess Mrs. Beauley. Victor stormed about in full-dress evening trousers, collarless dress shirt, rolled-up sleeves, red ribbon across his bosom.

Mrs. Harriet W. Beauley.

But that man George Price had purchased the home at a foreclosure sale. Out went the furniture and royalty into the woods surrounding the estate.

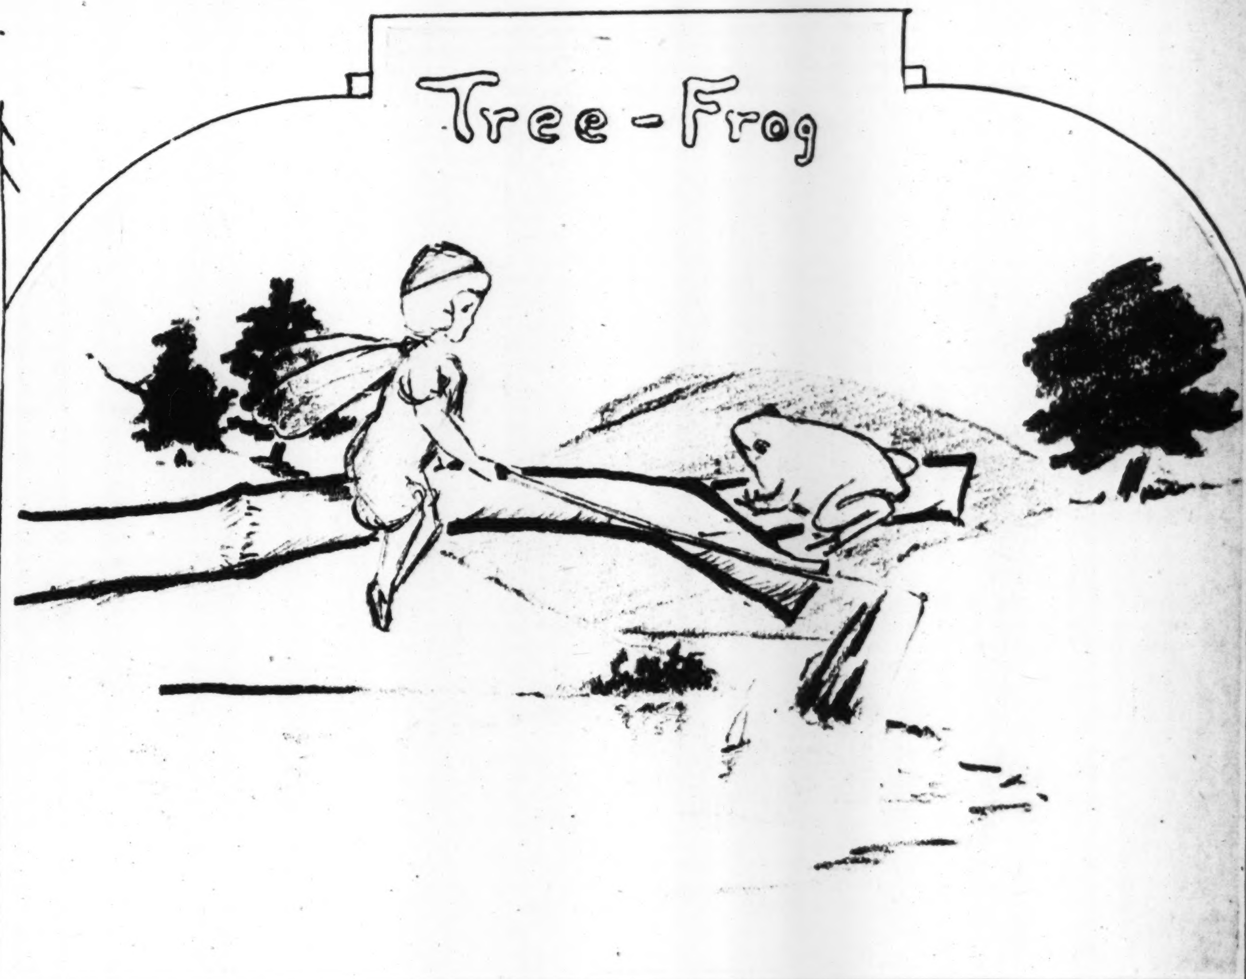
There they sat, keeping vigil through day and night in the burning sun and the sea-fogged darkness. Neighbors who had been honored by the order brought them food, consisting mostly of coffee and cake.

GREAT are Count Victor's plans at present. The Royal Order of the Rose is not to die. Victor will rent a 40-room mansion close to Beauley Manor—if he can get the money—to suffice for a palace at the moment. He will sue Price for $100,000! He will sue the Sheriff, the city, the sun, moon, stars, everything!

"The proceedings were illegal," says the Count. "I, as head of the house, was not a party to the suit. The sale was not properly advertised. There was only one bidder. I will file an appeal. I will sue! The higher court will find in our favor."

Unless the Appellate Division of a Staten Island court stays an order to dispossess Mrs. Beauley from her Slav Palace pending an appeal from the recent mortgage sale of the estate, the Queen is out of luck and the Royal Order of the Rose is in a thorny state.

Betty Ford, who was recently graduated from Leland Stanford University after three years of collegiate work and only three years' preparation, at the age of seventeen.



Drawing made by Betty Ford at the age of nine.

YOUNGEST STUDENT ever GRADUATED from Leland Stanford University

Betty Ford, Scion of a Missouri Family, Whose "Photographic Mind" Enabled Her to Read a Full Length Novel in an Afternoon at the Age of 4, Pronounced an Authentic Prodigy by Experts.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

SAN FRANCISCO, California.

A LITTLE girl of seven, with golden curls falling about her shoulders, sat reading in her room. After a time she had come to the end of her book, a volume of Victor Hugo, and a new problem presented itself. She had read intently every one of the 750 volumes in her parents' library.

It was early in the afternoon and she must read more. There remained unread only her father's Materia Medica. She was engrossed in that technical scientific work when her mother interrupted and decided, then and there, that it was time to call for expert advice.

The advice came from Professor Lewis I. Terman, head of the Department of Psychology of Leland Stanford University in California. After much study and examination, he pronounced the child one of the most extraordinary types of genius he had ever encountered. She at once became the center of study in his psychological laboratories and her course of study was carefully directed by scientists. This was ten years ago.

Today, at seventeen, the child prodigy, Betty Ford of San Francisco, scion of a widely-known Missouri family, has just achieved the distinction of being the youngest graduate ever to receive a diploma from Stanford University. She was awarded her sheepskin in June after only three years in school.

Professor Terman and the scientists he has brought from far and wide to watch her marvel at her "photographic mind" and her ability to remember facts.

At four years of age she read and understood a novel of 350 pages in an afternoon.

At six she was writing stories and verse on a typewriter.

Before she was seven she was reading—and enjoying—Hugo, Dickens, Eliot and Shakspeare.

Her seventh birthday found her with a vocabulary of 13,000 words, greater than that of the average college student. And she had read 750 books.

Today—at 17—she is writing a novel. She writes short stories, essays and verse. She paints and sketches, plays the piano and composes. As to knowledge, she is a veritable walking encyclopedia, crammed full of book learning on almost every subject under the sun. It is her peculiar form of genius to remember facts, but that does not mean that she has also creative genius. Indeed, she appears to have no more original ideas or ability to think than the average girl of her age.

At least that was the impression of this correspondent after visiting her recently and trying for three hours to draw from her something that savored of original thought.

Betty is going back to Stanford next semester to get her master's degree. Then she intends to embark upon a literary career.

With all her forays into academic fields and her mass of accumulated information, the girl is a simple, attractive, pleasure-loving, twentieth-century flapper. Prodigy she may be, but it does not detract from her love of the outdoors, her love of sports or her association with other young people.

SWIMMING and tennis are favorite recreations. She enjoys motoring in her runabout or tramping with her pet dog. She lays down no program of work for herself but labors with pen or typewriter when she is in the mood. Sometimes she writes for fifteen hours at a stretch if she is working on an absorbing phase of her novel or verse. The next day will find her driving or on the tennis court. Whatever the impulse of the day, Betty follows it. Be it work or play, her intensity is the same.

The Post-Dispatch correspondent found Betty Ford in a cozy little flat, high on the hills overlooking San Francisco Bay. A dainty young miss, with wistful blue eyes and an abundance of long golden hair wrapped tightly about her head. She was an attractive figure, in a white silk frock, with shoes and stockings to match.

A doting mother answered many of the questions pertaining to personal achievement, for modesty keeps the girl from speaking freely of her achievements.

The girl laughed aloud when she was asked what she thought of the modern flapper. "Me's her," she shot back in reply to the question, and then hastened to come to the defense of modern youth.

"I do not see why so much has to be written and said of young folks," she exclaimed. "From all that I can learn, young people of today are no more eager for fun or no more frivolous than were our elders. They may take their enjoyment in other ways, but for downright seriousness and earnestness and achievement, I believe the younger generation is giving a splendid account of itself and does not deserve the maligning that it is receiving from many quarters."

Betty is a granddaughter of Dr. William Humphrey Peake of Hannibal, Missouri. There are many relatives in that State and a number of family friends live in St. Louis. She is the only child of Dr. and Mrs. Campbell Ford and though her father holds a successful place in his profession, medicine has no appeal for the girl.

"I am interested only in the social side of father's profession," she said, when asked why she had not followed her father's footsteps. "The scientific side holds no attraction for me."

Just when Betty first was able to read, neither her father nor her mother seem to know. But long before she was three they were aware that she possessed a "photographic brain" which is one key to her extraordinary accomplishments.

"You ask me how we taught a child of three to read," her mother ponders, repeating the question. "Why, we never taught Betty to read. And we do not know just when she was able to read. We used to take her on our knees—her father and I—and read fairy tales to her. Childlike, she asked us to read and reread the same pages. Long before she was three we found that she could take the books up herself and read them without our help. It was apparent that as she had seen the printed word and heard it pronounced, at once the type made a photographic impression on her mind and the association was established."

She became an amazingly rapid reader, her mother says. So rapidly did she read that at four and a half years of age she read as much as 350 pages of a book in a day and retained the detail of everything she had read.

At six, she was presented with a discarded typewriter by a doting aunt.

"Of course I was delighted with it," Betty says. "The first thing I did was to bat out with two fingers letters to every cousin I could think of. And then when I ran out of cousins, I set out writing short stories and poetry."

"Yes, and about typing," her mother interrupts. "Betty found that using two fingers was an impediment, so to satisfy her we got her some printed lessons for the use of all fingers on the typewriter—instructions such as stenographers follow—and in no time she was a speedy typist."

When Mrs. Ford appealed to Professor Terman to assist this gifted child at the age of seven, Betty had read 750 books and was yearning for more. She had never been to school, nor had she received instruction from a tutor. Her wide knowledge of a dozen subjects all was gleaned by her reading. And she not only read everything on every subject that the family library afforded, but she retained the information she read and classified her facts in her mind.

Betty Ford at the age of four.

Professor Terman's examination gave her an intelligence rating of 188. Normal is 100.

It was even then, at the age of seven, that she attracted wide attention among scientists and much was written of her in the press.

It happened that at this time a mental prodigy at Harvard—William James Sidis—was astonishing his professors with a learned discussion of the Fourth Dimension at the age of 13. The boy had been tutored painstakingly. Little Miss Ford had received no instruction save what she got for herself from her books. Scientists, studying the two prodigies, pronounced the little San Francisco girl to be more extraordinary than the Harvard boy in many respects.

While scientists were making careful studies of little Betty Ford and discussing her remarkable attainments at gatherings of savants, Professor Terman prescribed a course of reading for the child and this she closely followed.

She had read practically everything in the works of Shakspeare, Dickens, George Eliot and Hugo before she was eight. At nine she came to enjoy detective stories—Conan Doyle's and others. And after she had read a few, she sat down at her typewriter and spent days pounding out detective yarns of her own.

At twelve she read French and German fluently. In arithmetic, history and geography she was equally proficient.

A year before she had received her first school instruction, starting in the high-school department of a girls' private school. Two years later she transferred to another girls' school and a year later passed the entrance examination to Stanford.

And in spite of her scholastic record at the university, she found time to participate actively in a variety of student activities, some athletic, others of a literary nature.

While her interests and ambitions are primarily in the literary field, she has not lost contact with the other sides of life and is well versed in politics, economics and social problems of the day. On these subjects, and others, she conversed with the correspondent, displaying, besides an amazing familiarity with facts, a keenness of mind and ability to think quickly.

She told of her admiration of President Hoover, of how she and hundreds of other Stanford co-eds had taken an active part in the President's campaign and followed the race from the Republican standard - bearer's Alma Mater.

"He is making a splendid President," she said. "His policies are wise and constructive."

"Are you a Republican or a Democrat?" she was asked.

"How can I be either," she shot back, "when I'll not be able to vote for four years more? I can't tell what I'll be then. But I think I shall be an independent."

She professes not to subscribe to the radical tendencies of some groups of college people, though she admits being keenly interested in the radical concepts of social and economic affairs.

"Who is your favorite author?" she was asked.

"If you mean of the moderns," she replied, "there's one of his books on the arm of the chair you're sitting in," and the interviewer glanced at a volume of William Butler Yeats.

"His concepts and his understanding clearly put him in the fore of all the moderns," she hastened to add. "But if you ask who my favorite of the earlier authors may be, I'll answer Shakspeare. And I'm very fond of Heine."

She professes to enjoy reading Rostand in the French.

At one side of the room stood the piano, open, with a difficult sonata on the keyboard.

Miss Ford reads the most difficult music at sight and composes considerable music.

"I adore Beethoven," she says, "and Chopin, too. They are my favorites."

AS VERSATILE as she is in music, just so is she in the other arts. She sketches and paints and does some sculpture. She is interested in the futuristic school, though it is not wholly to her liking.

"I expect that time will bring about some modification of the so-called modernistic school of art," she says. "The pendulum has swung wide in the futuristic direction but I think that before long it may go back to a more moderate mode of expression."

American history interests her most and Lincoln is her most cherished figure, but she professes a secret liking for the history of the Egyptians, and her mother, in an aside, ventured the fact that the girl is something of an Egyptologist.

But a literary career is to be Betty Ford's lifework and as soon as she finishes the novel she is writing she is going to start another.

She was asked if she followed a program, setting certain hours aside for writing. She scoffed at the idea.

"Remember that those who hold themselves to a rigid program of so many hours' work within so many hours are only writing best sellers of today. I must write as the impulse directs," she declared.

"Some days I do not write at all and others I start at 8 in the morning and write incessantly until 10 or 11 at night. That is the way to write."

She was asked whether she believed herself possessed of inherited literary talents.

"No one in my family, as far as I know, has ever written," she said. "I guess writing is just my own bent."

EDITING NOISES for the TALKING PICTURES

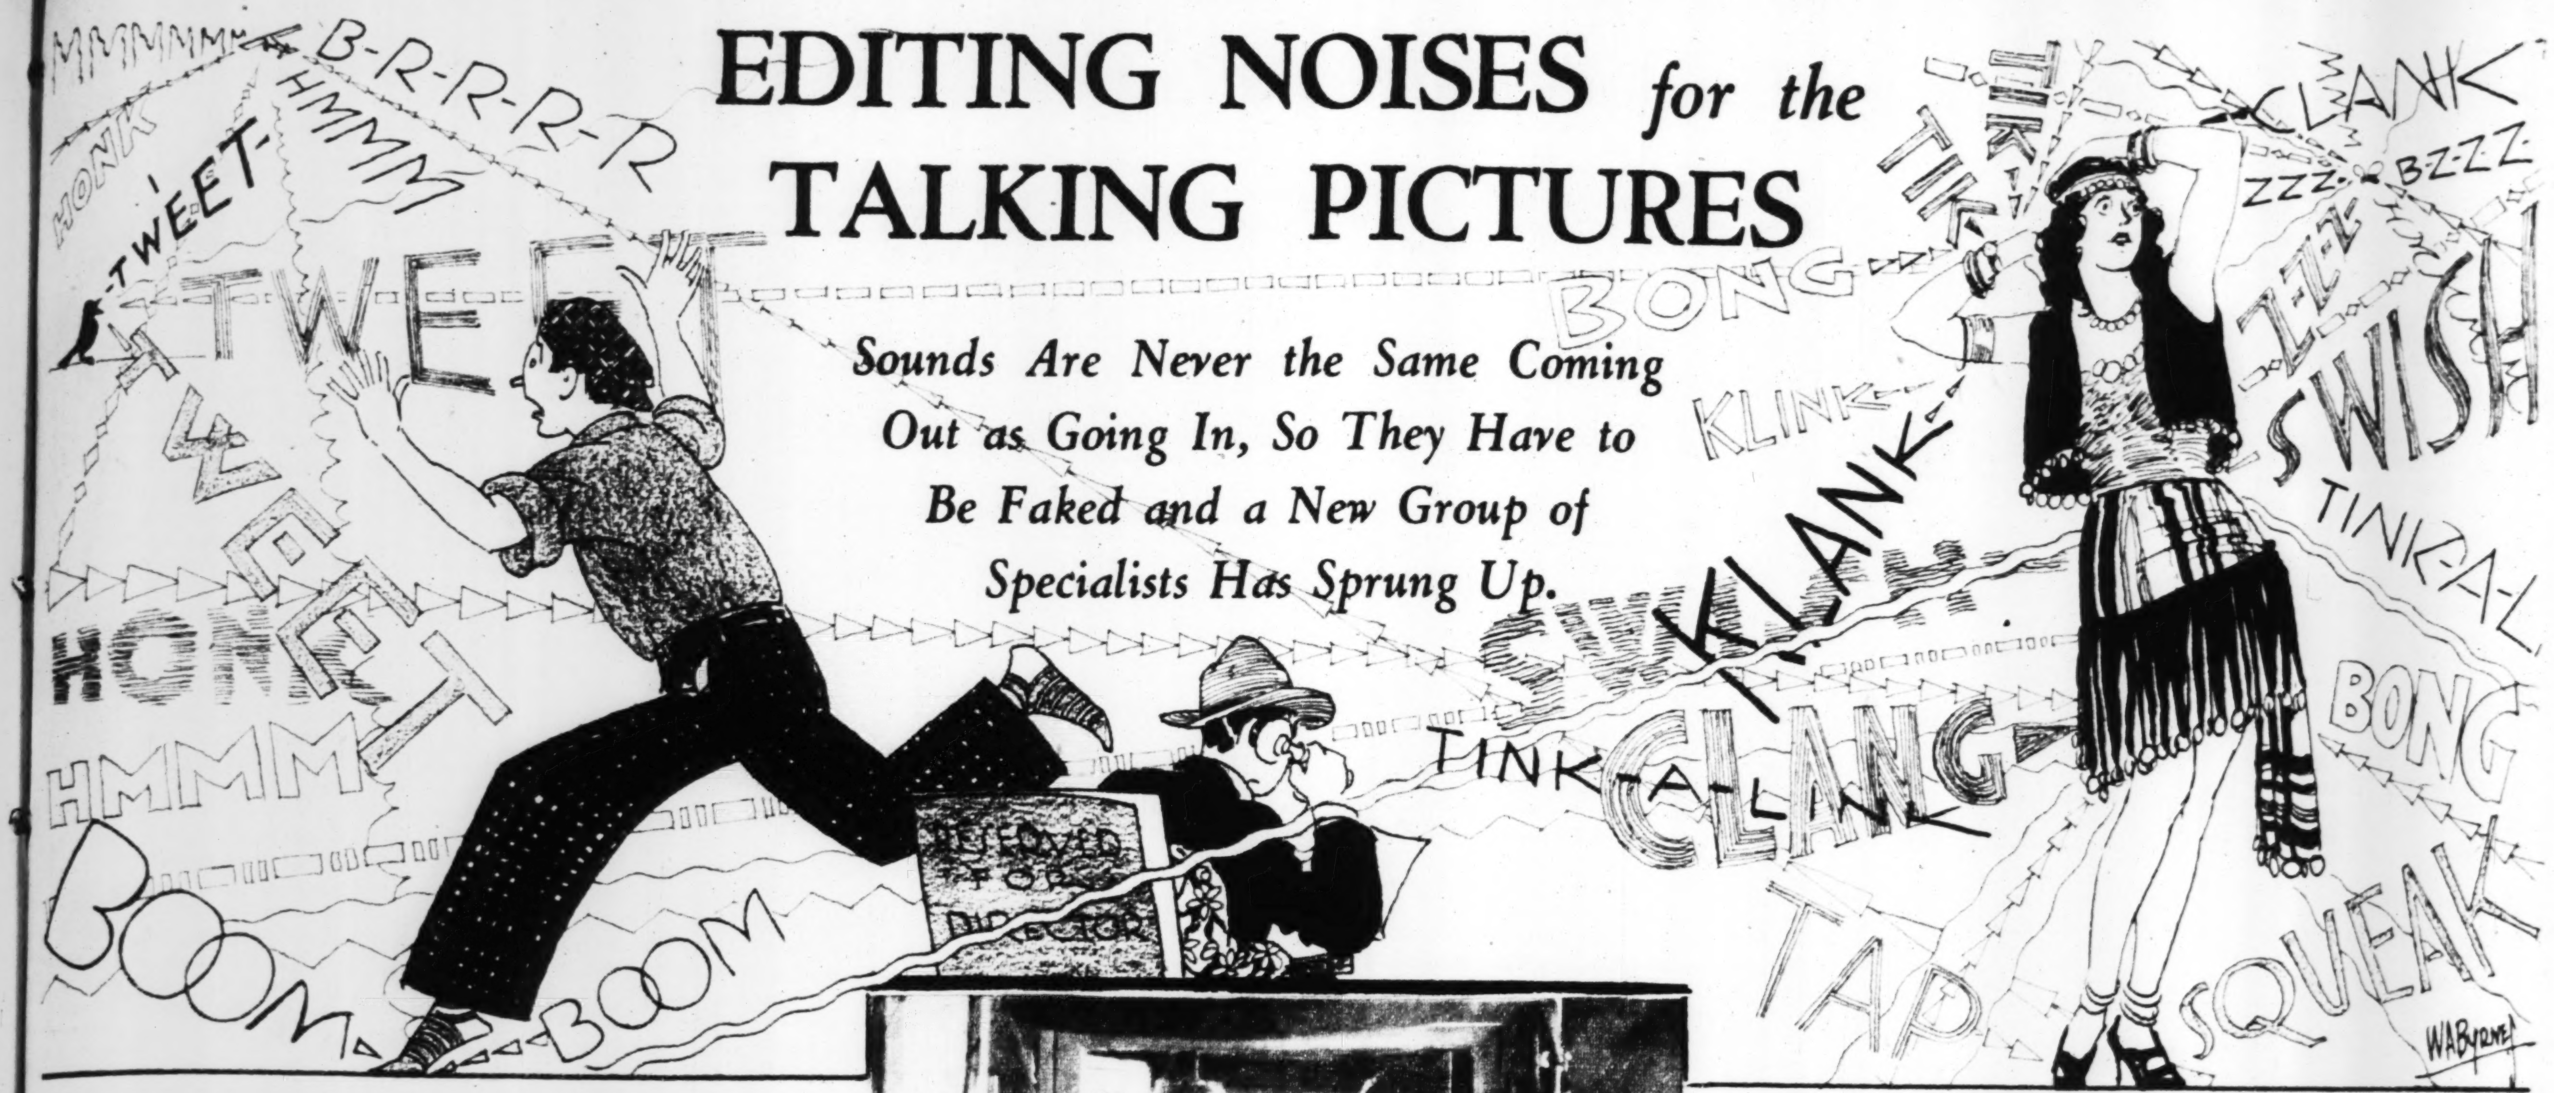
Sounds Are Never the Same Coming Out as Going In, So They Have to Be Faked and a New Group of Specialists Has Sprung Up.



By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

HOLLYWOOD, California.

DIRECTORS of talking pictures in Hollywood are in about the same predicament as the goat which whiled away an exuberant moment by butting over a beehive and then became entangled in a barbed-wire fence while trying to depart.

Their most carefully-laid plans for bottling common, every-day sounds are being knocked silly by vagaries of the microphone. The sounds which readily are distinguishable by the ear to be the authentic noises of railway trains, the firing of machine guns, the pounding of horses' hoofs and the like, record something like the booming of hurricanes sweeping in from the Caribbean Sea or the bark of German Big Berthas. Noises will not come out of the recording devices the way they went in.

At the Pathe studio the other day a middle-aged man in his sock feet romped across a sound-proof stage pulling a roller skate, to which was attached a short piece of piping, while a small crowd of studio employes looked on.

"Nutty?" a newspaper reporter asked.

"Sh-h-h!" a carpenter replied. "He's a train."

"What kind of a train?"

"Railroad train. Can't you get the sound?"

Presently the reporter caught it. There was the tick-a-luck, tick-a-luck, tick-a-luck of iron wheels striking the joints of rails, and the rumbling of coaches and Pullman cars. The news writer approached the director.

"Why not record the sound of a real train?" he asked. "Wouldn't that be better than this?"

"Brother," he replied, "we tried it. What came from the projected film was reminiscent of high tide in a boiler works, with the battle of the Marne and the bedlam of a national convention thrown in. It didn't sound any more like a train than Niagara Falls sounds like a babbling brook. It was just a bombilation which threatened to blow out the tubes. But this shoeless man dragging the roller skate—Ah, wait till you hear!"

ON ANOTHER stage a man with two cocoanut shells was beating a rhythmical cloppety-clop, cloppety-clop in a bed of sand.

"What's he making?" the reporter asked.

"What's the matter with your ears?" an electrician replied. "Can't you hear a horse a-gallopin'?"

The microphone was recording it all. The real sound of horses' hoofs would not do. The intonation was too great.

Scott Littleton, a director of sound effects, wanted to get the patter of little French heels as worn in a scene by Phyllis Haver. Every kind of shoe was tried without success. Then the problem was solved by using an ordinary block of wood to do the heel-and-toe movement on the floor—softened, of course, to meet the requirements of the microphone.

The clanking of bracelets on a girl's wrists "pick up," so rubber jewelry is now being substituted. The swish-swish of stockings worn by a knock-kneed girl acting as maid recently caused a scene to be re-shot.

The glub-glub of a water bottle at the side of a stage caused another scene to be retaken. The crackling of a newspaper sounds like the noise of blazing logs in a fireplace, hence newspapers are dampened now before being handled. The rustle of silken skirts, the slitting of an envelope, the scratch-scratch-scratch of a dog's toenails on wooden flooring, the jingling of silver coins, the patter of rain on a window sill—all pick up when they are not wanted.

During the filming of a Laura La Plante picture at Universal City recently Director Pollard was disturbed by a hissing sound which apparently came from Miss La Plante's teeth.

"I did not know," he said acidly, "that you try to whistle when you speak. Why don't you go to a dentist?"

"I don't whistle through my teeth!" the blonde star replied, somewhat haughtily.

The scenes were shot again and when the film was projected there still were those tiny cheeps. Then Miss La Plante was disturbed.

"Do I really do that?" she asked perplexedly.

It seemed that she did until an electrician discovered that a flock of English sparrows was flitting about in the eaves and supplying chirps precisely where they were most undesirable.

William DeMille directing a talking picture play.

"THESE things drive us to desperation!" a director exclaimed. "The microphone gets noises that ordinarily we pay no attention to at all, and they are hurled back by the recording devices, amplified till they sound ridiculous. Mike has no selective ear whatever."

Out at Culver City not long ago a group of men went out into a field adjoining one of the studios and began shooting pistols, which presently brought a detachment of police in a hurry-up call.

"What's the big idea?" asked the first cop to arrive.

"Oh," replied one of the racketeers, "we are chasing meadowlarks!"

"Doing what?"

"Chasing meadowlarks!"

"Is zat so!" said the minion of the law. "Well, come on over to the station house and tell that to the Sergeant. Maybe he can find you some nice blue elephants and some pink monkeys to chase. It's against the law to discharge firearms inside the city limits. Get the wagon, Bill!"

But the actor was telling the truth. The men really were chasing meadowlarks, because the cries of the birds were being recorded in a snow scene made out-of-doors. And meadowlarks blithely singing in the snow is a bit unreal for picture purposes. So they had to be chased away, and the men with the pistols were supplying the fright.

This thing of making sound pictures out-of-doors brings all manner of grief. Colleen Moore, for instance, was doing a somewhat impressive bit of acting in one of the foothills back of Hollywood. The company stood silently watching as she spoke her lines. The little Irish actress threw her whole soul into the scene, pleading passionately to have her way.

Then, right in the midst of it all, a donkey, which had been complacently watching and listening, got tired or bored or something and emitted a resonant aw-hee, aw-hee, aw-hee, aw-w-w-w!

Which broke up the show.

Gloria Swanson, with Robert Ames and William Holden, making a scene in "The Trespasser." Miss Swanson's first talking picture.

The whole scene had to be retaken. The piece of film was cut, and now Miss Moore has a perfectly good donkey's bray, for sale or rent to any studio which may need one. And this isn't an idle thought, either.

During the filming of a picture telling a romance in Arizona not long ago a burro's bray was needed. One of these long-eared beasts, which had been trained to bray on command, was brought in. The stage was set and the act started. But the glare of electric lights confused the donkey, and when it received the signal to do its stuff it went dumb.

Prodding, punching and even the administration of several resounding whacks with a board failed to loosen the burro's desert cry. When the lights were turned off the creature took its cue readily, but it stubbornly refused to make a noise so long as it faced a glare. Just as the deadlock became hopeless a Mexican stepped forward and said:

"Me bray for you."

"You'll what?"

"Me bray for you," he repeated. And he let loose the war cry or mating call or whatever it is that burros do best, and did it so realistically that he got the burro's job. He did $25 worth of braying and then was requisitioned by another studio.

The incident, it developed, is to play a rather important part henceforth in the making of sound pictures. Casting directors have started making lists of bird and animal imitators. They have been besieged by persons who offer to bark like a dog, moo like a cow, crow like a rooster and gobble like a turkey. One man offers the caw of a crow, another the jabbering of a parrot. A third, for $10, will yap like a seal, provided he doesn't have to yap more than one day. Two days' yapping he values at $25.

However, to the credit of the picture makers, it may be said these doubles are to be used only as last resorts. There are dozens of yappers and barkers and mooers sitting around waiting for jobs.

STUDIO prop men are canning all the noises possible for future use. One company in particular already has a flash of lightning with the resultant peal of thunder. Alongside the lightning film is another preserving the twitter of canary birds. On the same shelf are the patter of rain upon a roof, the screams of seagulls, the cackle of hens, the roar of a train (made with that aforementioned roller skate and piece of pipe), the bedlam of street traffic and the evening symphony of bullfrogs in a Mississippi bayou. Another company has the boom of Big Ben, the bell that strikes the hour for London from the Houses of Parliament. The prop men expect eventually to have all the queer noises in existence canned, labeled and ready for projection.

Right now, however, the elimination of extraneous sounds is the principal object of activity. Almost every picture studio in Hollywood has erected a sound-proof stage—which, however, proves not to be sound-proof at all. For example, none has succeeded in excluding the rhythmical whirr of passing airplane motors. Thousands of dollars have been wasted by picture producers when, on running a day's rushes in projection rooms, they found that in the midst of important scenes the t-r-r-r-r-r-r-r-r of a plane far overhead had been recorded and scene after scene would have to be made over again. The motor exhausts, it appears, set in motion sound or air waves which vibrate buildings in much the same way that steps of a horse, or even of a dog, trotting across a steel bridge, cause the whole structure to sway.

This trouble with planes became so acute recently that a conference was called between the Department of Commerce, the Association of Motion Picture Producers and the Aircraft Operators' Association to devise some means of relief. An agreement was reached whereby all airships now must avoid the sound stages by at least 2500 feet in any straight line whenever a captive balloon is displayed as a warning that talkies are being made. The gas bag is to be 15 feet in diameter, red-orange in color, with at least one 1000-watt incandescent bulb attached to the highest point for night signaling. Red-orange streamers also are to be attached to the cables which serve as moorings for the balloons. Violations of the agreement are to be reported to the Department of Commerce, aeronautic branch, which will mete out penalties.

Sounds, more sounds—offensive and inordinate sounds—harass the making of talkies outdoors. Fred Niblo was directing Jack Gilbert and Eleanor Boardman in a sizzling hot love scene on a placid synthetic lake on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot the other day. Gilbert took the heroine tenderly in his arms, smoothed her golden tresses and was murmuring a few dulcet lines in her shell-like ear when a dominecker rooster a short distance away arose in his majesty and delivered an oration!

"Cock-a-doodle-doo-o-o-o!"

Then he strutted nonchalantly away.

Niblo, being a forebearing gentleman, merely turned red in the face and ordered the scene retaken. He did not voice what obviously was in his mind. There were ladies present.

The directors frankly admit that there are a lot of unsolved problems in sound pictures and in some instances the operators are absolutely stumped.

For instance, a Federal law prohibits photographing real money in films. Heretofore stage money has been used. But there are thousands of persons who can tell whether a silver coin is good or bad by its clink as it hits the counter. Now the studios are trying to manufacture money which cannot be technically called counterfeit, yet which looks like actual money and will give the proper jingle when picked up by the microphone.

They are trying, too, to get the noise of a machine gun properly canned. One of the most realistic effects recently obtained was discovered purely by accident at a Culver City studio when William Boyd tossed away a handful of peanuts, which landed on the head of a snare drum.

"That's a stale bunch of peanuts!" exclaimed Boyd.

"Peanuts your eye!" came back the director. "That's the machine gun we've been looking for!"

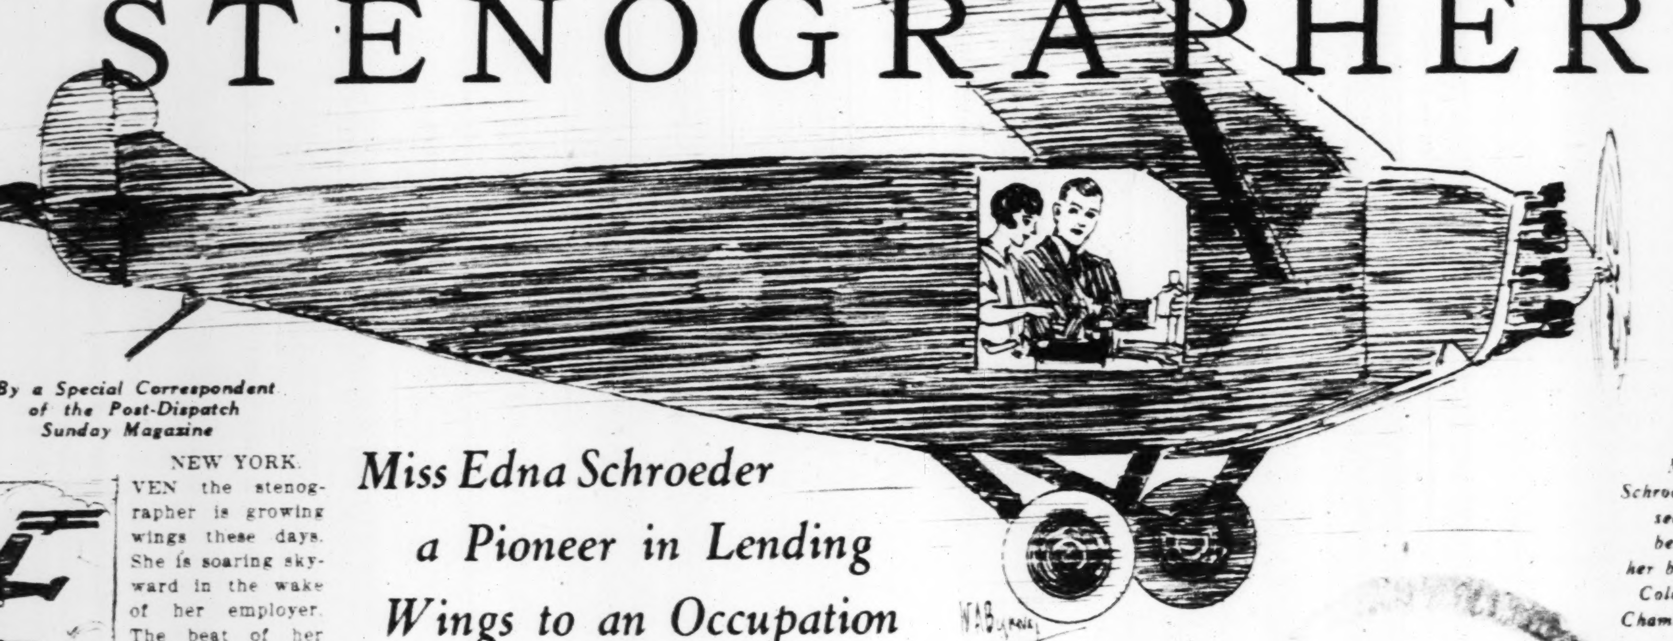
EXPERIMENTS followed. Carol Lombard, actress, contributed some aspirin tablets; Al Smiley, the prop boy, a pair of dice, and Owen Moore an electric fan which blew the objects onto the drum with precisely the right amount of force. Through this medium the machine-gun fire was realistically recorded.

Probably the most glaring failure scored was in an attempt to record the sound of a stenographer popping a wad of chewing gum. The noise sounded like the crack of a Springfield .30-30. Any girl who popped gum that loud would have been expelled from a community for disturbing the peace.

The oddest talkie contract awarded in Hollywood this year went to Oscar Smith, a Negro, because he stutters. Oscar couldn't spell "probably" in a week. A lifetime would be required for him to repeat Billy Baxter's speech about "our newly-acquired possessions, the Philippines," being "a land of perpetual plenty." Paradoxically, Oscar was given a talkie contract because he couldn't talk. But his stutter is his fortune and will go into the films.

"Hot d-d-d-d-dog!" he patters. "I shore g-g-g-got me a j-j-j-job in pup-pup-pictures! And I d-d-don't m-m-m-mean, ah, oh, m-m-maybe."

The SKY-RIDING STENOGRAPHER



Miss Edna Schroeder a Pioneer in Lending Wings to an Occupation Once Considered Purely Sedentary.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

EVEN the stenographer is growing wings these days. She is soaring skyward in the wake of her employer. The beat of her typewriter provides a fitting counterpoint to the roar of plane motors as she pounds out, "In reply to yours, etc."

As yet she is a pioneer. In fact, so far as is known, there is only one of her, and that one is Miss Edna Schroeder, who is secretary to Colonel Clarence D. Chamberlin. But since Miss Schroeder has pioneered, others will follow. A number of companies have business planes and sooner or later they will probably install stenographers in order to take advantage of the hours spent in flying across country from one appointment to another.

So new vistas open out for the trim young person whose view has hitherto been confined to the walls of surrounding skyscrapers. She will only have to look up to see a whole panorama of earth and sky unroll.

This picture has its appeal. When Colonel Chamberlin, who flew to Europe with Charles Levine, advertised for an air stenographer, he received more than a thousand applications. They ranged in kind and age from the flapper of 17 to elderly school teachers, who proposed to give up their profession for a more adventurous career.

Miss Schroeder was chosen because she seemed most fitted for the job. She had had four years' experience in flying as a passenger in various type planes. She has poise, a calm temperament—one of the qualifications Chamberlin stressed. But, most important, she had worked for several aviation companies and was familiar with the technical language of the aviator. She is crazy about her job and wouldn't think of trading it for any other job she ever heard of. When she is not in the air she is at the offices of the Crescent Aircraft Corporation here, the company with which Chamberlin is connected. It was there that she described her work to an interviewer:

"I started flying about four years ago. I always used my spare time to go to the airports for joy hops. When I began to work, I went to the Anthony Fokker Aircraft Corporation for an office job. I had learned that they were very nice about giving their employes a chance to fly, and I was determined to fly. I was there for two years, and I never missed a chance to go up if I could help it.

"I subsequently went to the General Aircraft Company and the Gates Aircraft Company, where I took charge of the office and the bookkeeping. My work with these concerns gave me an unusual opportunity to learn every phase of the industry, even its technical side."

ON SEVERAL occasions, when Miss Schroeder was working for the Fokker company, she met Chamberlin on a flying field near New York. When she read that he wanted a flying stenographer to accompany him on his trips, she immediately went to see him about it. While of the thousand who had applied to him there were a few who had had flying experience, none had so complete a knowledge of the aircraft industry as Miss Schroeder. Since he was also personally aware of her high standing with aircraft executives, he gave her the job.

"Did my family object?" she repeated the question. "Not at all. They like to fly themselves, my mother as well, and they were very happy to have me get the job. They fully realize that it is a wonderful chance and that the association with Colonel Chamberlin is worth a great deal. He has already let me handle the controls of the machine, and I hope soon to be able to fly solo. Then, if Colonel Chamberlin should be away on a trip and need my services, I could fly to whatever part of the country he might be. I am very anxious to pilot my own plane some day. There are several ways in which one can earn extra money when one has a machine.

"I've been working in the airplane for a few weeks, and I haven't found it any harder than working on the ground. If anything, it's pleasanter. Colonel Chamberlin has had a special typewriter built and he has also installed headpieces. The whirring of the machines makes so much noise that one couldn't accomplish very much without them.

"There is plenty of room there, too, for a filing cabinet and some easy chairs for additional passengers. It's just as comfortable and as businesslike as any modern office."

Thus far Miss Schroeder has flown only comparatively short distances, and she has arrived home every night at virtually her customary dinner hour. But Colonel Chamberlin believes he will soon be needing her for longer trips and that she will have to do more flying than she now does. Too, he has announced that he will make a second flight across the Atlantic in a large, tri-motored amphibian plane. So, if she is lucky, Miss Schroeder may become the first air secretary to cross the ocean by plane.

"There is going to be a big field for the flying stenographer," Chamberlin says. "Airplanes are now being used for various commercial purposes, and even executives and salesmen are taking advantage of them for business trips. The time of a business man is very valuable, and if he has some important work to do he will have to attend to it while flying. We have long had stenographers on the trains and steamships and there is no doubt but that they will be needed in the airplanes.

Clarence Chamberlin.

Miss Schroeder seated beside her boss, Colonel Chamberlin.

"I was gratified to see such an overwhelming response to my request for a flying stenographer. Girls from all parts of the country wanted to go in for flying. Some of them were already going to flying schools.

"Of course, the girl who hopes to qualify as a flying stenographer must have steady nerves, good health and a clear brain. Any girl who is timid, who gives way to tears, or whose nerves are always on edge cannot hope to fill such a position. A clock-watcher won't do, either, for she must be prepared to work all hours, including Sundays and holidays. The weather? That doesn't make any difference. We fly even in heavy rainstorms."

AMONG the letters from applicants this one in particular took Chamberlin's fancy:

"New York City.—Dear Colonel Chamberlin: Since the age of 16 I have been associated with a flying outfit, but have not as yet soloed, owing to reverses in the organization itself. I always arranged to be at the flying field once during the week, then—the weather would intervene. My chances for disappointment were further augmented by the large number of students who wait there for instruction.

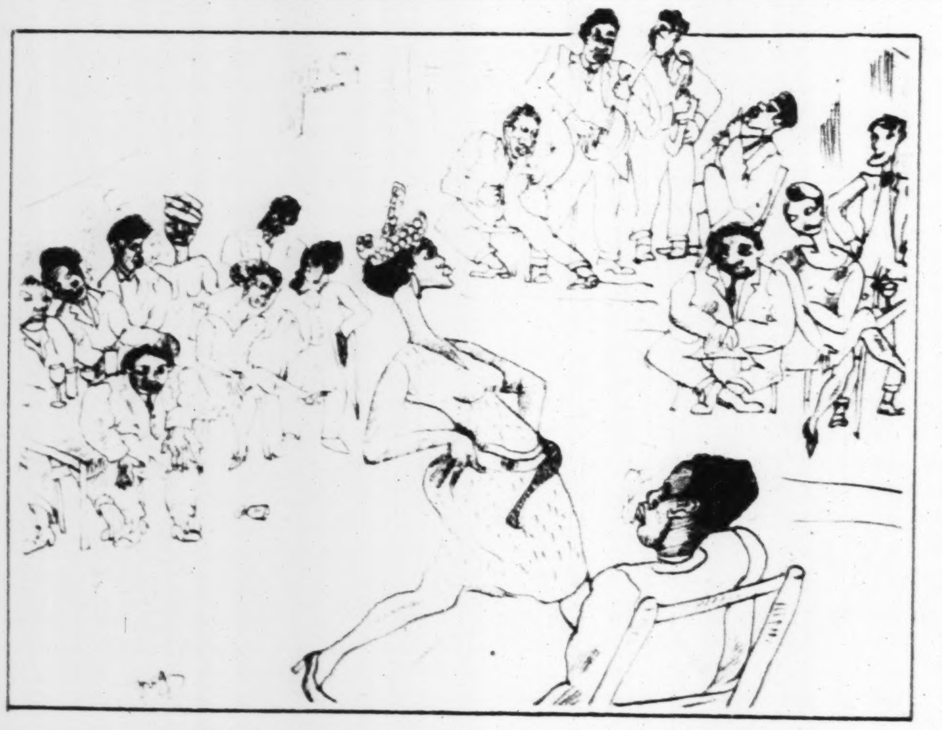
"I am 17 1-2 years old and am now employed as a reception clerk, having been advanced after three years of service in the organization. I would be willing to leave my present position for the element I love. I will accept a very modest salary, though it may be less than my present salary.

"I am very ambitious to become an aeronautical engineer, and I have been reading books and general data on aeronautics and have a fair knowledge of its technical terms and problems. I can, incidentally, also relieve you at the stick. This would not, as you understand, be of great benefit to you, but of special favor to me. Very truly yours, MISS T. D."

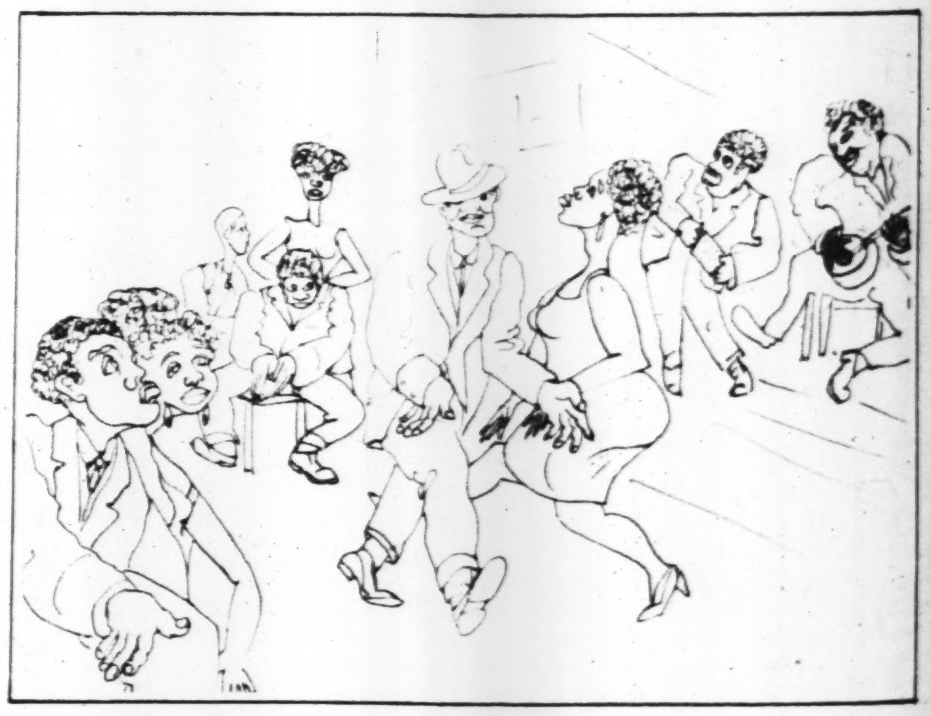
Chamberlin's experience is proof that there are more than enough women to fill any possible positions in the air that may open up in the future. They want to leave office routine behind and go adventuring, even though it means taking their typewriters with them.

THE WEST INDIAN JUNGLE COMES TO PARIS

How a Political Maneuver Resulted in Establishing One of the Most Bizarre Dance Halls in the French Capital.



A Martinique woman in a Pas Seul. Drawing by Greg.



"The Shaker," a triumph for both dancers and orchestra.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

PARIS.

THE West Indian jungle has come to Paris with all its primitive passions and abandon and Paris has opened wide its welcoming arms. As the result of what started out to be a political maneuver of a Martinique Negro trying to get himself appointed a Deputy for his native island, a secluded little wine shop in the Rue Blomet has grown and blossomed in the course of two years into one of the highest of all high lights in this scintillating capital. It is officially called the "Bar Colonial." A pompous little doorman wears the letters emblazoned in gold across the front of his cap. It is more familiarly known hereabouts as the "Bal Negre," but the name doesn't matter a great deal. Under any name it would be just as weird and savage and just as easily located, for there is no other place quite like it in the world.

The "Bar Colonial," or the "Bal Negre," if you prefer, is a sort of meeting ground for civilization and savagery. It is a gala night life center, where blase white men and women may "go native" if the spirit moves them to do so, and where the native may remain so and follow whatever impulse he may wish to express through his natural medium of expression—the dance. Its atmosphere is that of tropical unrestraint. There are no bouncers or boundaries, no speed limits applying either to motors or morals. And there is no color line. Whites and blacks and those of all intermediate shades mingle nightly in a riotous saturnalia of the jungle.

The Bal Negre had its beginning early in 1928. It was then merely one of those countless little drinking places, or bistros, of the lower order, where working people foregather for a cup of coffee or a glass of beer or wine. It wasn't even a prosperous bistro. It scarcely brought a living to its owner, a coffee-colored gentleman from the island of Martinique. Indeed, he was so discouraged with business that he determined to launch upon a career in politics, and though he didn't know it at the time, with that decision his fortune was made.

With political expediency in view, he sent out invitations one day to all his fellow countrymen, of whom there are a great number in Paris. He asked them to come to his bistro a few nights later and bring with them all their friends and acquaintances hailing from the fair island of Martinique.

HIS guests came and he assembled them in a large dancing room at the rear of his shop. Then extra waiters brought trays laden with all manner of good things to drink. The mystified guests accepted and wondered what it was all about. Their host then went among them shaking hands and seeking introductions to all he did not know personally. As the evening wore on and the company grew livelier, somebody started a native song. The tune was taken up by others. Then, spurred by the harmony, a slim "high yaller" girl sprang to the floor and began a dance. In a few minutes the floor was crowded with dancers and joy was unconfined, to say the least. Under the influence of song and liquor and personal contact, these natives of Martinique became as they were in the old jungle days. The veneer and affectations born of their sojourn here dropped away and they danced "native."

It was a gala evening, and when closing time arrived their host sent them home with courtly adieus and an invitation to return the following Thursday. They came back, of course, again filling the place to overflowing, and this time many brought their musical instruments. After a few drinks the host explained his political plans and was warmly applauded. The meeting was more riotous than before, and when it was over its permanence was assured. The guests demanded en masse that the affair be made a weekly event and that they be allowed to pay for their own drinks. Still intent upon a political career, the host agreed. It seemed to offer a good way to keep his henchmen close at hand, and would be profitable besides.

Word soon got about that an extraordinary amusement center was flourishing in the Rue Blomet. There are many Negroes in Paris besides those from Martinique. There are African Negroes, French Colony Negroes and Negroes from the United States, an army of great size, consisting mostly of domestics, chauffeurs, musicians and soldiers. They soon got wind of a ball held by others of their color and flocked to it in such numbers that it had to be made something more than a weekly event. First it was extended to three nights a week and then to every night.

The proprietor of the establishment quickly forgot his dream of politics and busied himself with looking after his new gold mine.

THEN the art colony of Montparnasse heard about it, and the Bal Negre was "made." Despite all the wild stories that circulate in the world at large and America in particular, Paris becomes at times a very dull place for its inhabitants. Especially does the art colony become bored and eager for something new. Here was an opportunity. Within a month after the Bal Negre had been established it had become quite the thing in Montparnasse circles to visit the ball. Poets and painters and their associates came in ever-increasing numbers. Then the Parisians of wealth from the "right bank," more bored even than the artistic colony on the left, began to come, and continued to do so until the narrow little street near the dance hall was filled nightly with long lines of parked Hispano-Suizas, Rolls-Royces and other cars of the sort that bear rich people on their hard way through life. Such was the origin and flight to fame of the Bal Negre.

Now, in the summer of 1929, the ball is an institution. Pretty soon the sight-seeing buses, with their loads of tourists, will drive past the door and

Gene Howe—and How He Got Famous in his Own Right

Deliberate and Complicated Efforts to Attract Attention Only Kicked Up Dust in Amarillo, Texas, but When He Jumped on Lindbergh and Mary Garden the Whole Country Took Notice.

Gene Howe, son of Ed Howe.

By THOMAS DAWSON
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

AMARILLO, Texas.

FOR five painstaking years, Gene Howe, Amarillo editor and columnist, stormed the portals of notoriety by giving away dog collars, elaborate floral displays, $10 bills.

The son of old "Ed" Howe, Kansas author-editor and seer of Potato Hill, he was determined to be famous in his own right. He dreamed, indeed, of being talked of in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, perhaps even in Europe. He lay awake at night thinking up dodges to attract attention to himself and his newspaper column.

Month after month, year after year, Howe religiously conned textbooks on publicity and attempted to translate their precepts into practice. But the dust he kicked up was merely local dust.

Then, on two occasions, Gene Howe forgot all his textbook precepts and, losing his temper, poured forth bitter and angry words. The first time he pounded out scorching diatribes against Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, declaring that Lindbergh, among other things, was "a smart alec with the big head." The second time he tackled, with denunciatory and contemptuous epithets, Mary Garden and the Chicago Grand Opera Company.

On both occasions, his name was flashed from one end of the country to the other, and carried even in dispatches to London, Paris, Rome. His calculated gestures at publicity had brought him only the attention of Amarillo. But the loss of his temper, on two unwitting occasions, made him a celebrity.

FORTY-THREE years old, Howe today confesses to a sense of being stunned when he thinks of "the Lindbergh incident" and of "the Mary Garden incident." He is still astonished that those two affairs focussed on him, for a brief two days, the eyes of the world. The publicity books, counseling forethought and tact, had not prepared him for the consequences of two bursts of indignation.

"I still don't understand all the commotion I caused," Howe, a semibald man who incessantly smokes cigarettes, said to this correspondent. "In my column, which is supposedly written by a burlesque figure named 'Kernel E. Rasmus Tack' and which is captioned 'The Tactless Texan,' I have pointed out for years that everything I do is purely a matter of business—simply advertisement of myself, the column and the newspaper.

"But the Lindbergh business was different. It really got under my skin. I forgot all about self-advertisement when I wrote against Lindbergh. My associates advised me not to print the comments because they believed that criticism of Lindbergh would sink me and the paper. But I was really riled and I decided to go ahead.

"It was the same with Mary Garden. Certain of my friends told me it would be bad taste to attack Mary Garden in my column, but I had sat through that terrible curtailed performance of Thais and I knew it was an insult to Amarillo and also to me, who had written glowing advance publicity for the performance for six weeks. I got some extremely bitter letters on both occasions, but I also got batches of mail approving my stand. And under the same circumstances, I'd do again just what I did."

What Gene Howe and Amarillo call "the Lindbergh incident" took place as follows: News reached Amarillo on May 11, 1928, that Lindbergh would fly over the town the next day but would not land until he reached Clovis, N. M. Certain Amarillo groups immediately wired Colonel Lindbergh, urging him to land in Amarillo. No answer was received to the telegram. The next day Lindbergh circled the town in his plane, landed, warned several youngsters not to get near the propeller, and immediately took off.

That afternoon, Howe ran the following in his column:

"Well, folks, I'm treading on dangerous ground this evening, but there's something rankling in my breast and I must get it out. I refer to the manner in which Mr. Lindbergh poured in on us.

"As far as I personally am concerned, Mr. Lindbergh need never come back. Amarillo was here before he was born and will be here long after he is dead. We can keep on growing and expanding and getting along about as well as most cities do if we never see or hear anything more about him.

"Personally, I think he has become a smart alec and the flattery has turned his head.

"Lindbergh was flying across the country and evidently planned to come through Amarillo. Mayor Bevins and the Globe wired him an invitation to stop here. He didn't even have the courtesy to reply. At Wichita he told the reporters he was headed for Clovis, N. M., and that he would not stop at Amarillo. This was wired to our office.

"AND then what did he do? He got up at daylight the next morning and came straight here. And, furthermore, he circled over Amarillo two times before he landed. The only purpose for this was that he wanted to attract attention and have people hurry-skurry out to the flying field to gape at him. If he had wanted to slip in and out of Amarillo unnoticed, he certainly wouldn't have done some stunt flying over the city before he landed.

"'I'm Lindbergh the Great,' he as much as stated. 'You may come out and look at me, now that I'm here.'

"As far as I am concerned, he can go and jump in the first lake he comes to. It wouldn't have hurt him a bit to have let people here know that he intended to land in Amarillo. And if there is any courtesy in his makeup he should at least have replied to the very urgent invitation he received from Mayor Bevins.

Gene Howe's synthetic family which figures frequently in his columns. He also has a real wife and family.

"Flattery and publicity have ruined Lindbergh the same as they ruin most persons they touch. His stunt is going about doing the very things that will attract attention and then when people he has attracted gather around he acts bored and blase.

"That is exactly what he did here. He stunted over town and then when a few people hurried out to see him he acted like he was annoyed by the rush.

"Lindbergh has flown over a large part of the world. He has visited most every hamlet and village on this continent. He even has been down in Mexico and in South America and Cuba. He was polite to the Mexicans and the Cubans and the Nicaraguans and the others, but up here in this country he thinks it a fine joke to be impolite and discourteous to a community of 40,000 Texans.

"All the trouble with Lindy is, he is a youth who has the big head. And his head is getting bigger and bigger. As far as me and the Mayor are concerned, Mr. Lindbergh will get no more invitations to visit Amarillo. Some of the hero-worshipers might welcome the opportunity to grovel at his feet, but personally I'm a free-blown Texan who ain't running after nobody. If I never see Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, B. H., again, that will be too soon."

Mary Garden.

Subscribers, following the appearance of the newspaper on the street, began to pour into Howe's office. Some wanted to shake his hand. Others wanted to defend Lindbergh. Howe's home telephone rang the better part of the night. The next morning a man from St. Louis called him on the long-distance telephone and berated him, Howe says, profanely. He put down the receiver and the phone rang again. This time it was a man from Omaha, commending him. When he reached his office, his desk was piled high with telegrams. Some of them carried congratulations. Others called him names. Howe again took up the cudgel the next day, pointing out that Lindbergh, calling without announcement at Amarillo, had failed to stop at Clovis, N. M., a scheduled landing place, where 20,000 had gathered to see him. Day after day, long after it had been dropped by the outside world, Amarillo's "Lindbergh incident" was kept alive in Howe's column. Then Lindbergh called again at Amarillo and sent word to Howe that he regretted what had happened.

Howe immediately dropped the attack and wrote as follows:

"Folks, if there ever was anyone who came through like a gentleman and a white man, it was the man who flew the Atlantic. He said there were no sore spots on him, that he held nothing but good will towards the newspaper man who said he had the swell-head and was so generous as to say that possibly he might have brought it on himself. He said that he did not know he was to stop at Clovis; that he never received the telegrams sent to him from Amarillo; that the reason he circled Amarillo was not to show off, but because he was impressed by Amarillo's size. He circled the town to look us over and landed to investigate our landing field, looking forward to the time when we may have air busses here on their way to and from Los Angeles and New York.

"COLONEL LINDBERGH said he might have spoken rather abruptly or harshly to the boys who congregated around the machine, but that he was in mortal fear of someone getting killed by his propeller.

". . . . I said he had proved he was a scholar and a gentleman and that instead of having a big head he had proved that he had a big mind and broad nature. No one could have acted nicer about it, and I'm for him from now on about one hundred thousand per cent. I was just that much wrong about him. I'm even going to get his picture and hang it up in my office.

"Whew, but I had a close call. Why, if the folks had kept going at the pace they were going when they were the maddest, it might have cost me my job."

Thus ended the Howe-Lindbergh affair, with expressions of regret and best wishes on both sides. But no regrets, thus far, have been expressed in the Howe-Mary Garden episode, which occurred some eight months later.

Amarillo, a grown-up cow and oil town, takes its grand opera seriously. As a community it does not, admittedly, know much about opera. But its seriousness is the more intense for this reason. Hence its willingness to guarantee $16,000 for a one-night performance of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, with Mary Garden, in Thais. Dallas and El Paso had heard the Chicago Grand Opera Company, so why shouldn't Amarillo? The cattle and oil millionaires of Amarillo dug down in their pockets and posted the guarantee and Amarillo looked forward to grand opera and, particularly, the opera ballet.

But somewhere there was a hitch in certain proceedings. Howe said the opera company agent had promised the ballet as one of the impressive parts of the production. But when the production materialized, there wasn't any ballet! And several scenes and several arias, Howe says, were missing. And the singers all saved their voices. And as for Mary Garden?

"I DON'T like to say mean things about people, but the incomparable Mary Garden is incomparable no more. She is old, very old, and has ceased to be suited for her part."

(Several Mary Garden admirers, after this bit of Howe's criticism had been reprinted in Chicago, rushed to the nearest telegraph office, and dispatched lengthy and impassioned telegrams to Amarillo.)

"She almost tottered about the stage. She is stiff and awkward and, while her figure is thin, the lines of her figure are those of an elderly woman. Mary Garden is not one of the great singers. Her voice is only fair. When she was young she was one of the greatest artists of all time. But with the passing of her youth, her 'Thais' becomes hopelessly flat.

"A lady over the telephone made the statement that the performance here was perfect. She described it as flawless. I would like to ask her if she has ever seen 'Thais' except in Amarillo? I have seen it four times, by the way. I would like to inquire of her as to what became of the second scene in the third act?

"It was left out. The climax of 'Thais' is in this scene and the management evidently considered us such hicks that they could omit it and we wouldn't know the difference. It was an insult to our intelligence.

"And where was the ballet? And how about the arias Mary Garden usually sings? At least two were left out in the bedroom scene. Her day has waned. Her voice lacked agility and resonance, especially in the higher registers. But her acting, especially in the earlier scenes when she was a courtesan, was pathetic.

"It has been given out that Mary Garden is 52 years of age. The information I have gathered—I used to attend her performances a quarter of a century ago—is that she is more than 60.

"In the arias she did attempt

THE WAGER

By

ISA URQUHART GLENN

KIRWIN, you'll find rain in hell as soon as you will a straight girl in a dance hall in Manila! Don't wax sentimental over a pretty blonde, out here, until you know the circumstances which landed the lady among the half-breeds. I'll wager that girl is as tough as they make 'em in even this off country."

This from young Angier.

"I'll take you! There's something in her face that one can tie to. Call her over, at the end of this dance, and let's settle it. Long wait ahead of us, anyway, until Mayhew shows up. He won't be in a hurry, with this deluge. Been roughing it sufficiently; he'll be taking it easy while he is in town." Kirwin's older and somewhat graver face was turned toward the dancing couples. He stared at them from underneath beetling brows, dispassionately appraising the girl whom they were discussing.

"Ever find out why Mayhew is in the islands?" asked Angier idly.

"Secretive cuss! Acts like a Secret Service bird—prowling around unlikely places, such as this joint in which he arranged to meet us tonight."

"Job brought him. That's straight enough. But I see what you mean. He does seem to be looking for something outside the job. Now, as to that bet"—

Seriously they arranged the terms of the wager. In the by-ways of the world, trifles are serious when big things are not happening.

"Two to one"—

It was young Angier who plunged the deepest. He was at the age when a man is sure that he knows the woman game.

"It will be the same old tale," he said. "Men! One man; then two men; then a few more—and the streets."

It rained—as if a gigantic bucket of water were being emptied from the clouds that lowered over the city.

The tin roof reverberated under the bombardment of the rain. The wind hit the building, which vibrated. A breath of damp, cool air blew into the crowded dance hall. The dancers paused, for an instant taken aback by the fury of the storm.

AT A table near the dancing floor sat the two officers who had made the bet. They waited for their white uniforms to dry out from the storm that had caught them unprepared. Amusement showed in their sunburnt faces as they watched the many odd variations of the great American dance. The dancers circled past their table, the mestizos throwing out their feet with waving motions inherited from the Spanish habanera, the full-blood natives flopping carelessly along in heelless chinelas which necessitated exaggerated glides, the Chinamen shuffling. Dancing with these assorted breeds were girls as unmistakably Caucasian as their partners were Oriental.

Angier grinned.

"Watch your pure and very blonde lady leering up at that greasy old chino! Young for it, too. Now you, Kirwin—you never believe wrong of a pretty woman, though you agree about the shortcomings of the ugly ones. But you are wrong, old top! Sin overtakes the fair, not the unlovely. Look at that girl's dress. Disreputable! What decent woman would show all of her naked shoulders and most of her back to this crowd? Do you suppose that the chino dancing with her thinks she is decent? Not on your life he doesn't! His decent women swathe themselves in stiff brocades and padded coats."

"So do his indecent ones. Stick to facts."

The music stopped. The dancers separated, going to the different tables.

Pink and shabby, tawdry skirts; very lovely hair in long and thick curls down her back and hanging in her eyes; face hard and sophisticated—the dancer of the wager!

Easy to induce her to sit down at their table; impossible to persuade her to take a drink from the flasks with which they were armed against contingencies. She insisted on soda water—and then more soda water.

"I want something sweet and cold," she told them. "God—how I've missed it! I hate places where there's not enough ice for ice cream."

She seized the glass of purplish mixture that was being placed before her and plunged the spoon, and after that her nose, into its enticing depths.

"Now, this is real joy!" she announced.

"Where you living?" Angier was already at the business of winning his bet.

The girl turned on him a cold and wary look that, as she studied his frank boyish face, softened into good fellowship.

"Over in the Tondo—a Ford-sized life in a Ford-sized room. I take my shower under an oil can, and that after I've gone out and fetched in the water that's in the can. And if the water runs out before the soap's off, I've got to hustle into my kimono and get some more to fill up the darned can—and then jump under it like the house was on fire, so's the water won't give out again. That's comfort for you! And me used to Broadway! I tell you—give me Broadway, with the human toads staring at you! Out here, there's nothing to stare at you except half-breed frogs. I'm not strong for half-breeds. That's the reason I came over here when you called me—because you fellows are white." She gave them another of her wary looks; prepared for their unbelief.

"What's your name, kid?"

"Miss Casey—to you!" replied the girl promptly, and with emphasis on the title.

"What's your name to the chinos?" asked the amused Angier.

The girl's face turned a dark and painful red. She glanced helplessly at the man whose manner toward her was marked by a difference.

Kirwin smiled kindly in response to her glance.

"THAT'S enough, Angier," he said, with some sternness in his voice. "Miss Casey, my friend is distinctly young and rather flippant; take him with a grain of salt."

"Sure!" responded Miss Casey. "Say—what did you two fellows call me over here for? I know it wasn't just to have a good time. You can't fool Mary. I know the difference in men. He's guying me, but he isn't tough."

Kirwin bowed, growing respect in his deep-set eyes.

"Miss Casey, we owe you an apology. We did an unpardonable thing; we made a bet on you. It isn't what men should do about a woman"—

There was no longer a trace of the ironic in Kirwin's deference. Something of old-fashioned ceremony crept into his manner and softened the girl. She smiled at him without rancor.

"Don't say a word," she said kindly, with the obvious intent of putting him at his ease. "You haven't hurt my feelings a bit. I know when to get mad; and I know when not to. I don't think either of you meant a thing. And it's a comfort to be sitting here with two men from home. Forget it!"

Angier withdrew his face from the tall glass. He put his hand on the roughened hand of the girl as it rested on the table beside her soda water.

"I'm sorry," he said. "And I want to ask you something quite aside from the bet. We're all Americans, as you said. Is there anything that we could do for you?"

Mary Casey put her other hand on top of his and pressed it. For a moment there was a mist over her blue eyes.

"YOU'RE a nice boy. Much obliged. But there isn't anything. I'm taking care of myself; and I can pay my rent, and pick up my meals one way or another. And not from men!" The guarded look was again in evidence as she said this. Then she laughed. "You see how mean I am, about suspecting men! But I have to be that way. There aren't too many you can trust."

To the jerky strains of Manila's latest jazz—a tune already, in America, a year old and buried—she leaned across the rickety table and looked from one to the other of the men.

It was a direct, level look.

"What was the bet?"

"Oh, I say! Miss Casey!" began Angier uncomfortably. "See here; I've already said I was sorry I'd made it."

Her lips parted in a hard smile. "Never occurred to you, did it, that women could stay straight easier if you men weren't so keen on saying we were crooked. Of course I can guess what the bet was! And I can very nearly guess which of you it was who bet for me. And—on account of one of you having taken a chance on me—I may tell you a thing or two before the evening is over. I'd somehow like a man who had the nerve to take a chance like that—on my side—to win his bet!"

She looked out over the floor. A stout and perspiring mestizo, with the unmistakable Chinese look, was approaching.

"I must dance with this bum. He's one of the 'influential patrons,' and the management would have a fit and bounce me if I turned him down. I'll be back after he's walked a mile on my feet."

The two men watched her as she steered the lumbering mestizo through the crowd. Neither of them spoke.

AT THE end of the dance she returned to the table and sat down as a matter of course. This was the Orient, and a long way from home and its standards of caste. And these Americans had been decent to her—kind to her.

"Know the game? Sure I know the game—and a darned good thing I do!" she continued, taking up the conversation where they had left it. "I've known it since I was a kid. I'm twenty-three now; and I've been thanking my stars all that time that I knew it. You put yourself through the China Coast, and you need to know the ropes of life. You think I'd want to be one of those sweet, innocent dunces that you men always like to believe we blondes are—and that we aren't so many times? I'd have fallen into the paws of a Chink—I would! Innocent sweetness can't come through the China Coast whole, and don't you forget it! I've walked straight, but it wasn't by being sweet and innocent that I did. It was by knowing every devilment that men can be up to."

The wind came up again and tore at the house, and around the house, with concentrated enmity. It played with the loose shell windows as the cat with the mouse.

Inspired by this lack of control in the elements, Kirwin became elemental in his questioning of the girl.

"Born and brought up in New York, on Eighth Avenue, you say? Then why out here?"

"What's a girl who's poor to do to feed herself? Not but what the men'll feed her—if she's a fool! A man goes and marries, and gets a girl baby. And does he have that girl baby taught a trade when she leaves grammar school, like he does his sons? He does, like hell! He throws her out—in front of men—to catch a husband! 'Tisn't fair to the girls. Look at me: I didn't know how to do a thing except dance. I'd learned how to do that on the sidewalks, to hurdy-gurdies."

Her voice became shriller, more filled with excitement.

"When I knew that if I didn't want to marry one of the poor simps I met—with his hair slicked down with grease till it looked like shiny black shoes—I'd have to scratch for my living, I got busy and hunted a job in a cheap dance hall in that part of town. My job was to dance with any dirty, smelly man who came in and hadn't brought a girl along. Not much of a trade, but it was a long sight better than the one my sister took up—on the streets! That was another trade you didn't have to be trained for!

"'Mary, be careful!' my mother kept telling me. 'A girl has got to be careful—because the men won't be careful of her.'

"By the time I'd learned the game of taking care of myself, I'd worked up to a sweller dance hall on Broadway. The fellows who came in there were clean, except in their minds. But I kept saying to myself: 'Mary, be careful!'

"AND then, one evening, in came a seedy-looking man who made you think he'd seen better times and a fatter living. Always shaved clean, and smelled of talcum powder. But his clothes were brushed until there wasn't a bit of nap left on them. I used to think when I was dancing with him and looking at his shoulder. He was an actor, out of a job, he told me. They tell you the story of their lives when they're dancing with you.

"Once he came in downright hungry. I shared with him that night the dinner the management gave me.

"I got in the habit of looking for him, and sharing my dinner with him. I respected myself a lot because I was giving him dinner instead of him feeding me. Silly, wasn't it?" She looked at Kirwin.

Kirwin nodded gravely. "I understand that perfectly," he said. "You would feel that way. So should I, in your place."

"Thanks!" said Mary Casey. "Well—you know—after you've fed a man when he's hungry, you get to sort of think you own him. You feel like you're his mother, you might say. I got to feeling that way about Teddy. I felt like he was mine. I don't suppose I thought about marrying; I knew he couldn't support me. But I never thought about anything that I'd be doing, way off in life, when we were older, without thinking about him being right there with me. You know what I mean? I just didn't think we'd ever be anywhere without the other one being there, too. Not that he said anything much, only—'I'm awful fond of you, kid!' But I didn't mind.

"I WAS fool happy, dancing afternoons with all sorts of men, and all the time thinking that pretty soon Teddy'd be coming in by the doorkeeper, and looking around for me—and then sit in the darkish restaurant eating part of my dinner—though it did used to leave me pretty hungry, for the dinner the management gave us wasn't much on size. Some of the girls used to kick about those dinners; you're awful hungry after you've been dragged around the floor for hours and hours by heavy-footed hicks. I was popular with the men who came there. It isn't that I'm pretty; I'm not. And so they look again to see what the deuce I am. And that get's a man's goat—when he can't make out what he likes about a girl.

"Anyhow, if I'd ever been pretty I'd have lost it by now. I've been so darned careful; and when a girl's careful, and suspects everybody, she gets hard and mean-looking."

"When you are talking this way, you don't look hard," interrupted Kirwin.

"That's because it's a comfort to sit here and say everything that comes into my head. Most times, when I'm across a table from a man, I have to think before I open my mouth: 'Will this give him a handle?' And so I just say: 'Oh! Isn't this a lovely floor?' And: 'My! But you are a dandy dancer!' When like as not he's stepped all over me."

"Men are brutes! They even step on the ladies' toes!" the laughing Angier remarked.

"They step on more than their toes," the girl countered. "They step on anything the girl gives them a chance to step on! At least, most of them do. I never saw but one who wouldn't. And I lost him—lost sight of him, I mean—on account of losing his card.

"It was this way:

"Times got worse. I got so I couldn't make out. They raised my rent on me. I couldn't go to live with my people. They bunked and washed and cooked in one room, with a window and the fire escape for their excitement; and I'd got used to better. I couldn't go back there—not with Teddy in my head. He'd have looked down on me, see?

"So Teddy says to me: 'Why don't you try South America? I've been told they pay high, down there, for American dancers. And board and lodging thrown in,' he says. And he says that he'll see if he can get me a chance, through a friend of his that's in town looking for girls to go down to Colon. This friend came in to talk to me about it. It's a swell chance to make big money, he says. The Panamanians are ready spenders, he says, and crazy over dancing. And Teddy kept trying to make me go.

"I WENT. The boat got in about 7 o'clock in the evening. The man they sent to meet me said that I was to hop into my dance clothes and hurry along with him to the hall. My trunk would go up afterward.

"Say, I'm telling you—I never did see a dance hall like that one! It was a scream! The guy hadn't told me that the Panamanians were all colors. Everything was sitting at the tables, from putty-colored dudes with diamonds in their embroidered shirts to jet-black niggers in fine clothes. Each man had poured a bottle of scent over himself. The smell of that perfume, and the smell of the different breeds of people, all hot and perspiring, was something fierce. It made me feel queer, all of a sudden.

"I sat down at one of the tables, and the fat, cream-colored woman who ran the place came over and gave me something to drink, to cool me off, she said. It made me cool, but odd feeling. I leaned my head on my hand, so's the floor would stop going around. And something—the heat, maybe—made me so sleepy I thought to myself I'd swap my job for a bed, if I could of found a bed. And then I realized that somebody was stroking my arm; long, pressing strokes like you give a cat's back. There wasn't much feeling in my arm, it was sorter dead; but I knew darned well that somebody was fooling with it. I opened my eyes wide. It was a coon who was fooling with my arm! A real coon, like we have at home—only that one spoke a lingo that I guess was Spanish. Any rate, I didn't understand a word he said. And I jumped away from him; I never had had a coon stroke my arm. I didn't like it a bit. So I says to him: 'You get away from me!' But he laughed so all his teeth showed; and he reached over and grabbed me. That waked me up sure enough; and I kicked and screamed. And the next thing I knew a white man had come across the room and lifted that coon by the scruff of his neck and thrown him in a corner. I've seen fights in my day—but say! I never saw a prettier one than that! The white man cleaned out the crowd!

"THE cream-colored woman rushed over and began jabbering at him; and the dudes with the diamond buttons stood close by and laughed and whispered to each other in their crazy talk, and pushed their shoulders up in the air until you couldn't see their big ears; but that American paid no attention to them. He treated them so like scum that I was proud to be standing by him.

"The American took me by the arm—not spoony; just sort of as if he was boss around those diggings—and walked me over to a table in a far corner, away from the jabbering dudes. We sat down. I was sorter nervous by that time. There was something I didn't get, if you know what I mean? So that man tells me:

"'This is no place for an Amer-

Sisters Paint the Same Portrait Simultaneously and Offer the Subject His Choice

The Curious Dual Career of Elena and Berta de Hellebranth.

By Alan MacDonald

WHAT mysterious element is it that makes us so different, one from another, even though we come of the same parents, are about the same age and call the same town and house our natal home? Heredity is the answer for many who see, for example, in one brother the shade of a common ancestor who would be a poet though he starved, and in another the shadow of a forebear who just couldn't help going into the stock market, making millions and playing the crafty miser ever afterward. Environment appeals strongly to others who see us all as little playthings of circumstances, moulded into varied character and type by our surroundings. And the mystics—they cite fatalism and predestination.

The sisters De Hellebranth, Hungarian artists and painters of celebrities the world over, now on their second visit to the United States, provide the most interesting subjects for study in this connection that could be imagined. Not that they themselves would fuss with science, or that they would submit, as the puckish Elena protested, "to be bugs under anyone's microscope!" No, the world is a big beauty to be played with and painted, and everything has a soul—even material things, they believe, have a spiritual essence that a good artist can discern and capture on canvas. It is the soul they strive to see as their illustrious subjects—such as the late Count Andrassy, Major-General Haskell, Governor Smith, Senator Wadsworth and Countess Szechenyi, who was Gladys Vanderbilt, to mention a few—sit for them. Perhaps this is what makes their work, some of which is now on public exhibition in the Brooklyn Museum and in Chicago, so distinctive and vital.

Even so, the facts remain: The two sisters were born in the De Hellebranth family a year apart in the ancestral homestead on the blue Danube, not far from the palace of the Archdukes. They started making pictures when the eldest, Berta, was four. They went to the same schools, visited the same masters and from the first painted always the same subjects, save on one or two occasions, as when Berta executed a portrait of Elena as Joan of Arc. They have been inseparable companions. They pursue the extraordinary course of simultaneously painting whomever sits for them, and of offering the sitter his choice between the two canvases.

AS you would expect, their early works were practically identical. But not so their later ones. Now, in their mid twenties, the two find their styles, treatment, technique and artistic ideals far apart. Berta puts the emphasis on perfect draftsmanship and paints in soft, subdued colors, never forgetting the grays; while Elena likes color and warmth. The observer is apt to find his eyes fascinated by the detail of Berta's portraits, getting closer to them by degrees, better to catch their full effect; while before Elena's he is likely to step back as he endeavors to get the complete ordered impression of the splashed colors.

Naturally, certainly, I can hear some testy critic protest: Of course they are different. They have developed their individualities as all true artists must! So—but that begs the question, and leaves the mystery. How came these individualities? Why is one thus and the other so? Why is Berta the managerial one, always carrying the purse, being sure about trains, making engagements with photographers and dealers, while Elena hasn't any head for money and time? Or that Berta, though she can be charmingly amusing, is characteristically grave and logical, and admits to a liking for politics; while her sister is naturally gay and laughter-loving, with a shrug for politics, save when they relate to the enemies of Hungary and to Bela Kun, communist dictator, who once signed a death warrant for her imprisoned father, a member of the old aristocracy.

Elena and Berta.

AMONG the Princes, Counts and Baronesses who posed for the young artists not so long before they came to America this time was a petite but very beautiful society woman. She was possessed of an exquisite figure and, since she was nearing thirty-five, she wanted it perpetuated on canvas. She would pose nude, but of course the face of another woman must be substituted for her own. The two girls set to work. They each painted on the same sized canvas, about 5 by 3 feet. Today the two pictures occupy a central position in the exhibit of the sisters and are hung face to face on opposite walls of the Brooklyn Museum. And though the subject and pose are the same, the two works present impressions as different as Berta is from Elena.

In Berta's, the society woman reposes, ankles crossed and hands behind her head, upon a white-draped couch, against a white curtain. The couch and curtain are painstakingly real, and the body is pale-fleshed, like snow in the distance. The blue eyes are open, calm, indolent, speculative. The effect is one of chill, unconcerned, unawakened beauty. Thoughtful, philosophic, interpretative work!

In Elena's, the effect is totally, strikingly different. The body is the only thing you note in it. The flesh is ruddier, warm toned, more voluptuous. The eyes are closed, and shadowed. The edge of the canvas cuts off the end of one foot, as though that were of no import. The couch and curtain are simply background, undeveloped. In other words, the single emphasis is on the warm, glowing, matured physical being. Challenging, direct, daring!

But the difference between the work of the two is even more strikingly shown by comparison of their two portraits of Count Julius Andrassy, former Premier of Hungary, who died recently. Berta's Andrassy is a full face, while Elena did a profile. Both are, I think, splendid, living representations of the noble Hungarian, showing a fine, humane, intellectual spirit. But the difference in the two is this: Stand close to Berta's, and though the portrait is there, so thinly is the paint applied that you can discern the canvas beneath. The effect is one of wonderful transparency and delicacy. On the contrary, close to Elena's you see that the paint has been literally piled upon the canvas. The surface, which a few feet away seems but a portrait, upon close inspection takes on the appearance of a little, choppy sea, full of waves and valleys. Sometimes, Elena will explain, one of these wave crests represents as many as twenty layers of paint.

WHY is it that these two sister artists had diverged so far? Could it be they deliberately tried to be different, because it would so be easier to market their wares? No, no, they assured me. Of course, they wanted to sell their wares. But from the very beginning their Hungarian masters told them to paint truth, only and always truth, as they saw it, and they had adhered honestly and conscientiously to that ideal. When they painted portraits, they strove to see and portray the soul, the truth of the sitter—and sometimes the soul one saw was different from the soul the other saw.

So they explained it to me. As to choice of technique, they did not know. Elena liked her way, and thought it was best; so did Berta! Why—who could tell? If anything, they had done their best to live alike, had grown so dependent one upon the other, so happy in each other's company and work, that it was surprising that they painted so differently.

Did they ever quarrel about the merits of their contrasting works? Why, no! Why should they quarrel? Each work had quality, and that was the test. It was like the souls of people; you could not change a good soul, no matter how you dressed it. Technique and composition, after all, were just clothes for souls and ideas.

Since they had lived all their lives in the same environment, been subjected to the same family life and difficulties and joys and never been troubled by love affairs—that is, serious ones—did they think that heredity, or fatalism, or predestination, or what, accounted for their different artistic ideals?

They had never thought much about it. But they did know it was wonderful to paint pictures of people, great, vital humans like Senator Borah, Cardinal Dougherty and Lord Rothmere, a great friend of Hungary. To bring souls out on canvas . . . And the ability to do these things was "a wonderful, personal gift from God."

THE WAGER

an girl! How'd you come here?'

"I told him all about the contract I'd signed to dance there. And I told him about Teddy, and everything else I could think of. He was a comfort in the midst of all those funny people. He didn't smell of perfume, and he had on plain white clothes, and they were clean around the collar and cuffs. Different, that's all. While I was talking, he sat there looking at me with his eyes half-shut, like he was sizing me up. And every now and then he'd nod his head. Once I heard him muttering something about: 'My first assay would be—pure gold!' And I got scared; I thought that he was crazy, too. But when he saw how I was getting as far away in my chair as I could, he laughed—first time he'd laughed. And I noticed that his nose stayed quiet while he was laughing, instead of working up and down like the dagos' noses did. And his eyes laughed; and the dagos' eyes don't laugh. What made me trust him.

"He told me that he was a mining engineer, down there on a job for a Denver crowd.

"'Miss Casey,' the engineer fellow said then, 'I'm not going to leave you here! Do you know what sort of a place you're in?'

"I told him all over again about the contract to dance. He frowned, and beat on the table with his forefinger. And when I stopped talking he told me what kind of place it was. I don't suppose I need to tell you?

"I NEVER would have got out of there whole except for that American. I tell you what, I burn candles in the church for that man!

"He explained it all to me; just what business Teddy's friend was up to, shipping girls down to the dance halls in South and Central America. But I didn't like to believe Teddy knew what that friend of his was wishing on me. The American thought he knew; and he called him an awful word. I felt mad—and sick—and I told him that he was lying about Teddy. But I didn't believe he was lying. And he was awful nice about it; said he didn't blame me for talking up for my friends! But say! What men are friends to girls like me? Never but one man was straight with me—that fellow in Panama!"

The blue eyes were not hard now; neither did they crinkle merrily. Mary Casey's soul looked out of them.

"That engineer fellow was the man I told you I could respect," she stated gravely. "You know what he did for me? He helped me get away from that place! He worked our way through the jabbering crowd until we were near the door; and then, when the music was blaring loud, he threw his coat over my dance dress and grabbed me with his left arm while he pushed off the men who ran in front of us with his right fist. He had a heavy fist—that fellow! I saw one man's nose start bleeding. And a few more were knocked over like ninepins. It only takes one white man to ball out a crowd of niggers and spinnachers.

"'Sorry for the rough-house, Miss Casey,' said the engineer fellow, 'but we have to make our get-away before these nigger police show up.'

"We made it! We ran along the crooked streets that I'd thought were so funny when I drove up from the boat; but they weren't quite as funny when we were running along them in the dark and I was catching my heels in the holes between the big paving blocks that didn't fit even against each other. One of the heels came off, and we didn't have time to go back and pick it up. I hobbled along as well as I could, holding on to the engineer fellow's nice hard arm.

"ALL the way down to the docks the engineer fellow was telling me, as well as he could for running and dodging from shadow to shadow of the squatty houses, and looking up and down each street that we had to cross, what I was to do when I got to New Orleans. But I didn't hear a word he said; I was so busy thinking how nice it was to have a man like that taking care of me—and how strong his arm was.

"He swung me aboard a ship just as the gangplank was drawn up. All he had time to do was to push a card into my hand.

"'Here's my address,' he said. 'Let me know how you are coming on, and where you are.' And then he said: 'Hasta la manana!' which I'd picked up in the dance hall, and knew meant that he was going to see me some time.

"The Captain was looking over the rail of the ship. The engineer fellow threw him a little package twisted up in a piece of paper that he tore from a notebook; and he said something to the Captain in Spanish.

"So there I was, on a banana ship—in my dance dress and one heel off my slippers, and the engineer fellow's coat over my shoulders! I must have struck that Captain dumb! But I didn't care. I was too busy staring at the engineer fellow back there on the dock.

"A puff of wind came up and blew the card that he had given me out of my hand and down into the water. I leaned way over the rail and saw it sucked under by the churning of the machinery. And then I remembered that I hadn't read it.

"That's the way I lost out. But I've always kept the coat. It reminds me that I once met a good man.

"WHEN I got to New Orleans with those bananas, I was still a long way from home. And I didn't have a cent of money; my purse was in the trunk that they'd been going to send up to the dance hall at Colon. I said to the Captain the day we made port:

"'I don't know how I am to pay you, unless you wait until I get a job in this town.'

"The Captain told me that the engineer fellow had paid my passage, and $50 over for me to get a start op—buy some clothes to wear when I was out looking for a job. That was a real man, that fellow! And as I didn't know his name, having been such a fool about not reading his card for looking at him, I couldn't hunt him up to pay it back. So I burn candles for him."

Silence—except for the noise of the jazz band and the shuffling feet.

Kirwin broke the silence. His voice was very kind as he spoke:

"You shouldn't have come out here. No girl should come out here so long as she can make a cent in the States." She replied:

"Dance halls in the States are supposed to be respectable. They'll keep girls on that they suspect a lot about; but they bounce her as soon as all the people outside the business know about her. See? Everybody who went to dance halls in New York knew I'd left on that contract; I'd been such a fool I'd told it all around, trusting Teddy and his friend as I did. That closed the doors of every place I tried to get an engagement. I've chased half-way round the world, now, trying to get to some place where they couldn't find out about it. San Anton—'Frisco—Honolulu—I've tried 'em all. And I've sloped out of all of 'em for the same reason.

"Listen; now I've told you all this—there's one more thing I want to tell you—I've walked straight, even out here. You believe me?" Her voice was tense.

Kirwin and Angier spoke at once: "Yes!"

"I wish I could see that engineer fellow again, and tell him that, too. He did a lot for me."

A Filipino walked up with a mincing gait. He thrust out a dance ticket. With a shrug of her thin shoulders Mary Casey went on the floor.

Angier turned a sober face to Kirwin.

"You win!" he said.

Kirwin twisted his wrist around until he could see the face of the watch strapped there.

"No use to wait for Mayhew. It's 2 o'clock."

FRESH air came in to them as they opened the door. Seeming a part of that fresh air was the tall and lean man whom they encountered on the narrow sidewalk. A man in white linen of unmilitary cut, on his close-cropped head a slouched Panama. As the three hailed a passing calesa and took refuge within its cramped depths from the downpour, the man took off his Panama and carefully drained the water from its brim.

"Hard time getting away from the dames at the hotel," he announced grimly. "Those women would chew over a bit of heaven itself until it was as pallid and unappetizing as an over-masticated piece of bacon! I fled for my life, finally. Healthier down in the bowels of the earth, surrounded by gold that doesn't belong to me, and that I am merely passing on for the chaps who are buying up Masbate."

"Does it never make you want some gold of your own, Mayhew?" inquired the curious Angier.

"Might if I hadn't been very busy with something else. I've been prospecting for human gold. Struck the vein once, and lost it through a fluke." He turned a rather shame-faced gaze on his friends. "What would you say if I told you that for years I'd been chasing a pipe-dream from pillar to post—always trying to catch up with it and see if I was right in my assay? Taking unlikely jobs which would carry me to unlikely places—never overlooking a dance hall this side of hell—with only one thing tangible enough to prove to me that it wasn't actually a dream—a broken slipper heel that I'd picked up in the street on my way back from—from the vision, you might say!"

"So it's a woman you've been sleuthing, you old son of a gun!" howled gleefully the unobservant Angier.

BUT Kirwin leaned forward and touched the cochero on the shoulder. "Mano!" he commanded. "And hurry that plug along!"

The calesa turned a corner on one of its two inadequate wheels. The three men were thrown against each other.

"What the devil, Kirwin," began Angier. "Oh, I see!" He whistled softly.

"Sila!" Kirwin directed the cochero.

The calesa veered around a curve on its other wheel.

"Poco mas!"

The calesa came to an abrupt halt in front of the dance hall that they had quitted a short time before. The men of the jazz band were coming out, their swathed instruments under their arms. The proprietor was fitting the key into the lock of the door.

Kirwin leaned from the calesa and looked anxiously up and down the narrow street. A solitary female figure, huddled under a dripping umbrella, was picking its way, with the delicate step of the dancer, between the pools of water that overflowed from the gutter onto the sidewalk.

Kirwin sprang from the calesa. He pulled the astonished Mayhew after him. With one hand on Mayhew's shoulder, he turned him in the direction of the huddled figure under the umbrella.

"Go fit that heel to Cinderella!" he laughed.

How Gene Howe Got Famous

did you notice her writhing? She invariably turned her back when she started into the high notes. When she succeeded in holding on, she then faced the audience but most times she failed miserably and tried to save herself with gestures. Maronzoni, the conductor, was embarrassed and confused and to one who knows music opera as I do the utter lack of co-ordination between the singer and the orchestra was painfully apparent.

"To be real frank about it, I think we were taken to a trimming. In Dallas, the best seats sold for $6. In Amarillo, they were $10. I'll wager that Dallas didn't have more than a $16,000 house at any one performance."

THE Amarillo house, as Howe pointed out, fell short of the guaranteed $16,000 by $1800. And each of 16 guarantors had to pay about $120. Gene Howe was one of the guarantors. The Mary Garden affair made a furore for days in Amarillo, and was much talked of in Chicago. The diva was interviewed on the incident and said, speaking of Howe, "That man is a pig. A swine. No, that is not right. He is a skunk."

Howe merely chuckled at this and wrote in his column: "We'll have the Chicago Grand Opera Company back next year. But we won't select Mary Garden and we'll have something lighter and merrier. And now I jump from opera to stoves. Is there someone who has a wood cook stove they don't need? If so, telephone 2-1607. The lady who lives there will send after it . . . it is for a family in terrible distress."

In his ordinary humors, Howe uses western idiom in conducting his column. He sacrifices grammar deliberately to the current Southwestern phrase. He writes a vast amount of broad stuff about "O. W." (Old Woman) and about Kernel Tack's eight children, his "synthetic family." Howe is married and has one child. But the family he writes of in his column was entirely mythical until, for advertising purposes, he hired eight children and a woman to appear with him, as "O. W. and the kids" at various country socials near Amarillo. On such occasions, Howe would chide "O. W." (whom he paid $5 per day) about her weight and she would retort with a slighting reference to his laziness and failure to "feed the hawgs." On these occasions Howe himself was enacting the role of "Kernel Tack," his alter ego. Howe's friends call him familiarly "Tack."

HOWE retells in his column the newest or the oldest jokes, in Southwestern idiom, as he hears them. In campaign time he devotes much space to politics and always takes one side or the other, heatedly. Howe proudly recalls that he was asked to run for Mayor after his column had made a successful fight for a municipal water plant. He declined, he said, because, in the event of his election, it would have put the newspaper in an embarrassing position, tying it to his administration. While Amarillo, a Democratic town, went overwhelmingly for Hoover last year, Howe supported Smith in his column.

Howe boasts that he will find a job for any man out of work in Amarillo, and if he fails, will give the man a $5 bill. He sends out hundreds of dollars' worth of flowers yearly to the poor and sick. He claimed, to this correspondent, to have spent $18,000 last year on various charities, all calculated, he said, to "advertise myself and my column." He will install radio earphones at the side of every hospital bed in Amarillo in the fall at a cost of approximately $1500.

Howe's humor is homely, reeking with farm-country wit. He calls it "coarse, but not crude, because it's deliberate."

"I've studied my subscribers," he says of his column. "I know what they'll read. I wrote editorials for years and found that only 15 per cent of subscribers read them. Ninety-eight per cent of subscribers read Tack's column. More than half the time, it's just burleque but when an important issue comes along I can editorialize, among the burlesques, and be sure the comments will be read."

CIRCULATION has trebled since Tack's column was introduced five years ago, Howe claims.

Howe has his hostile critics. They write him stinging letters which he delightedly prints. But most of Amarillo appears to approve of him. His more devoted readers speak of him as "Old Tack, the man who told Lindbergh where to get off" and "Old Tack, the man who let Mary Garden know Amarillo wasn't a hick town."

Who, one wonders, will be the next celebrity to call on Amarillo, and what will happen on the occasion of this visit? Twice the visit of a celebrity has made Gene Howe lose his temper, with far-reaching publicity as a result. It will be interesting, on the occasion of this next visit, to see whether Gene Howe has contracted a habit.

The West Indian Jungle Comes to Paris

maybe stop to permit the curious to enter. That is the last word in fame.

It is a weird and picturesque scene that greets the visitor to the Bal Negre. The Negro orchestra plays imported American jazz and the floor is crowded with 200 couples. Here, with arms wrapped about the necks or the middles of huge Negroes, may be seen white women from virtually every European country. A babel of strange languages is heard. There an Egyptian woman dances with an Annamite. Here are two or three Japanese with their French lady companions of the moment. Forward movement in this dance is impossible, so packed is the floor, but forward movement isn't necessary. There is no bouncer to shout, "Get off of that dime."

The Negro women give the real verve and color to this melange. With voluptuous, undulating, twisting forms, they achieve a certain dignity in their frank abandon. They dance with head thrown back and eyes ablaze. Some of them are beautiful in their contortions. They have something, a spirit, a joyousness, an unmoral warmth, that the white dancer lacks. Entirely without self-consciousness, they can give themselves up to ecstasy which the white man never can achieve. The furious physical abandon of their movements exercises a fascination that cannot be escaped.

Upon the floor there suddenly swings a tiny figure, a light-yellow-colored Martinique woman in native dress, a screaming medley of red and yellow stripes. An enormous Negro, over six feet tall, in a purple suit, chooses her for a partner. Her arms go around his middle. She fits in between his legs. He dances with his arms hanging free, loosely dangling, as if they were disjointed. To the wild rhythm of the screech, bellow and rattle of the orchestra, this pair do their stuff. For an entire minute the couple will remain in their tracks, only their bodies moving, hips revolving in a half-circular and left-to-right movement, furiously intense, an unrestrained relaxing which even in a Harlem dance hall would raise a horrified outcry from the master of ceremonies. But there are no censors here, no restrictions in this palace of passion, where jungle instincts rule.

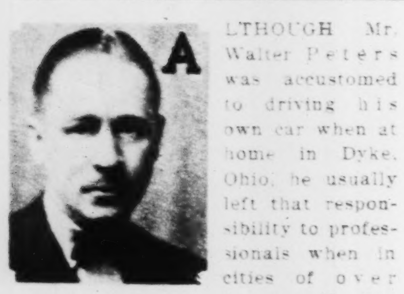
WEST-BOUND TRAFFIC

When the Red Light Got Into Mr. Peters' Eye.



Robert Benchley.

ALTHOUGH Mr. Walter Peters was accustomed to driving his own car when at home in Dyke, Ohio, he usually left that responsibility to professionals when in cities of over 500,000. He had lived in Dyke long enough, and knew enough of its inhabitants, to have a general idea of how they were going to jump in an emergency, but with 500,000 strangers to cope with the risk became too great. Out of 500,000 there was sure to be at least one who would dodge the wrong way.

Thus it was that he demurred strenuously when Mrs. Peters told him that he was expected to drive his nephew's car across New York City to the ferry slip.

His nephew was to meet them there and take them over to Jersey to visit some horrible cousin, and the whole thing struck Mr. Peters as a trip well worth not taking, to say nothing of driving a car through strange streets full of unaccountable people. But the plans had been made without his counsel, the nephew would be waiting, and there was nobody else to drive.

Being a naturally cautious driver, there was nothing that Mr. Peters had to fear from himself. He stopped when the lights were against him and did not start until everybody else in line was well under way. He took good care to look in both directions at each crossing and sounded his horn when nobody was near, just to be on the safe side. But he soon found out that such a mode of conduct was only half the game. He had 5,000,000 people working against him this time.

He remembered his terrifying experience with a taxi driver the week before while going through the streets on the East Side, where children were playing, and resolved to show somebody, perhaps the children, that all drivers were not homicidal maniacs.

Ahead stretched a street full of these pitiful children, tossing balls and knocking sticks of wood and screaming as if they were really enjoying the full heritage of childhood. He slowed down to the lowest possible speed and sounded his horn steadily. It seemed to have no effect on the children. Some stopped their game long enough to look at him. Others began their game anew when they saw him coming. Those with their backs to him perhaps turned at the sound of his horn and then faced away again, yelling to their mates to continue the game.

IT WAS only by bumping them gently with his fenders that Mr. Peters was able to make any headway at all. Most of his time was spent in bringing the car to a complete stop, a maneuver that called forth shouts of derision from the kiddies. Into the few open spaces that presented themselves in his path darted boys and girls who had evidently been crouching on the curb waiting for him to get near enough before flinging themselves in his way. They seemed utterly oblivious of the fact that there was an automobile within a mile of them, or that an automobile had any power to damage. Mr. Peters gradually realized that they were very unattractive children.

"Why don't they keep these kids out of the street?" he muttered, as he ground his gears and burned his brakes.

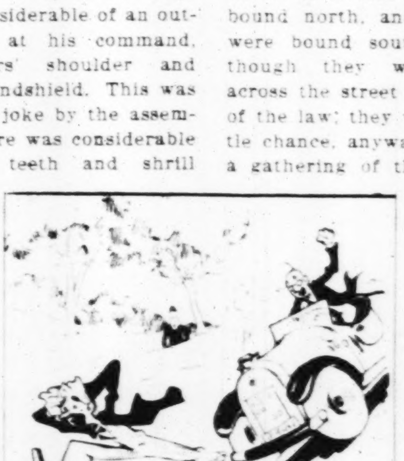
"They have no other place to play, Walter," said Mrs. Peters gently.

"No parks, I suppose; no playgrounds," snarled her husband. "Anyway, what are they doing playing at this hour? Why aren't they in school, where they belong? Or at work?" Mr. Peters' socialistic theories were weakening. These children were probably criminals in the making. They all had mean faces.

A baseball, thrown by a boy large enough to have considerable of an outcurve and speed at his command, grazed Mr. Peters' shoulder and crashed into his windshield. This was considered a great joke by the assembled devils and there was considerable whistling through teeth and shrill taunting. Mr. Peters forgot his early sentiments of pity for the poor tots forced to play in the city streets, and, muttering something about having them all thrown in jail at the earliest opportunity, threw his gears into high and finished the rest of the block with a roaring cut-out and a vicious disregard for the lives and limbs of the children of the poor. Oddly enough, the children of the poor managed very well for themselves, and nobody was hurt. But Mr. Peters was breathing heavily and in his eyes was a red look that Mrs. Peters hated to see.

Under the impetus of his new-born recklessness, they were soon at Fifth avenue. The lights were against them, and Mr. Peters conceded enough to law and order to stop. The traffic policeman blew his whistle and the westbound traffic, of which Mr. Peters was no inconsiderable part, was given the right of way.

Just as Mr. Peters started forward, however, several pedestrians who were bound north, and several more who were bound south, decided that although they were too late to get across the street under the protection of the law; they would take a gay little chance, anyway. This made quite a gathering of them in front of Mr. Peters' car, jostling his mudguards and shoving against his tires. He blew his horn, which resulted in a slight acceleration in the opposing traffic, but no diminution in its numbers. Pedestrians were now swarming across the hood of his machine and gathering in little groups to talk directly in his pathway. There was no noticeable difference in the pedestrian north-and-south-bound traffic, lights or no lights.



He never knew there could be so much fun in driving in the city.

"Come on, there—come on, there!" ordered the traffic policeman to Mr. Peters. "What are ye dreamin' about?"

This was a little more than Mr. Peters could bear. He stepped on the gas and bounced ahead, grazing several pedestrians, who jumped too late and who snarled at him as if it were he who was violating the regulations. This accorded him a savage satisfaction.

AT SIXTH it was evidently clear sailing and there was a good chance Mr. Peters would make the other side before the whistle blew. But from nowhere stepped a man who had other plans for Mr. Peters. He carried a cane and wore a jaunty air, evidently emboldened by some secret permit from the police to disregard traffic signals altogether. He raised his hand imperiously at Mr. Peters, to indicate that he was about to walk in front of his car and that Mr. Peters would do well to have a care. In perceiving that Mr. Peters was not to be intimidated, he increased his pace to a step and a hop, sending forth an infuriated challenge to Mr. Peters to "Watch where he was going."

"You watch where I am going," returned Mr. Peters under his breath. "It may interest you."

And with that he swung the wheel around so that, even with the gentleman's hop-skip-and-jumping, the car was bearing directly down on him. He started to run, but Mr. Peters followed him. The gentleman dropped his stick and frankly gave himself over to being chased. Up onto the sidewalk and toward Central Park he ran. Up onto the sidewalk and toward Central Park drove Mr. Peters. Citizens scattered to right and left; policemen blew their whistles, but the chase continued. Across Fifty-ninth street and into the park gate it went, the gentleman still leading, but obviously disturbed. Mrs. Peters had fainted.

By this time Mr. Peters had got his nephew's racer into full swing and the course was taking a turn toward the lake. Over the rocks and grassy slopes of the park it went, the cut-out roaring in a terrifying manner, the gentleman showing signs of weakening and Mr. Peters yipping like a cowboy at a rodeo. He never knew that he could steer so expertly. He never knew that there could be so much fun driving in the city. And, in all his previous killings, he had never known the blood-lust so magnificently before.

It was but the work of a moment to reach the lake and the work of less than a moment to drive the gentleman into it in a nose dive. Perhaps he drowned. Mr. Peters hoped so. But he never really found out, for, with the same demoniacal skill that had brought him over hill and dale, curb and hydrant, to the lake, he swerved sharply to the left and swung back onto the roadway, where, by giving the machine all there was to be given and doubling in his tracks to a shady, wisteria-covered nook, he was able to get Mrs. Peters out and into the bushes before the motor-cycle police roared up and confiscated the car.

"Anyway," sighed Mr. Peters, as he lay stretched out on the soft grass looking up at the wisteria, "we didn't have to go to Jersey to visit Alice."

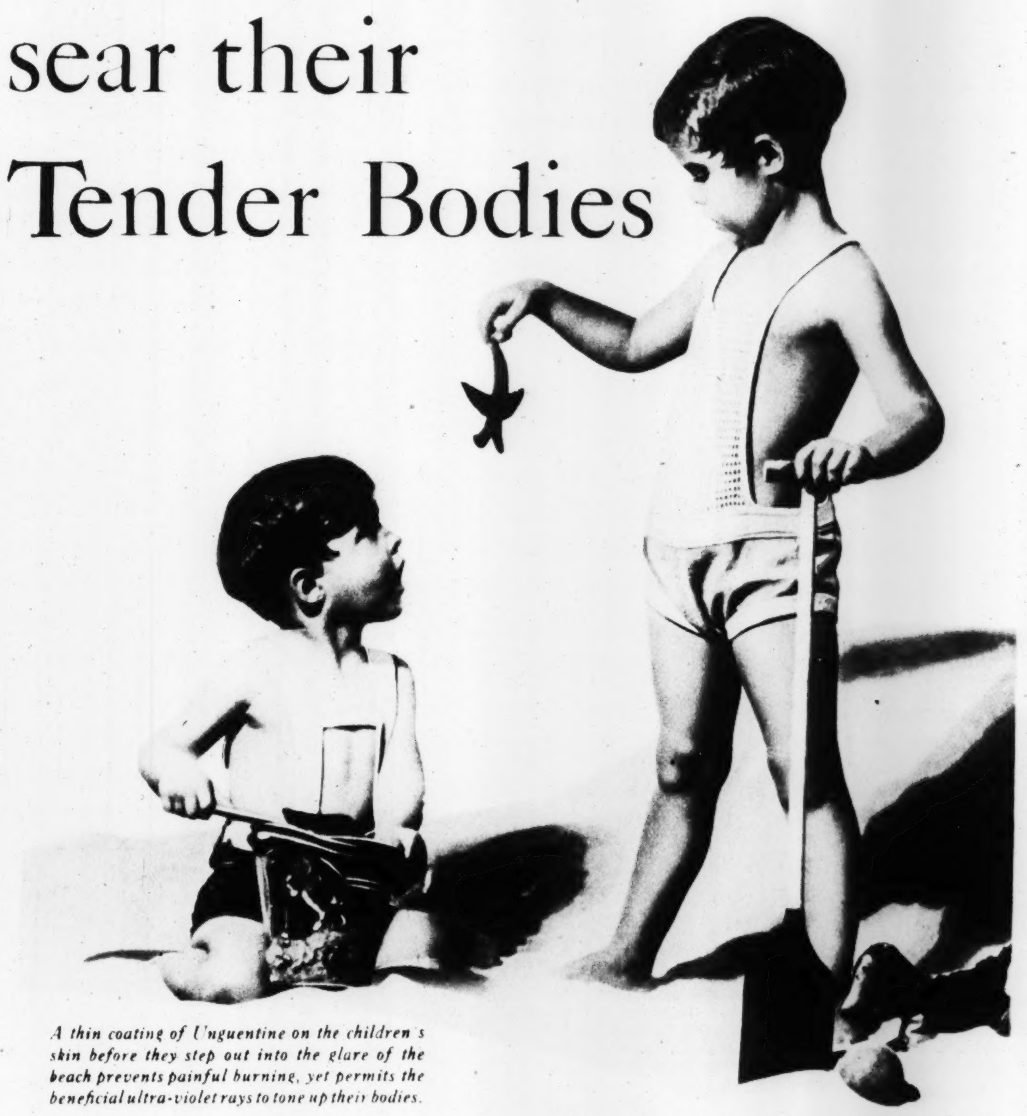
Tender Bodies



A thin coating of Unguentine on the children's skin before they step out into the glare of the beach prevents painful burning, yet permits the beneficial ultra-violet rays to tone up their bodies.

WHAT treasures they discover on the beach! Pink starfish, wonderful polished pebbles, glistening white sand for building castles!

Keep your youngsters out in the sun this summer. Sunlight is the best medicine. All doctors nowadays will tell you it helps make strong, healthy bodies.

But don't neglect the warning which your doctor will also give you against excessive sunburn. Sunburn carries exactly the same dangers as other burns. Sunburn kills the living cells on the surface of the skin, sets poisons free to go through your system, causes fever, weakness, extreme nervousness.

And it is all so needless. Unguentine, the famous antiseptic surgical dressing used in 8 out of 10 hospitals will safeguard your children and you. Use plenty of it at the first sign of redness. Its soothing oils go down deep into the tissues and remain there promoting rapid, normal healing

Get a tube of Unguentine today, and have it ready. Take it to the beach and on your vacation. Always keep a tube in your automobile. At your druggist's, 50¢. The Norwich Pharmacal Co., Norwich, N. Y.

Sunburn is a serious matter and requires a medical remedy. Don't rely on ineffective lotions—or other cosmetics with no healing power. The antiseptic oils in Unguentine go deep into the tissues and promote rapid healing.

Avoid this Offense

Let this FREE TEST show if you may be troubled with

BODY ODOR

WE who work need ever to be on our guard. More than social position our livelihood itself is at stake.

So be sure that you do not give offense to those about you.

A famous chemist has found the secret of complete protection against body odors. A pure, delightful, toilette powder which you simply dust over the skin, wherever perspiration gathers. Just rub it freely into the armpits, on the feet and body. It is called SPIC.

It Ends All Body Odors

SPIC does not stop perspiration. You must perspire to maintain health and life, but SPIC absorbs moisture and changes the acids which cause offending odors to harmless dewy moisture. Results are instant and each application gives protection for an average of 14 hours.

Nothing else can give this protection. SPIC is patented. So you must forget soaps and lotions if you seek to guard against this annoyance.

Learn If You Offend

There is a simple test now available that will unfailingly tell by the evidence of your own eyes, whether your perspiration is acid. This test will be sent you FREE if you will send the coupon below.

BROWN & WILLIAMSON TOBACCO CORPORATION

If Raleigh Cigarettes were cut in razor-thin slices, each slice one puff thick, every single "puff-slice" would contain an even, perfect blend of

31 GRADES

of three famous tobaccos
Virginia, Turkish and Kentucky (Burley)

Twenty Cents
PLAIN OR TIPPED

Blended "puff-by-puff"

THESE 31 choice LEAVES are blended by a wholly new process. Their combined flavor is unbelievably bland. And every puff is identical with every other puff.

THE OLD WAY: Cigarette tobaccos are mixed together pretty well in a large hopper before they are fed into the cigarette. Result — too often a "hot spot," a "flare" or a "sting." Mixed, but not truly blended.

THE RALEIGH WAY: The 31 choice tobaccos—special grades of Kentucky (Burley), of Turkish and of rare Virginias—are actually laid lengthwise to give you an absolutely uniform mellow blend in every single puff.

Mercolized Wax
Keeps Skin Young

Remove all blemishes and discolorations by regularly using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce, and use as directed. Fine, almost invisible particles of aged skin peel off, until all defects, such as pimples, liver spots, tan, freckles and large pores have disappeared. Skin is beautifully clear, soft and velvety, and face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines, use this face lotion: 1 ounce powdered saxolite and 1 half pint witch hazel. At Drug Stores.

HELP YOU MOVE A BOOKCASE? WELL.......
IT'LL TAKE BUT A MOMENT. I PROMISED THE LITTLE WOMAN TO MOVE IT A WEEK AGO...... MERELY DOWN INTO THE BASEMENT. IT'S A VERY LIGHT BOOKCASE.
MY WORD. IT'S HEAVY!
WELL ALL RIGHT. I'LL MAKE IT EASY ON YOU. WHEN WE GET TO THE HEAD OF THE STAIRS REMIND ME TO LET YOU GO DOWN FIRST.
BY JINGOES. I FORGOT THE KEY TO THE—EASY, EASY HORACE, DON'T THROW ALL YOUR WEIGHT ON THAT FRONT END!
MY WORD HORACE, EASY! IF YOU WANT TO REST DON'T LEAN ON THAT END. WE'LL SET IT DOWN AND—LOOKOUT! WATCH YOUR STEP GEORGE OR THAT DOOR WILL—WHOOIE!
TOUGH! I FORGOT TO FASTEN THAT DOOR.
WHOO!
SET IT DOWN WHILE I GO UP AND GET A PIECE OF PAPER TO PUT IN THAT DOOR. I'LL BE RIGHT BACK.
SET IT DOWN.
HE'S SURE TAKING HIS TIME ...... LEAVING ME HERE HOLDING THIS BOOKCASE. MY WORD IT'S STARTED TO SLIP. OH HORACE!
MY WORD! IT'S SLIPPING WORSE. I WONDER IF I COULD POSSIBLY JUMP TO ONE SIDE AND...... OH HORACE!
HEY!
HORACE! OH HORACE!
WHOOIE! WHAT A SCARE. JUST A FALSE ALARM. THAT STEPS HOLDS IT FROM SLIPPING ANY FARTHER. WELL LIVE AND—
HEY!
LET ME THINK WHAT DID I FORGET? FIDDLESTICKS! SOMETHING ABOUT A PIECE OF PAPER. PAPER? PAPER? LET ME THINK?
YOU WISH TO SEE MR. WADDY.
YES, PERSONALLY! OUTSIDE HERE IN THE HALL.

ISN'T THIS EXCITING THO'?
YOU'LL THINK IT IS WHEN MR. BASS GRABS THE HOOK
I THOUGHT I FELT A TUG ON MY LINE
YOU WON'T HAVE TO GUESS AT IT WHEN OLD JOHNNY BASS TAKES HOLD -
THERE! I KNOW I'VE GOT SOMETHING ON IT - MERCY!
YOU BET YOUR SWEET LIFE YOU'VE GOT SOMETHING - HERE REEL IN - KEEP YOUR LINE TIGHT
STOP THAT YELLING IN MY EAR - !
KEEP A TIGHT LINE - DON'T LOSE HIM - HE'S A DANDY - KEEP REELING -
ARE YOU CRAZY OR WHAT? YOU'RE PUSHING ME OUT OF THE BOAT!
COME ON JOHNNY BASS YOU'VE MET YOUR MASTER - KEEP THAT LINE TIGHT - DON'T LET HIM UNDER THE BOAT HE'LL BREAK THE LINE - WHY HE GOT AWAY DIDN'T HE?
WHY DIDN'T YOU DO AS I TOLD YOU AND WE'D A HAD HIM -
I TOLD YOU TO KEEP A TIGHT LINE - AND NOT LET HIM UNDER THE BOAT
I DON'T THINK I HAD ANYTHING TO DO WITH IT -
MY STARS! YOU ACTED LIKE A MANIAC!
ONE WOULD THINK THAT WAS THE ONLY FISH IN THE LAKE
I NEVER SAW ANYBODY TAKE SUCH A LITTLE THING SO TO HEART -
YOU'LL GET OVER IT IN A DAY OR TWO - FORGET IT - I KNOW IT WAS TOO BAD - BUT IT CAN'T BE HELPED
IF YOU HAD ONLY FOLLOWED MY INSTRUCTIONS VI, WE'D WOULDN'T HAVE COME HOME EMPTY HANDED YOU DON'T TAKE IT SERIOUSLY
FOLLOWED YOUR INSTRUCTIONS! HA HA THAT'S GOOD!! WHAT CHANCE DID ANY BODY HAVE WITH YOU GRABBING THE ROD AND NEARLY TIPPING US OVER YOU WERE A SCREAM!
AND SO - FAR INTO THE NIGHT...

HOWDY, ONE AN' ALL!
JEST GET ACTIVE AND CLEAR THEM CACTUS PLANTS AWAY WHILE I THINK UP SOME OTHER PLEASURES FER YUH!
I THOUGHT THIS WAS A CAMPING-TRIP INSTEAD OF A CHAIN-GANG!
OUT OF MY WAY, LIZARD! YOU'RE ON THE DESERT NOW!
OUCH! YOU'RE GOING TO HAVE A LITTLE GREY TOMB IN THE WEST IF THAT HAPPENS AGAIN!
NOW PUT THEM THAR SHELTERS UP PROPER! THIS IS WHERE YOU'RE TO REESIDE!
I THOUGHT "THE LAST FRONTIER" WAS A BOOK, BUT I GUESS IT'S A RANCH IN ARIZONA!
LISTEN, TENDERFOOT, GET YOUR HEAD OUT OF THE WAY!
THAT DIDN'T HURT HIM A BIT! WE COULD USE HIS HEAD FOR A HAMMER WHEN WE DRIVE THE STAKES!
DON'T LET 'EM RILE YUH, LAD! WE GOT A COUPLA BAD MEN IN THE OUTFIT, I SEE, BUT OUT HERE WE KNOW HOW TO HANDLE 'EM!
I'LL FIX THEM WHEN THE WORK IS DONE! THEY'RE THE SCHOOL BULLIES!
US COWMEN KNOWS THAT THE WORST-ABUSED CRITTURS FIGHTS HARDEST! AND THE MAN THAT SUFFERS THE MOST FROM OUTLAWS ENFORCES THE LAWS BEST WHEN HE'S SHERIFF
I'M PLEASED TO INTERJOOCE THE NEW SHERIFF OF THIS HERE NOW DUDE CAMP, AND I AIM TO BE HIS BESTEST DEPPITY! WHAT HE SAYS GOES, AND THE CORRAL BACK YONDER MAKES A COLD JAIL NIGHTS AND A HOT ONE DAYTIMES!
WELL, IF THAT GUY IS A SHERIFF, I'M A WILD AND WOOLLY TWO-GUN BADMAN! THERE AIN'T NO CATTLE TO RUSTLE, BUT THERE'S A BIG BOX OF CANDY IN BLACKIE'S TENT THAT HIS SISTER, ELLA CINDERS, GAVE HIM!
CANDY IS BETTER THAN CATTLE! LET'S GET IT!
SWEETS TO THE SWEET! TO THE VICTOR BELONG THE GUM-DROPS!
I HOPE BLACKIE TRIES TO CHEW ONE OF THESE STONES!
YOU'RE UNDER ARREST!
I'M WITH YOU, PARD, FIRST—LAST—AND ALLUS!
BLACKIE GETS A HORSE AND WE HAVE TO WORK LIKE HORSES TO TAKE CARE OF THESE PONIES. THERE AIN'T NO JUSTICE!
NOW, BLACKIE, A SHERIFF HAS TO HAVE FAST TRANSPORTATION, AND THIS IS THE BEST MOUNT ON THE RANCH!
I'LL MAKE A PAL OF HIM!

BEING YOUR BEST FRIEND I AM AT YOUR SERVICE, MUTT!
I'M GONNA SIT BY HIM IN THE PARK AND IN HALF AN HOUR I WANT YOU TO COME THERE AND HAND OUT A LOT OF APPLE-SAUCE ABOUT MY CARS, YACHT AND STOCKS AND BONDS! I WANT HIM TO THINK I'M VERY RICH! GET THE IDEA?
I SURE DO, KID!
LAY IT ON THICK!
LEAVE IT TO ME, OLD DEAR!
THIS IDEA MAY GET ME A PARTNERSHIP IN OLD MONEYBAGS' FIRM IN WALL STREET!
THERE HE IS!
GOOD MORNING, MISTER MONEYBAGS!
HOW ARE YOU, STRANGER?
I'M O.K.! NEVER BETTER! IT'S NICE AND RESTFUL HERE COMPARED TO WALL STREET! AHEM!
OH! ARE YOU INTERESTED IN WALL STREET?
AM I? I'VE CLEANED UP TEN MILLION IN THE PAST YEAR! I'M SO MODEST AND I DETEST NEWSPAPER PUBLICITY! MUTT IS MY NAME!
MISTER MUTT, I COULD USE A MAN LIKE YOU FOR A PARTNER!!
GOOD MORNING, BOSS!
FINE! PARDON ME, BUT HERE COMES MY SECRETARY!
SURE!
BOSS, THREE OF YOUR CHAUFFEURS ARE ILL, AND THE FOURTH ONE PHONED THAT HE IS GETTING MARRIED TODAY!
HOW ANNOYING! ANY OTHER PHONE CALLS?
YES! YOUR BROKER PHONED THAT HE SOLD YOUR OIL STOCK AT A PROFIT OF TWO MILLION DOLLARS, SIR!
O.K.! THAT WILL BUY ME A NEW YACHT! ANY OTHER PHONE CALLS, MY MAN?

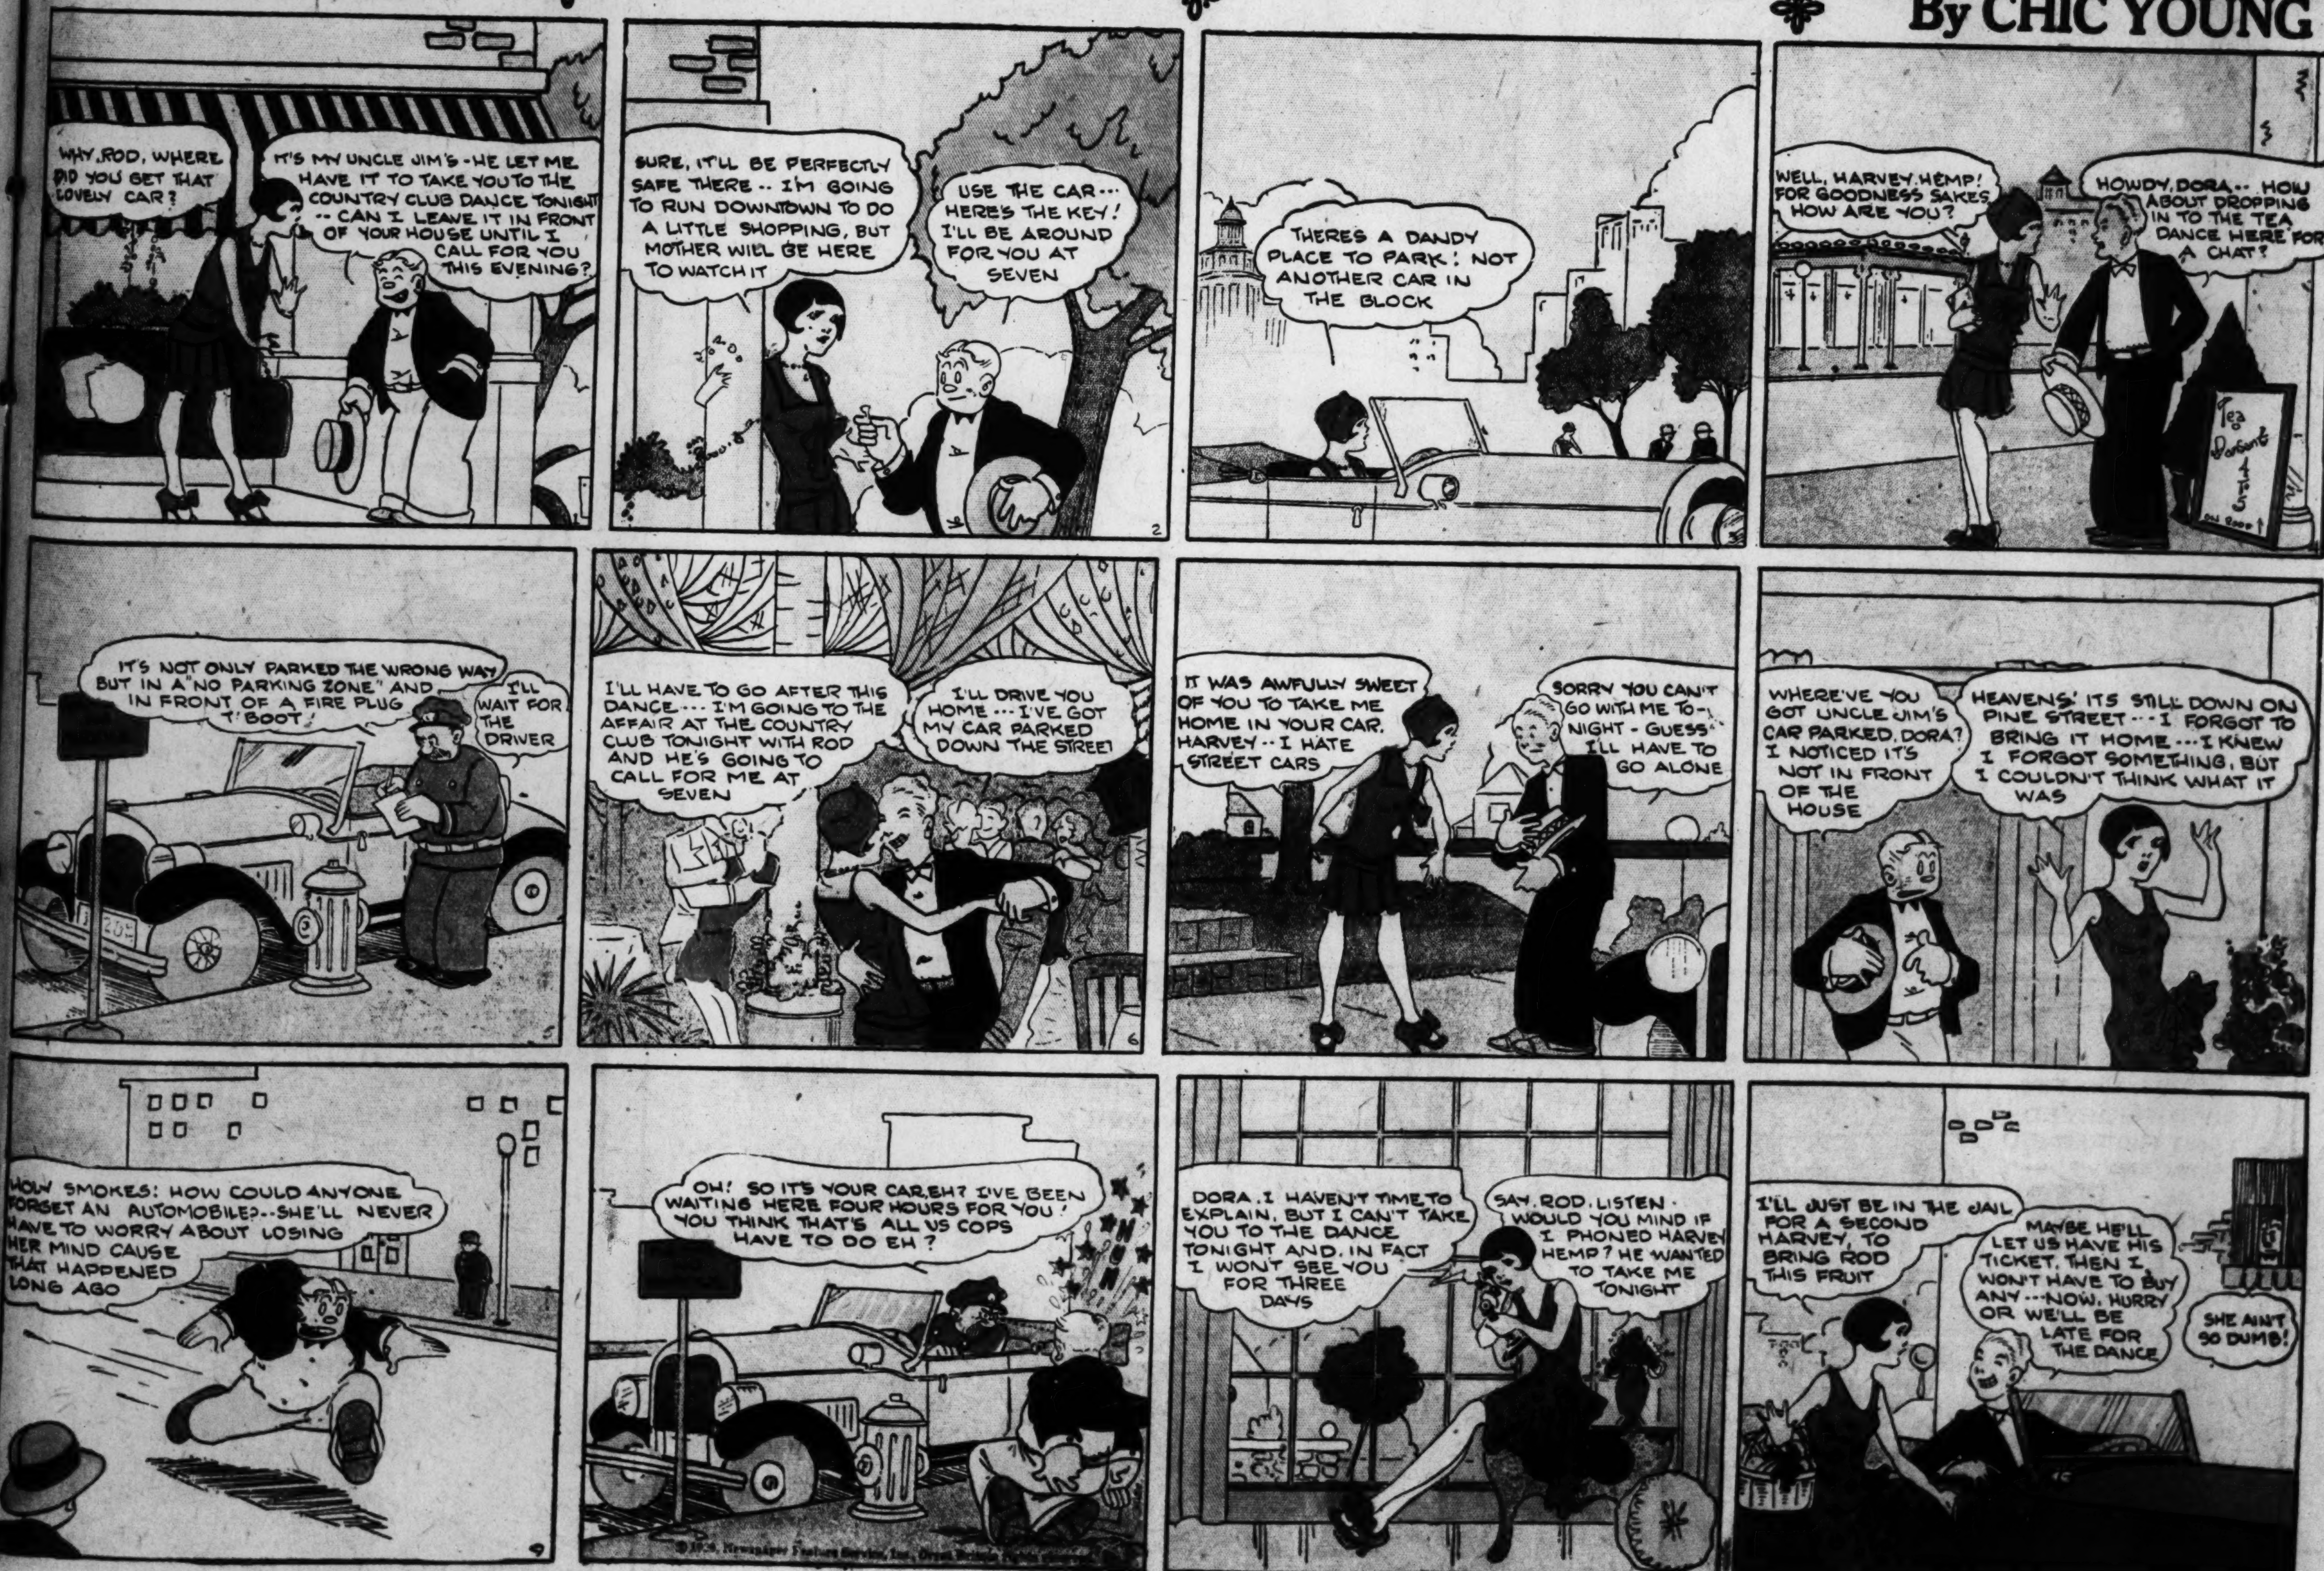
DUMB DORA ✦ ✦ ✦ By CHIC YOUNG



WHY, ROD, WHERE DID YOU GET THAT LOVELY CAR?
IT'S MY UNCLE JIM'S - HE LET ME HAVE IT TO TAKE YOU TO THE COUNTRY CLUB DANCE TONIGHT -- CAN I LEAVE IT IN FRONT OF YOUR HOUSE UNTIL I CALL FOR YOU THIS EVENING?
SURE, IT'LL BE PERFECTLY SAFE THERE -- I'M GOING TO RUN DOWNTOWN TO DO A LITTLE SHOPPING, BUT MOTHER WILL BE HERE TO WATCH IT
USE THE CAR --- HERE'S THE KEY! I'LL BE AROUND FOR YOU AT SEVEN
THERE'S A DANDY PLACE TO PARK! NOT ANOTHER CAR IN THE BLOCK
WELL, HARVEY HEMP! FOR GOODNESS SAKES HOW ARE YOU?
HOWDY, DORA -- HOW ABOUT DROPPING IN TO THE TEA DANCE HERE FOR A CHAT?
Tea Dansant
IT'S NOT ONLY PARKED THE WRONG WAY BUT IN A "NO PARKING ZONE" AND IN FRONT OF A FIRE PLUG T' BOOT!
I'LL WAIT FOR THE DRIVER
I'LL HAVE TO GO AFTER THIS DANCE --- I'M GOING TO THE AFFAIR AT THE COUNTRY CLUB TONIGHT WITH ROD AND HE'S GOING TO CALL FOR ME AT SEVEN
I'LL DRIVE YOU HOME --- I'VE GOT MY CAR PARKED DOWN THE STREET
IT WAS AWFULLY SWEET OF YOU TO TAKE ME HOME IN YOUR CAR, HARVEY -- I HATE STREET CARS
SORRY YOU CAN'T GO WITH ME TO-NIGHT - GUESS I'LL HAVE TO GO ALONE
WHERE'VE YOU GOT UNCLE JIM'S CAR PARKED, DORA? I NOTICED IT'S NOT IN FRONT OF THE HOUSE
HEAVENS! ITS STILL DOWN ON PINE STREET --- I FORGOT TO BRING IT HOME --- I KNEW I FORGOT SOMETHING, BUT I COULDN'T THINK WHAT IT WAS HOLY SMOKES! HOW COULD ANYONE FORGET AN AUTOMOBILE? -- SHE'LL NEVER HAVE TO WORRY ABOUT LOSING HER MIND CAUSE THAT HAPPENED LONG AGO
OH! SO ITS YOUR CAR, EH? I'VE BEEN WAITING HERE FOUR HOURS FOR YOU! YOU THINK THAT'S ALL US COPS HAVE TO DO EH?
DORA, I HAVEN'T TIME TO EXPLAIN, BUT I CAN'T TAKE YOU TO THE DANCE TONIGHT AND, IN FACT I WON'T SEE YOU FOR THREE DAYS
SAY, ROD, LISTEN - WOULD YOU MIND IF I PHONED HARVEY HEMP? HE WANTED TO TAKE ME TONIGHT
I'LL JUST BE IN THE JAIL FOR A SECOND HARVEY, TO BRING ROD THIS FRUIT
MAYBE HE'LL LET US HAVE HIS TICKET, THEN I WON'T HAVE TO BUY ANY --- NOW, HURRY OR WE'LL BE LATE FOR THE DANCE
SHE AIN'T SO DUMB!
